Church service to honor military

The Crittenden County Ministerial Association is asking anyone who has relatives currently serving in the military to send a picture of those soldiers, sailors or airmen to Life in Christ Church for a special patriotic service being held later this month.

The public service honoring active military with Crittenden County ties will be June 27 at Rocket Arena.

Pictures can be mailed to the church at P.O. Box 296, Marion, Ky. 42064 or e-mailed to lic@kynet.biz. Photos will be returned after the service.

Officers stepping into new commands

Two career military locals taking charge of respective Army posts this month

STAFF REPORT

Two career military men from Crittenden County will be receiving command of posts this month, both recently having returned from tours in Iraq.

Lt. Col. William L. "Billy" McDaniel will assume command of the Kentucky Army National Guard training facility in Greenville, Ky., this weekend; and one week later, Lt. Col. John R. Watson will take over leadership of a historic artillery unit at Fort Sill, Okla.

McDaniel, promoted to lieutenant colonel while serving in Iraq earlier this year, is a 25-year veteran of the National Guard. He takes over at the Wendell H. Ford Regional Training Center from Lt. Col. Stephen R. Hogan. The change of command ceremony will be 9 a.m., Saturday at the Greenville center.

The 42-year-old soldier resides in Marion with his wife and children. He has been serving at the facility as training site manager under Hogan, and will continue in that role in addition to commanding the day-to-day operations of entire site.

"The only difference is, I answer to myself now," McDaniel joked, adding he still has to answer to Guard brass.

He learned of his promotion to commander in February while in the midst of a year-long deployment in the Middle East. He left from Iraq, May 5 of this year.

In its 38-year history, the Ford Training Center has served as home to training for all Kentucky Army National Guard units, as well as some regular units from all branches of the military and homeland defense. It has been hailed as the premier mechanized infantry and armor maneuver training area east of the Mississippi River.

"We train the Guard, soldiers from Fort Knox and Fort Campbell and even the state police," McDaniel explained.

Aside from his recent stint in Iraq, McDaniel has been active duty for a four-month special assignment in Washington, D.C.

He said the biggest change in the National Guard since entering service in 1982 is its professionalism and increased capabilities.

"The National Guard (today) is by far the most professional National Guard there has been."

Meantime, Watson, an Army officer since receiving his commission from Murray State University 18 years ago, will be formally receiving com-

Don't forget dad this weekend

Celebrated around the world, the American incarnation of Father's Day began in 1908 in West Virginia, but can be traced back to 1839. Though President Calvin Coolidge first recommended the day be celebrated on the calendar in 1924, it was another 42 years before President Lyndon Johnson made a national holiday to be celebrated on the third Sunday in June. However, it was not officially recognized until 1972 under President Richard Nixon.

Happy Fathers Day, this Sunday, to all dads.

Summer official next Thursday

The daylight hours will start getting shorter next week when the summer solstice arrives at 1:06 p.m., next Thursday.

But, just because the days will be getting shorter, don't put away the lemonade just yet. There will be at least two more months of sweltering, humid days as autumn draw nearer.

HogRock Rally rolls into town

The annual HogRock River Rally in Cave in Rock, Ill., will begin today (Thursday), when gates open at 8 a.m. Entry for the four-day weekend event is $30 per person. For more information, visit www.hogrock.com.

Taking the plunge: Youth Bible camps start

Summer fun tied to religion

STAFF REPORT

Summer is officially only a week away, but fun has already begun around the county at a variety of Christian-oriented camps and churches.

The 119th Hurricane Camp Meeting is under way this week at Tolu, bringing about 35 young campers together for a week of fun from sunup to sundown, including nightly meals at 5:30 and evangelism at 7, both of which are open to the public. In fact, on Sunday, a special Father's Day meal of fried chicken will be served to anyone wanting to visit the camp.

Already, several churches have hosted or are currently hosting vacation Bible schools. The longtime tradition gives children of all ages an opportunity to fellowship and enjoy summer fun under Bible-based teaching and leadership.

Last Friday at Unity General Baptist Church in Crayne, children from 22 months to 16 years enjoyed a water slide purchased by the church to cap a week of Bible school teachings. Bible school director Jennifer Gibson said about 35 attended the church's annual weeklong school.

