Relay for Life goal set at $40,000

By EMORY WILLIAMSON

June 10, 1994, is a day that Frances Teer will never forget. On that day, Teer, a resident of Crayne, was diagnosed with breast cancer.

"That's a day that kind of sticks in your mind," she said. "It was quite outstanding in my mind, but it was just an ordinary day for everyone else." Fast forward 14 years and Crittenden Countians look to celebrate Teer, and other area cancer patients and survivors, with the annual American Cancer Society Relay for Life, a campaign intended to raise awareness and money for cancer research.

Ten teams and 16 sponsors will participate in this year's Relay, which is scheduled to begin Friday at 5 p.m., and continue through the night until 5 a.m., Saturday at Marion-Crittenden County Park.

"Cancer never sleeps, and that's why we stay up all night," said Sue Padget, co-chair for the event.

Teer, who has participated in the Relay in the past, said she appreciates the support.

Her ordeals and battle with the disease helped both her and Tom get through the roughest periods.

Crittenden Grand Jury indicts 8

A Crittenden County Grand Jury has indicted eight individuals on a variety of charges.

Grand juries do not determine guilt or innocence. They simply determine whether enough evidence exists to continue prosecution of a case. The jury met on June 2. It indicted the following:

■ Christopher Freeman on misdemeanor charges of failure to wear a seat belt, having a controlled substance prescription not in its original container and second-degree possession of a controlled substance.

The Freeman case was remanded to Crittenden District Court. The others were sent to Crittenden Circuit Court.

■ Billy Wayne Holland, 49, of Old Salem Road was indicted on eight felony counts of possession of mateby a minor. The charges stem from a police investigation that began on Feb. 23 and included the confiscation of several items at Holland's home, including CDs, DVDs, computers and other media. Police reports say that Holland had photographs of a minor female portraying a sexual act. Marion Police Department is heading up the investigation with assistance from the Kentucky State Police.

■ Robert A. Morgan, 40, of Blueridge Drive in Henderson was indicted on a single count of flagrant non-support for being behind by the amount of $21,815.10 on child support payments.

■ Krystal L. Powell, 22, of Nunn Switch Road was indicted on felony charges of possession of drug paraphernalia, possession of marijuana rial portraying a sexual performance and first-degree possession of a controlled substance (methamphetamine). Police records indicate that State Trooper Darron Holliman went to Powell's home Jan. 31 searching for a man for whom he had a search warrant. The man was not there, but the trooper smelled marijuana and was given consent to search the home. There, police reports say, the police officer found a bong, glass pipes, rolling papers, a light bulb fashioned into a smoking device, marijuana and meth.

■ Josh Sisco, 25, of West Central Avenue was indicted on two felony counts of second-degree assault for allegedly stabbing Jackie Jones and Josh Jones with a knife during an altercation on April 20.

■ Ryan Brandon Springs, 21, of West Main Street in Salem was indicted on felony charges of thirdoffense DUI, third-offense driving on a DUI-suspended license and failure to illuminate head lamps. According to court documents, Springs pulled out of the Five Star Convenience Center parking lot in a vehicle at about 1 a.m., on April 10 without headlights turned on. Marion policeman Bobby West stopped the car and charged the suspect with the above infractions.

■ James A. Sutton, 22, of Claylick Creek Road, was indicted on a charge of receiving stolen property valued at more than $300. Court records indicate that Sutton is suspected of selling a piece of farm equipment on May 20 to a salvage yard in southern Illinois. The equipment, a fertilizer wagon, had allegedly been stolen from a farm near Tolu.

■ David Blake Tabor, 18, of East Central Avenue was indicted on several felony charges stemming from a late-night police chase that involved various city policemen and county deputies on Feb. 7. Tabor was indicted on four counts of firstdegree fleeing or evading police; second-degree fleeing or evading police; third-degree criminal mischief, improper start from a parked position; DUI; two counts of first-degree wanton endangerment; two counts of reckless driving; resisting arrest; and possession of a radio that sends and receives police messages. Police records say Tabor led officers on a chase for several hours and that he twice swerved at police cruisers, ran through Larry Orr's yard on Ky. 120 and ran several red lights and stop

■ A charge of theft by unlawful taking was dismissed against Thomas Tackwell.

