Assault claims false, says KSP following verbal confrontation

A situation that had been building on social media came to a head last Thursday following adjournment of the Crittenden County Fiscal Court's regular meeting at the county office complex.

County Attorney Bart Frazer, who had been the subject of critical Facebook posts by local businessman Kent Withrow, reportedly confronted Withrow and asked to discuss the matter. The exchange quickly escalated, with raised voices and tempers flaring. After a short period, Sheriff Evan Head intervened and he and Withrow walked outside.

Multiple witnesses observed the incident. Shortly afterward, Withrow informed the sheriff of his intent to press charges against Frazer. Due to a potential conflict of interest – as Frazer and Head are both elected county officials – the sheriff referred Withrow to Kentucky State Police (KSP).

According to KSP public affairs officer Ridge Porter, a trooper was dispatched after Withrow formally filed an assault complaint, alleging that Frazer had grabbed and attempted to choke him. Upon arriving in Marion, the trooper interviewed Frazer, Withrow, and possibly other witnesses, and reviewed surveillance footage from a camera positioned in the county office complex.

The surveillance footage, which lacked audio, showed what appeared as a verbal exchange between the two men but no physical assault. KSP's Porter stated that the trooper determined Withrow's allegations were unfounded, and no further investigation was necessary.

The surveillance footage has been posted to The Press YouTube channel.

Withrow has been critical of the county attorney and Crittenden County Judge–Executive Perry Newcom. Withrow's social media posts either began or intensified a few months ago, shortly after the county awarded a roofing contract to a lower bidder rather than Withrow's company. Withrow filed suit against the county, but Circuit Judge Daniel Heady ruled against him in an injunctive hearing. The judge's finding was later upheld upon appeal.

Sheriff's Department is getting up to full staff; more court security needed

STAFF REPORT

Sheriff Evan Head informed Crittenden County magistrates during last week's monthly fiscal court meeting that his department is making progress toward being fully staffed. However, challenges in recruitment and retention persist, reflecting broader issues in law enforcement across the nation.

Now two years into his first term, Sheriff Head spoke of difficulties competing with regional salary demands in policing while addressing the negative perception of law enforcement that has made hiring more challenging. Despite these hurdles, he expressed optimism about the department's recent staffing developments.

The sheriff's office is authorized to employ three full-time deputies. Currently, only one full-time deputy is in place, but the department now has two part-time deputies and is preparing to send a new hire to the law enforcement academy.

Devin Brewer, a seasoned officer with prior experience as a Kentucky State Police trooper and chief deputy in Livingston County, recently joined the department as a part-time deputy. In addition to his role as a deputy, Brewer will serve as the county's animal control officer.

Boyd Bates, who has been a full-time deputy since Sheriff Head took office in January 2023, remains the department's only full-time deputy for now. However, that will change when new recruit Shawnte Moss completes training at the law enforcement academy in approximately 20 weeks. Moss will then join Bates as the second full-time road deputy. There are two full-time office deputies and one seasonal part-time office deputy who works more dur-

It donated $10,000 toward the junior class' annual Washington, D.C. trip and $356 for extra Chromebook chargers teachers can loan out to students. The junior trip donation will help reduce each student's overall trip expense. Retired teacher and current substitute Carol West was instrumental in helping secure the charger funds. Was Jesus really born in winter?

Christmas, celebrated on Dec. 25, is a holiday steeped in tradition and history, and its name has fascinating origins. The term "Christmas" is derived from the Old English "Cristes maesse," which translates to Christ's Mass. This name first appeared in written form in the 11th century, but the roots of the celebration extend much farther back.

About Town

Was the 25th day of December really, the day on which Jesus was born? Almost certainly not. Scholars can often agree that winter wasn't the setting for our manger scene. September seems to make more sense, according to a number of resources.