Gibson, who grew up in the church, was working alongside her mom and dad, Orville and Sheila Truitt, to ensure the youth were having a good time with water fun on a hot summer day. Gibson had two children of her own at Bible school, which, in fact, carried the water-theme of "Take the Plunge".

"The purpose is to have fun while learning about Jesus," Gibson said.

Pastor Buddy Hix said the kids were doing just that.

"We've been blessed this week," he said. "They have been so good."

Before Friday evening's commencement, Hix said at least three children had come forward to accept Jesus as their savior.

The fun goes on for weeks, as there are several more Bible schools scheduled at area churches in the near future. (See our Religion page on 6A for a listing.)

church or feel comfortable with denominational teachings, a hidden treasure lies just to the west of Marion at Western Kentucky Youth Camp.

The sprawling grounds host seven non-denominational camps for youth of all ages this summer. In fact, it has hosted camps for about four decades.

"It's a Bible-based camp with Bible lessons twice a day," said full-time caretaker Lori Howton.

Howton said the camp, funded by Churches of Christ, plays host to youth from all over, with many coming from surrounding areas in western Kentucky.

"We have a lot coming from different states," she said, preparing for the first

Area code selected for region

STAFF REPORT

Some new numbers on your phone keypad will start getting a workout next year.

The Kentucky Public Service commission on Wednesday received notification of the new area code selected for far western Kentucky. The number 364 was chosen by the North American Numbering Plan Administrator, which allocates numbers to telecommunications providers.

The new area code will replace 270 from Henderson County south to Christian County and everything west of that area beginning April 1 of next year. A six-month transition period beginning at that time will not make the new 364 area code mandatory until Oct. 1, 2008.

The new area code will utilize three numbers never before used in western Kentucky. The area code prior to the current 270 was 502.

The PSC decided on the area code change May 31.

Peoples to offer Wednesday afternoon banking

New board, more changes come to local institution

STAFF REPORT

The winds of change are starting to whip up just a little on the corner of Main and Carlisle streets in downtown Marion.

New principal owners of The Peoples Bank say that Crittenden Countians can expect some noticeable modifications in the everyday business at one of Marion's three banks. Terry Bunnell, new president of the bank, said customers will see the same familiar faces at the cashier windows and in loan departments, but some of the services and products will be different.

The bank's mantra is to embrace the past, but move forward into new innovative markets and offer more services and accessibility, said Bunnell, a Glasgow, Ky., native who will maintain residences there and here while serving as the CEO and chairman of the bank's retooled board of directors.

Some things folks can expect in the near future are Internet banking, new operating hours that will include staying open until 3 p.m., on Wednesday afternoons, secondary market mortgage loans, a home equity line of credit, free personal checking and a drive-up ATM.

The bank has redesigned its logo, too.

While that might seem like a whole lot of revising, Bunnell said it's really not.

"You won't see most of the changes," he said. "Staffing will stay the same and the name will stay the same, but we are offering some new products and services."

Although the frontline troops will not change, behind the scenes there will be plenty of new faces. The board of directors will retain only one from the previous board. Jerrell James of Marion will remain on the board. Otherwise there has been a complete facelift. Of the other new members, Donnie Phillips, manager of the local Kenergy office, is the only local person. Others are Bill Morgan, a retired

Forgotten Passages

Just about Crittenden folks

One fine autumn morning, nearly 60 years ago (about 1876), a young woman, still in her teens, auburn haired and fair, gathered together books, a slate, tablets and pencils, which were few and far between in those days, and, dressed in her daintiest frock, tripped, light-hearted and gay, hopeful and ambitious, down a shady country lane in the southern part of Crittenden County to open her first school.

The fine young woman, who not only knew how to teach school well, but how to make friends and get along well with both patrons and pupils, closed her first school year with the praises of the community still sounding in her ears.

The next year came and the next and then another and on, and this young woman continued to teach school, always giving her best in service to those communities in which she taught and teaching always, in addition to the Three Rs, reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic, those qualities which make of school children the finest types of citizens, common honesty, sobriety, truthfulness and an appreciation of the good and wholesome and worthwhile things of life.

For 46 successive years, this girl, grown into mature womanhood now taught in Crittenden County schools. Then she decided to leave the teaching of Crittenden County's young Americans to younger pedagogues and for a few years she watched the process of education in this part of Kentucky from the sidelines.

Then she found that the old urge to teach was too much for her to resist so she went back to the work which she knew and loved best.