Louisville native adusting to small-town life as Press intern

Continuing a long tradition of providing community newspaper experience to college journalism majors, The Crittenden Press is again hosting a summer intern.

Emory Williamson, a Louisville native and editor-in-chief of the University of Louisville's campus newspaper, joined The Press last week for a 10-week internship.

Williamson has already begun contributing to the weekly

While in Marion, Williamson is eager to immerse himself in the community, meeting as many people as possible and experiencing life in a small town, which is unfamiliar to him. There were 415 students in his graduating class of 2005 at Eastern High School in Louisville, or about as many seniors as the total student body at Crittenden County High School. He is also working in a county with about as many residents as live within a few blocks of his college residence near historic Churchill

"I want to be like a sponge and absorb as much as possible," he said of his time in Marion. "I would like to get to know and understand the community better."

He hopes to take a different perspective back to Louisville and share it with his co-workers at The Cardinal, the university paper. Williamson has already begun visiting churches and volunteering in the press box at Marion Bobcat games.

"It can only help out my staff more," he said of the 30 or so under his supervision at the campus newspaper. "It's a good thing for me, and it's a good thing for my staff as

> became interested in journalism when he started taking news writing classes in high school. "Once I got involved, I couldn't stop," he said.

He hopes to continue his career in journalism if he does not pursue a career in law. His father has his own practice in Louisville.

"He would love for me to take over," the junior Williamson said.

His parents, Jim and Sondra Williamson, live in Louisville. He has an older brother and sister, both of whom also live in Louisville.

Though Williamson has traveled around much of Kentucky, prior to his initial trip to Marion in April for an interview, he had visited only Hopkinsville and Owensboro in the western portion of the state.

After less than two weeks in Marion, his initial impression has been a good one.

"It's very peaceful, but a lot different from what I'm used to," he added.

The 21-year-old is spending the summer with Scott and Melissa Tabor of Marion, a situation he couldn't fine more accommodating.

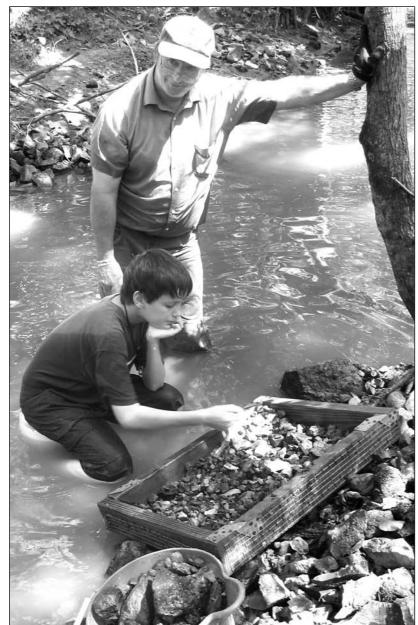

"It's absolutely a perfect fit," he said. "They are a great host family. Among his new experiences in Crittenden County, Williamson drove on his first gravel road; having never seen a mobile home park, he learned the difference between a single-wide and a double-wide mobile home; and he had someone else pump his gas for the first time.

"I thought that was so weird," he said with a chuckle.

Apprenticeships like Williamson's are offered to college students in cooperation with the Kentucky Press Association (KPA), of which The Press is a member. Each year, KPA gathers the resumes of interested college students and awards member newspapers interns agreed upon after conducting interviews.

Williamson agreed to accept the paid internship in Marion two months ago. He will remain with The Press through early August before returning to campus to resume his editorial duties at The Cardinal.

Later that night, two of the stolen ATVs turned up on the same property. Agent said the property owner is not a suspect. He thinks the thieves were stashing the stolen goods at the remote location and planning to return later to recover their loot.

The sheriff said that many of the thefts reported in the county are directly related to the price of scrap metal, which is about $200 a ton for most items. Agent said many of the items being stolen are actually not scrap. In some cases, the thieves have been damaging the equipment before presenting it at the scrap vard.

"Some of it's perfectly good stuff," the sheriff said, pointing to a Ford tractor recently recovered at an area scrap yard. That tractor had been beaten with a club and its tires slashed to make it appear ready for

Growing pains

If the Western Kentucky Youth Camp were a child, it might be complaining about growing pains every night.