The selection of Dec. 25 as the date for Christmas is believed to have been influenced by various factors, including the timing of pagan festivals. Roman festival of Saturnalia, celebrated in mid-December, involved feasting and merrymaking; and the winter solstice, which falls around Dec. 21, symbolized the return of longer days and the rebirth of the sun. Early Christians may have chosen this date to coincide with these existing celebrations, making it easier to convert pagans to Christianity.

The association of Dec. 25 with the birth of Jesus became more formalized by the 4th century, when the Roman Emperor Constantine adopted Christianity as the state religion. At that point, the Church sought to provide a Christian alternative to those popular pagan festivities, leading to the establishment of Christmas as a significant date in the Christian calendar.

As a sidenote to Constantine's influence on Christmas, it was at the Council of Nicea in 325 AD – called by Constantine to clear up some theological issues – that the real man for whom our character Santa Claus is based showed up as a delegate, and punched out a fellow bishop. It's a long story that bears more space and ink than I have. Suffice it to say that the legend of Santa was drawn from St. Nicholas of Myra because of his benevolence to children rather than his right hook.

Over the centuries, Christmas has evolved, absorbing various cultural customs and practices. While the core of Christmas remains a celebration of the birth of Christ, it also reflects a blend of history, culture and contemporary influences.

As we come together with loved ones this holiday season, it's essential to reflect on and embrace the true meaning of this cherished spiritual celebration. Equally fitting is the joy we find in the spirit of giving and togetherness that defines the essence of Christmas.

Homemakers ushers in New Era of women

STAFF REPORT

A group of Millennials and Gen-Xers with varied interests and back-grounds comprise the Crittenden County Extension Homemakers' first club in about 20 years.

The traditional home-maker they are not; however, Crittenden County Family and Consumer Sciences Agent Rebecca Woodall says a homemaker is anyone who makes the home happy and healthy.

"Obviously we are excited to have this new club," Woodall said, noting there were 13 individuals at an informational meeting this fall and nine at the first official meeting Dec. 12.

Vickie Belt was elected president; Melanie Walker, vice-president; Vicki Hatfield, secretary; and Tracy Sutton, treasurer.

"Most of these "home-makers" work at least part-time," Woodall said. "Some have grandchildren and some have elementary-age children."

Gen-Xers are loosely comprised of individuals born between 1965-1980, while Millennials are those born between 1981-1988.

Woodall said these two age categories have been underserved by Crittenden County Extension Homemakers, but the group has come together in brainstorming sessions to develop programming and service projects for 2025. Some of those include a book club, activities such as painting, making butter, healthier snacks without preservatives and making homemade detergent, and conducting appreciation projects within the community.

The New Era Home-maker Club, as it is called, will meet the third Thursday of each month at 5:30 p.m., in the Extension office on U.S. 60 East. Club members will present the monthly lesson which aligns with other Homemaker clubs in the Purchase Area.

Judge in office as tremor hits Burna

Residents of Livingston County experienced a mild earthquake just after midnight on Wednesday, December 18. Judge-Executive Michael Williams, who was working late in his second-floor office at the courthouse, felt the building sway in what he initially thought was a strong gust of wind.

“This is a big brick building, so I knew something wasn’t right,” Williams said. After checking with local emergency dispatch, which reported no immediate incidents, he continued his work. However, by morning, reports of seismic activity confirmed his suspicions.

Two small earthquakes near the Burna area are believed to have caused the tremors, with the strongest registering at a magnitude of 2.3, the judge said.

Recent news reports have noted an increase in regional seismic activity around the New Madrid Seismic Zone.

Williams also pointed out the potential role of local rock quarry seismographs in helping pinpoint the epicenter. “I felt it, I can tell you that,” Williams said.

Financial condition reported at Fredonia

Fredonia City Council received an update on the city’s finances from a preliminary audit report of fiscal year 2023–24 during its regular monthly meeting last week. The report detailed gains and losses across several city funds, alongside updates on storm cleanup reimbursements and infrastructure maintenance.