Four more years she taught. Then she came to realize that she tired too easily, the days were oh so long, and that her eyes that only yesterday, it seemed, were aglow with the joy and sparkle of youth, were growing dim and her vision was no longer dependable. Then this woman of high ideals and noble character removed the clapper from her little school bell, closed her school record book for all time.

Looking back over the school records of Crittenden County for more than half a century, we find this Crittenden County teacher taught that first year, nearly 60 years ago at Owen. Later she taught 13 years at White Hall, two at Chapel Hill, two at Brown, two at Fairview and one or more years at Lily Dale, Crayne, Lone Star and possibly at other places.

This woman is now 76. She always votes. If things are not run, politically, in the county, state and nation as they should be run she has the satisfaction of knowing that she did what she could to remedy them. She exercises her right of suffrage whenever the opportunity to vote presents itself.

Is she worn out?

No!
In the local option election held in Crittenden County two weeks ago she had no way to come to town to register her vote against the sale of intoxicating liquors in her home county so she walked into town, a distance of some four or five miles, and voted.

Her parents were Henry and Sarah Clement. She makes her home now with her sister, Mrs. Susan Bigham, near Crayne.

A few days ago this Crittenden County woman who almost 60 years ago opened her first school at Owen in this county became the first person in Crittenden County to be awarded an Old Age Pension.

All of Crittenden County will join in extending to this woman felicitations and good wishes and will unreservedly give their approval to the pension authorities of the county and state who saw fit to award this benefit to this most excellent woman.

Her name?
Possibly we did neglect to mention that it is Miss Jennie Clement.

Miss Jennie Clement lived to be 82. She died at her home in the Chapel Hill community Aug. 16, 1939 and was buried in the Chapel Hill Cemetery. For the past several years advanced age had prevented activities in school and school affairs around which her entire life was centered.

One of the oldest school teachers in western Kentucky, "Miss Jennie" was known, loved and respected throughout the county. For many years she was an instructor in the public school system and numbered among her pupils many of the successful men of today.

Remembering the days of the one-room school.

In the one-room schoolhouse days we all walked to school. There were no big yellow buses to ride in those days, but long walks over dusty lanes, perhaps over a few fences and through a few fields if you knew who owned the field.

There were things to see along the way; a groundhog getting ready for winter; a big fox squirrel running along

White Hall School during 1924-25 was located about four miles west of Crayne, on the right, near the intersection of Reiter Road and Mexico Road. Pictured are (front from left) Ralph Holoman, Val Kirk, Norman Wheeler, Houston Kirk, Wendell Tabor, teacher Miss Jenny Clement, Lucille Belmer, Thelma Boyd, Birdie McCree, Kathy McCree, (second row) Lowell Kirk, Lonnie Belmer, Theo Childress, James Allen Boyd, (back) Chippie Bigham, Roy Holloman, W.C. the top rail of a rick-rack fence. Gold and red leaves made a magic carpet and wild grapes hung invitingly near the path. Goldenrod starred the roadside, to be taken to the teacher if the loiterer was late.

The one-room schoolhouses were where farmers took their families on crisp autumn evenings and bid in loud voices on fancy pies or decorated cakes. Heat was furnished by a big stove and lighted by kerosene lamps. And when the hour grew late, the fire was put out and they all went home through the frost-filled night.

On such excursions, little folks rode in the back of wagons on a bed of loose hay, listening to the voices of the night, got acquainted with the stars and watched the moon shine down on fields shorn of harvest.

These schoolhouses are all gone today. The schoolyards are just part of cornfields, lespedeza pastures or someone's manicured lawn. They are now unnoticed by the bus driver as he stops beside a mailbox to discharge another student and heads over the next ridge to another bend.

Hopefully our love of history will keep these people and the memory of these one-room school house days alive for years to come.

I would like to thank Floyd "Rip" Wheeler for sharing his picture of the Old Hickey Distillery with us from last week's tavern article.

Wife charged; husband sought

Police have arrested Shawna Beth Sigler, 37, formerly of Dick Jones Road in rural Crittenden County, on warrants charging her with two counts of first-degree wanton endangerment and three counts of first-degree possession of a controlled substance by complicity.

Sigler and her husband, David Allen Sigler, 57, were indicted last week by a Crittenden Grand Jury.

