STAFF REPORT
There will be two new faces on the Marion City Council starting in January. However, neither of the newly elected members are unfamiliar around city hall. Four of the five current council members seeking re-election retained their seats on the six-member, non-partisan board. Back will be Jim Brown (the top vote-getter Tuesday), Dwight Sherer, Jason Hatfield and Darrin Tabor.

Janet Pierce, a bank teller, won election to the board, but she had served two terms a few years ago. Pierce had chosen not to run in 2004, but was re-elected this time as the No. 2 vote-getter. Donnie Arflack, a technology specialist at the hospital, is the only true newcomer elected to the city council. However, Arflack is no stranger to local politics. He serves as chief of the Crittenden County Rescue Squad and has often attended public meetings and testified on behalf of emergency response programs for many years.

"It's going to be different on the other side," said Arflack, who often attends city council meetings requesting aid or services for the rescue squad or fire departments. "I guess this will put things in a different perspective for me." Arflack said he looks forward to working with the council and Mayor Mickey Alexander, who won a new four-year term Tuesday. Council members have to run for office every two years. "Like the mayor has said, I think a new fire station is a top priority," Arflack said. "We need to upgrade the fire department equipment and equipment for police and streets department. The last time I was over at the city garage, they only had one snow plow." Arflack said his plain spoken approach must have been attractive to voters. "Most people know me and know I will say what I think. I think some of these zoning restrictions are a little too stringent and that's something a lot of people talked to me about during the campaign." Campaigning is where second-term councilman Brown led the way. Brown went door-to-door in the city asking for votes, and he admits it paid off as he led balloting for the council with 653 votes. "I got out and met people," Brown said. "That was the best possible thing I could do. I went house to house and if