Costs from storm damage recovery in late May were significantly offset by a combination of FEMA funds and insurance proceeds. The city received a FEMA grant of about $30,000 to cover storm-related expenses, while additional insurance payouts covered repairs at Woodmen of the World Park and damage to a sewer lift station. The city’s $1,000 insurance deductible left minimal expenses uncovered, said Mayor Jim Siebert, amounting to a shortfall of about two or three percent of the overall recovery expense.

“We came out better than we thought we would,” Siebert said, crediting the financial assistance for easing the burden of storm cleanup efforts.

In the annual financial report ending June 30, Fredonia’s cemetery fund showed a modest gain of $5,068, largely due to donations and cemetery lot sales. The city operates the cemetery.

Unexpectedly, the water fund also showed a gain of $7,043. Officials had anticipated a loss but credited the surplus to resolving a long-term water leak that took six months to locate. The city is also undertaking a lead survey of the water system to ensure compliance with regulatory standards. That will be costly, the mayor said.

The sewer fund reported a loss of $55,804, primarily due to contracted monthly services. The city has relied on external contractor Reveal for its licensing requirements for the waste water system. Additionally, there were some costly pump repairs last year.

Fredonia continues to contract out some maintenance work. While the mayor handles a significant portion of maintenance duties to save costs, larger projects necessitate external support.

The city’s report showed gains of $73,534 in the general fund and $3,396 in the municipal road aid fund, which have helped balance costs.

ing tax collection period.

Additionally, Robbie Kirk, a former jailer and veteran officer with state police experience, serves as the department’s other part-time road deputy. And there are two school resource officers, Rick Coyle and James Duncan, who also handle complaints and investigations beyond their roles with the school district.

While the sheriff’s office is moving toward improved staffing levels, Head voiced concerns about meeting demands for court security. Currently, the department has just one bailiff regularly assigned to court proceedings, requiring deputies to fill in for courtroom security as needed.

Looking ahead, the completion of the new justice center in two years will significantly increase security demands. Sheriff Head estimates that the facility will require either 18 part-time or nine full-time bailiffs to meet requirements for entry screening and security checkpoint operations, including the use of metal detectors.

•Magistrates discussed financial issues at the jail, stemming from lower inmate populations and expenses outpacing revenues.

Judge-Executive Perry Newcom praised Jailer Athena Hayes for her willingness to work closely with his office to find ways to mitigate the growing deficit at the detention center.

Newcom reported that the jail began the fiscal year on July 1 with a carryover of $166,614, which has since been depleted. Additionally, approximately $144,000 has been transferred to the jail from the county’s general fund.

Hayes requested magistrates approve measures to help address the shortfall. The court approved a proposal to transfer up to $180,000 from the jail canteen fund to the operating fund over the course of the current fiscal year. These funds will cover qualified expenses, including part of the salaries of certain jail deputies who provide educational programs for inmates and the jail’s cable television bill, which costs about $842 per month.

The jailer reported an uptick in the inmate population and receipts at Crittenden County Detention Center. November’s average inmate count rose to 182 from October’s 170, with federal detainees reaching 57, which is up, and about average based on 2023 figures.

“We are seeing numbers trending up,” the jailer told magistrates.

She said the restrictive custody facility is at 36 inmates, the highest in some time. Those are medium security inmates and most qualify for work release programs.

The fiscal court approved raising the daily per diem rate for housing local inmates and those from other counties from $32 to $40. Hayes, citing inflation and operational costs, emphasized the need for the increase, noting that the jail provides meals, medical care and other amenities. Lyon County’s contract rate remains at $36. Lyon covers medical costs of its inmates housed here.

In addition, the court approved a partnership with a third-party contractor to collect debt from released inmates. The program, at no cost to the county, charges a $30 commission to the inmate to recover housing balances owed by them. Local inmates are typically required to reimburse the jail for the time they spend locked up.

Magistrates agreed to review the jail’s financial situation in January after these transfers and anticipated revenue from an increase in the jail population are taken into account.

•Hayes also reported that a federal inspection last week of the facility ended with positive reviews. Crittenden County has western Kentucky’s highest allotment of federal inmate beds. It’s 70.