According to Joseph Williams, a camp counselor and board member at WKYC, attendance at the camp has grown by about 10 percent each year for the past 10 years, causing the need for a new dining hall, recreational facilities, shelters and additional cabins.

But the growth has been worth it, said Williams, who has been a counselor at the camp for 15 years. "It was designed from the beginning to give kids for the summer a good, clean environment," he said. "It's a place where they could come to enjoy the great outdoors and learn about the Bible.'

Although funded by the Church of Christ since its inception in 1963, Williams said WKYC doesn't try to push its religious affiliations onto its campers.

"We just want the kids to go home with good memories and friendships that can last a lifetime," he said. "And, hopefully, they can learn some things that can help them in their life as Christians.

Jehovah's Witnesses hold convention this weekend

HogRock biker rally this weekend

The annual HogRock River Rally starts this today (Thursday) in Cave in Rock, Ill., with gates opening at 8 a.m., for visitors to the fourday gathering of motorcycle enthusiasts.

Though a few more motorcycles may be heard rumbling through the county en route to and from the Ohio River ferry, Marion Police Chief Ray O'Neal doesn't anticipate any problems out of the ordinary this weekend.

"It's usually calm around here," he said of the rally weekend. "We haven't had any problems in the last few years.

However, O'Neal said enforcement will be stepped up a bit over the next few days in order to address the influx of people into the city.

HogRock is located on a 115-acre farm on the Ohio River in Hardin County. It was started in 1997 and has grown to host thousands of motorcyclists and other rallygoers each year. Because of its adult theme - nudity and alcohol - visitors to the rally must be 18 to enter.

Governor's Scholar students named

Corey Dodds, the son of Randall and Debbie Dodds of Smithland, and Kenzie Henson, the daughter of Brian and Sheri Henson of Grand Rivers, have been selected to represent Livingston County in the Kentucky Governor's Scholar program this summer.

Henson will be attending Bellarmine College Louisville for five weeks, while Dodds will live on the campus of Morehead University. They will be living on the campus and experiencing life much like college students.

"I know both of these students will represent Livingston Central well," commented guidance counselor Scot Gray. "They will have many challenging opportunities while dealing with a demanding and rigorous curriculum."

The Governor's Scholar program originated in 1983 in an effort to provide residential life experiences for students before their senior year. The goal of the program is to enhance Kentucky's next generation of civic and economic leaders, while making them aware of what college life will be like. The students are selected based on test scores, teacher recommendation and extra-curricular County Clerk Carolyn Byford said candidates have until Aug.12 to file for school board or Marion City Council. Voters have until Oct. 6 to register for the Nov. 4 elec-

Also on the ballot will be contested races for President of the United States, U.S. Senate and Congress.

Correction

A story in last week's Press said that, according to police reports, 300 Percocet tablets were stolen from New Haven Assisted Living in Marion. A representative from the assisted living facility said the drug taken was not Percocet. Instead, the drug taken was Lortan, not Percocet.

By next week, magistrates should know how much federal aid will be coming to Crittenden County to help pay the damages from April flooding.

Judge-Executive Brown has spent the last couple of weeks escorting a representative of the Federal Management Emergency Agency, or FEMA, around the county, reviewing damage and the efforts made to repair what Mother Nature destroyed.

"We've looked at all 350 miles of county roads," Brown said on Friday.

Brown shared with the fiscal court during a special meeting that the initial damage estimate of $250,000 from the April storms will probably be eclipsed. However, federal disaster declaration in late May included Crittenden County and could help relieve the burden. Federal funds will pay 75 percent of the approved cost for debris removal, emergency services related to the disaster, and repairing or replacing damaged public facilities such as roads, buildings and utilities. The county could be responsible for as little as 12 percent of total costs if state aid is also

"There's still a lot of information to be input (before approval)," Brown said. In Friday's special meeting, the fiscal court also approved the following items:

■ A resolution that would allow the county to apply for a grant to implement a reverse-911 system. The system automatically calls residents in the case of an emergency, warning of impending danger and what action should be taken.

■ A resolution that would accept General Assembly appropriations from coal severance funds for fiscal years 2009 and 2010. Those include $440,000 for debt reduction related to Crittenden County Detention Center; $20,000 for the Ben E. Clement Mineral Museum; $30,000 for Dam 50 tourism improvements; and $10,000 for a memorial park on the riverfront in Dycusburg.