David Allen Sigler was indicted on the same charges as his wife, plus second-offense possession of drug paraphernalia by complicity. He remains at large.

The case goes back to 2004 when the Siglers allegedly left at home alone their teenage daughters who had access to drugs.

The couple had been living out of state since the original warrants were issued. Shawna Beth Sigler was picked up in Michigan recently and brought back to Kentucky by state police.

The family of Maxie W. Hansen of Salem would like to thank all of the employees and associates of Crittenden Health Systems, and Burkhardt Rural Health Clinic, for the care they provided during his long illness. We would especially like to thank Stephen Burkhardt MD, and Joseph Drawdy ARNP, for many times going above and beyond the call of duty. Thank you all, not only for the care given during the hospital stay, but a special thanks for the continued thoughtfulness of your visits to the funeral, cards, phone calls, and prayers. We would like to thank everyone who has called, visited, sent cards and brought food. Those kind gestures will not be forgotten. We would especially like to thank all of the members of Lola Pentecostal Church for cancelling your regular services on May 27th and allowing us to have full use of the church for visitation and the funeral. Thank you to Bro. Tim Jouts for a fitting message, and to Boyd Funeral Directors for their thoughtfulness throughout the day of the service. Thank you to those church members and friends who prepared the wonderful meal at the church after the burial.

Thanks again, Juanita, Ray and Todd Hansen

Local players earn spots on rosters

McMican, Wood, Porter, McDonald on diamonds for summer-league teams

BY CHRIS HARDESTY
 PRESS SPORTS WRITER

Four local baseball players coming off of this year's 20-13 high school season have made various American Legion and all-star teams where they will continue honing their skills this summer.

Jacob McMican, who batted .420 this past season with eight home runs and 33 RBI, has made the American Legion Post 68 senior team at Eddyville for the second straight year.

McMican is currently the starting catcher for the senior Legion team.

With the team off to a 2-0 start, the senior has simply carried his hot streak over into summer ball. He is batting .500 with two doubles and a single in wins over Metropolis, Ill.

A lack of depth is a serious problem for the club as the team currently has just 11 players on the roster.

McMican, who went 5-4 on the mound with two saves for Crittenden this spring, did make a relief appearance in the nightcap of a 15-12 slugfest victory over Metropolis last week.

However, he is currently the only catcher on the roster and is unsure of how much mound work he will see this summer.

Eddyville will play teams like Madisonville, Paducah, Bowling Green and Fulton four times apiece during the summer season, plus others from around the area.

"It is really a tough schedule for a young ballclub," said McMican, who had a streak of reaching base safely in 12 consecutive plate appearances for Crittenden last season.

Sophomore Alex Wood is the youngest player on an 18-and under all-star team called the Southern Illinois Bullets, which is based out of Marion, Ill.

Wood, who completed the Rocket season with an impressive 7-2 record and 3.20 ERA, tried out for the team on the advice of Reidland native Kent Wallace. Wallace, who was a high school teammate of former Rocket assistant coach Jamie Brown, also pitched in the New York Yankee farm system for a few seasons.

The team, which competes in several tournaments in the 50-game schedule, is already off to a 4-0 mark with wins over Illini Mudogs, Kentucky Bearcats, SEMO Cherokees and an all-star team from Missouri.

Wood worked an inning of relief last Sunday, fanning two while not surrendering a hit.

"Its a big honor being on the 18-and-under team," he said.

He hit three home runs for Crittenden last spring, but said a designated hitter would probably bat for him this summer.

Wood is already pretty certain that he will choose to play for the Bullets throughout his high school days.

The team splits playing its home games between John A. Logan College in Carterville, Ill., and SIU in Carbondale, Ill.

Although the season has only just begun, the sophomore has already started to enjoy his new surroundings for the summer.

"Just meeting all the new guys and playing with this level of talent has been my favorite thing thus far," he said.

Rocket juniors Cody McDonald and Alex Porter have each made the Post 31 Junior Legion squad at Paducah.

While manning center field for the Rockets last spring, Porter proved to be the team's best outfielder, making several great catches during the 20-win season. He hopes to win a starting role in center field at Paducah this summer.

McDonald, who played third base for Crittenden, hit .377 and proved to be one of the Rockets' best relievers as the season progressed. He recorded five saves.

He should see an abundance of playing time for Paducah throughout the season.