•Tony Travis and Darrell Simpson were reappointed by the fiscal court to new four-year terms on the Crittenden-Livingston Water District’s board of directors.

•Magistrates also approved a resolution regarding medical cannabis, which will become legal next month in Kentucky.

The resolution reaffirms the county’s commitment to a drug- and alcohol-free workplace policy, prohibiting marijuana use, including medicinal cannabis, by its employees. Despite Kentucky Senate Bill 47 permitting medical marijuana under certain conditions, the Fiscal Court exercises its right under KRS 218B.040 to restrict such usage. Violations of this policy will result in consequences consistent with those for other prohibited sub-

Attorneys of the early days of Crittenden

Attorneys played an important role in the early days of our county's history. For they not only had many cases to try in court at Marion but when the need arose, they would travel to the different districts in the county and hold court there. From the archives of The Crittenden Press we find some interesting history of some of our county's early attorneys and a sampling of some of the cases they handed.

January 1895 – Moore & Moore – Attorneys at Law

A. C. Moore is a son of Judge J. A. Moore, and he inherits his father's love of the profession to which he has devoted his life and talents.

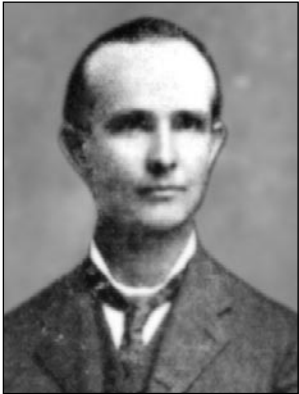

In all of our prominent cases, Mr. Moore is usually observed on one side of the other. He has been honored politically several times as county attorney, Supervisor of the United States Census, with the direct control of 100 bright men whose loyalty and good work indicates his directing genius, and he now devotes his entire time to his large and lucrative professional practice. (Alfred Clay Moore died Dec. 11, 1946 and is buried at Mapleview Cemetery.)

John A. Moore is devoted to his professional practice of the law, city attorney for the past five years. Mr. Moore's experience has been for so young a man – 30 years – varied and extensive. Graduating from Marion High School in 1890, he was admitted to the bar in 1894, and has since that time has been a close student of both men and the law. He is a Crittenden County production in every respect, born educated and married, and has all the strong loyalty to his town, county and state. (John A. Moore died in 1952 and is buried in Mapleview Cemetery.)

BLUE & DEBOE, Attorneys at Law
J. W. Blue, Jr. of the law firm of Blue and DeBoe, was educated in the public school and Marion Academy and graduated from the Marion Academy in 1880. He then entered upon the study of law in his father's office and also supplemented that knowledge by attending lectures at the Louisville Law School, graduating in 1885. By his oratorical powers and persuasive presentation in addressing a jury, the force of his argument is very powerful. (John Wm. Blue, Jr. died 1934 and is buried in Mapleview Cemetery.)

W. J. Deboe the second partner of this firm, also received his early education in the public schools of the county and at Bethlehem Academy. After graduation, he taught for five years in Crittenden and adjoining counties. He then attended Ewing College in Illinois, studying both law and medicine. He was admitted to the bar in 1889. His magnetic personality and easily recognizable abilities soon placed him among the top attorneys in the area. (William J. Deboe died June 14, 1927 and is buried in Mapleview Cemetery.)

Rochester & Kevil, Attorneys at Law
J. G. Rochester, is a Kentuckian born and raised in Marion, and it was here he was educated and began studying law with Dan H. Hughes in Morganfield and was tutored by some of the ablest minds of the age. In 1878 he entered upon the practice of his profession, taking at once a commanding position at bar and leading an active political life in the fold of the Democratic party, of which he has always been an active member.

His has been a long, successful legal experience, one which has particularly fitted him for county judge. His law practice has been a general one, commercial and corporation law and he represents several prominent collecting agencies.

It is as a lawyer he has achieved his great celebrity. In his office in the Carnahan Block he is surrounded by an elegant library, the latest decision and reports and thoughts occupied is never too busy or tired to talk and execute business.

He has a large acquaintance over the county and numbers his friends by the score. Plain, unassuming, pleasant and social he lives near the people. (Joseph G. Rochester died Dec. 30, 1929 and is buried in Mapleview Cemetery.)

J. Bell Kevil, our former county surveyor, has found his professional duties largely increased, owing to the great number of mining leases that require "running out."

Mr. Kevil, due to his years of county surveyor, is very familiar with the topography of the country, as well as the direction and extent of our mineral veins that he is about the busiest man tice alone is sufficiently great to demand most of his attention. Add to all these duties that of police judge and mining engineer and one can easily see that he has not much time for amusement.

Mr. Kevil, before he came to Marion, lived at Dycusburg where he was engaged in milling. He removed to Marion with the advent of the railroad and was one of the founders and original owners of the Marion Mill. (Kevil died March 10, 1817 in Sikeston, Mo., but was brought back and buried in Mapleview Cemetery.)

In Circuit Court April 4, 1895, the grand jury returned a bill against James Adams, accusing him of killing his wife. The court appointed Blue & Deboe to defend the accused, as Adams had no money to employ counsel.

Monday the case was called for trial and both sides announced ready. Twenty odd witnesses were examined. Some of the commonwealth witnesses stated that there were bruises on the neck and knees of the dead woman; one witness stated that he heard screams in the direction of the house the evening Mrs. Adams died; other witnesses stated that Adams was in the habit of cruelly treating his wife.

Witnesses for the defense sated that the accused was kind and good to his wife; that the wife was subject to smothering spells. The defense proved that the witness who told of the woman's screams had made contrary statements. Dr. J. H. Clark stated he had examined the body of the dead woman, which was exhumed, and that there was no evidences of a violent death; there were no bruises on the neck and that the red places on knees was caused by the disease of the skin, and they were not bruised places. He said the neck of persons dying suddenly frequently turned black.

The case was given to the jury without argument and after about 30 minutes the jury returned a verdict of acquittal and the defendant was discharged.

In May of 1895, attorneys Rochester and Kevil were called to Shady Grove to assist with a trial before Esq. Williams. There was a strong array of counsel and a goodly number of witnesses that testified. The warrant was against several parties, charging them with "An Unlawful Assembly." But the causes were severed, and W. G. Williamson was put upon trial.

After the prosecuting attorney had exhausted his witnesses and had vainly sought relief from the witnesses for the defense and finding nothing upon which to hang a hope for conviction, he dismissed the prosecution as to all. So it is now on record that Mr. Williamson is not an "Unlawful Assembly." After the trial was over, Rochester and Kevil started their long journey back to Marion.

Christmas comes with expectation of gathering and joy

I can't tell you which years they were, but I can think of a few that would contend for "the best Christmas ever." They are probably a combination of the best memories of my childhood, early years of marriage with young children at home, or more recently when my parents were still living, and my siblings and all their children were together. I don't remember the gifts, or even very many details. What I remember is the beauty of the presence of family with all its dynamics.

Because we have been spread to the four winds for a few decades now, the gatherings after I became an adult lasted for at least a few days. Plenty of time for competitive games, airing of differences, and misspeaking enough to require further discussion.

All these best Christmases ever come with a price. It is a price that is worth paying. It comes in the form of change and loss. There is that first Christmas without a grandparent. Then there is that first Christmas away from family. There is that Christmas that comes when all the children are in different places. I have spent Christmases with 30 or more family members and a couple with just two of us.

Christmas comes with expectation of gathering and joy, and it rarely disappoints. However, that expectation should never overwhelm the reality of what life is like for us right now. It is preferable to weep as we miss those who are not with us for the first time than pretend we are "o.k." Joy and sorrow are two sides of the same coin. It is possible to feel both at the same time. It sounds like, "I wish...were here to see this."

The stories of the nativity in Matthew and Luke are full of joy and promise. They are full of anticipation and realization that salvation has come to all humankind in the impossibility of God becoming flesh in the womb of a virgin. There is, however, more than this.

There is also fear and violence that we would rather forget or gloss over. Such is the nature of bringing salvation into a world that is unprepared to give up on its systems of power. The power and wisdom from God will always offend those whose hearts are not aligned properly.

King Herod was so fearful and jealous that he ordered infanticide in the region of Bethlehem. Mary and Joseph were warned and ran away, far away, to a place of refuge that represented safety and enslavement – Egypt. The murderous crime of Herod and his minions prompted Matthew to quote from Jeremiah 31:15,

"A voice is heard in Ramah, lamentation and bitter weeping. Rachel is weeping for her children; she refuses to be comforted for her children, because they are not." (RSV)

There is also the story of Anna, who experienced joy and gave thanks to God for the arrival of the Christ. We do not know very much of what she was thinking and nothing of exactly what she said. I do, however, expect that her joy was tempered because her husband, who had been gone for decades, did not live to see what she saw.

This first Christmas – the best Christmas ever – is full of drama before and after Jesus was born. There is scandal. There is fear. There are announcements from angels and dreams sent from God. There are shepherds, wise men, kings, and common folk. There is escape to Egypt. We read one scandalous genealogy and another that leaves no doubt about the Christ being savior for all – "son of Adam, son of God." King by right of creation and by right of being the son of David.

Why should we expect less than every feeling known to humans to fall on us at this time of year. In our part of the world, it is dark outside, but more light is on the way. The world is resting in anticipation of renewal, but we still have months to wait for it.

Every Christmas, because we celebrate the arrival of the possibility for us to be rescued is the best one ever. That is until that next arrival of Jesus. Until then we continue to live and remember. We experience the great joy and the great pain of strong and loving relationships that shift and change over the arc of the life that God has breathed into us.

Joyous Christmas to all, and peace

Dozen face felony indictments

STAFF REPORT

Crittenden County Grand Jury earlier this month indicted 12 individuals on a number of charges. A grand jury does not determine guilt or innocence, it merely decides whether sufficient evidence exists to continue prosecution of a case in circuit court.

•Christopher D. Stump, 35, of Marion was charged with first-degree trafficking in a controlled substance (more than 2 grams) and for being a persistent felony offender in a superseding indictment which replaces a previous indictment. The original indictment included two trafficking charges, the new indictment has only one.

Stump is accused of selling 226 grams of meth, equivalent to about a half of a pound, to a co-operating witness on July 6, 2023.

•Nicky Dale Nelms, 46, of Salem was indicted on a felony charge of first-degree possession of a controlled substance (methamphetamine) and misdemeanor charges of operating a motor vehicle under the influence of a controlled substance, possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia.

According to the criminal citation, Nelms' vehicle had apparently run out of gas at about 6:30 a.m., on KY 723. Someone reported that the vehicle was sitting in the highway and the drive was not responsive. When Sheriff Evan Head arrived, he found Nelms getting out of the vehicle. The citation says that Nelms performed poorly on a field sobriety test. The report says a bag of suspected meth was found in his shirt pocket and a plastic bag of pot was found in a small duffel bag in the vehicle.

•Davie Julian Rodriguez, 31, of Florida was indicted on 15 felony and misdemeanor charges stemming from his arrest at Riverview Park by Sheriff Head on Oct. 20.

The Florida man faces Class C indictments that include four counts of being a convicted felon possession of a handgun, first-degree strangulation; enhanced trafficking in marijuana (greater than 8 ounces); first-degree enhanced possession of a controlled substance (fentanyl); and first-degree enhanced possession of a controlled substance (opioids). The grand jury issued true bills on three

CRITTENDEN COUNTY GRAND JURY

Class D felonies for first-degree wanton endangerment; enhanced possession of drug paraphernalia and first-degree unlawful imprisonment. The misdemeanor charges are for fourth-degree assault-dating violence (minor injury), carrying a concealed deadly weapon, third-degree terroristic threatening, and enhanced possession of marijuana. Enhancements come from having a handgun while in possession of illegal drugs.

In a separate indictment, Rodriguez was charged with a Class D felony for tampering with a witness. He has allegedly been threatening a victim in the case during phone conversations from jail.

•Nicholas A. Chapman, 38, of Clarksville, Tenn., was indicted on a Class D felony charge of first-degree possession of a controlled substance (methamphetamine). The charge stems from an incident in October when Chapman came to court on an unrelated charge. He was searched by a security guard before entering the courtroom and a small baggie of white powder believed to be meth was found in a cigarette pack.

•Destinee E. Claycomb, 30, of West Point, Ky., was indicted on a felony charge of auto theft. According to police reports, Claycomb was found behind the wheel of a Ford Edge on Nov. 3 that had been reported stolen when it ran out of fuel on East Depot Street in Marion. She was arrested at the scene.

•Bradley Dickey, 40, of Marion was indicted on a felony charge of first-degree, second-offense possession of a controlled substance (methamphetamine) and misdemeanor and violation charges for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of a controlled substance, possession of drug paraphernalia, possession of marijuana, failure to produce an insurance card, operating on a suspended or revoked operator's license and failure to wear a seat belt.

Dickey was arrested on Oct. 12 about 6 p.m., after a traffic stop by Kentucky State Police on KY 70 near Frances, initially for failure to wear a seat belt. Further investigation led to the additional charges.

•Alexandria Jimenez, 31, of Nortonville was indicted on a felony charge of possession of a controlled substance (hydrocodone), a Class D felony and misdemeanor possession of drug paraphernalia. The charges stem from an investigation on April 13.

•Jeffrey M. Gernigin, 34, of Marion on a felony charge of flagrant non-support. In arrears $7,688.71.

•Lecarto Visquaze Pendleton, 48, of Cordova, Tenn., was indicted on three Class D felony charges of third-degree assault of a corrections officer and three misdemeanor charges for third-degree terroristic threatening. The charges stem from an October incident inside Crittenden County Detention Center when Pendleton is alleged to have struck three corrections officers causing injury to them, and also threatened to kill them.

Pendleton had been booked into the jail as an inmate from Lyon County, charged with DUI and reckless driving. Guards were allegedly assisting him in transferring from street clothes to jail garments.

•William Dunning, 42, of Sturgis was indicted on a Class B felony charge of kidnapping (adult) and misdemeanor fourth-degree domestic violence assault. Court records allege that on Aug. 11, Dunning assaulted a female then took her, against her will, to a cemetery, purportedly to do greater harm, according to court records.

•Anthony Petrakis, 44, of Dawson Springs was indicted on Class D felony charges of first-degree criminal mischief and theft (under $10,000); a Class C felony for second-degree burglary; and misdemeanor possession of burglary tools stemming from the alleged burglary of a rural Crittenden County home in October.

•Andy O. Martinez, 43, of Louisville was indicted on felony charges of receiving stolen property and second-degree criminal possession of a forged instrument; and misdemeanor operating on a suspended license. Court records indicate that in August Martinez is alleged to have been driving a vehicle stolen from Louisville and left it on a Crittenden County roadside.

marijuana in the glove box, to which she admitted ownership.

•Timothy Wharton, 49, of Paducah was indicted on felony charges of first-degree wanton endangerment and being a first-degree persistent felony offender; and misdemeanor or traffic charges for improper passing, having one headlight, operating on suspended or revoked licenses, reckless driving, improperly passing and failure to produce proof of insurance card.

Wharton was arrested on Oct. 16 after deputies were dispatched to the report of a reckless driver on US 60. The witness was off-duty Marion Policeman Cory Golightly, who told authorities that Wharton passed him in a no passing zone and nearly ran him off of the roadway. Wharton's vehicle was observed traveling at a high rate of speed through Ledbetter. A traffic stop was conducted and he was arrested for driving on a suspended license and other charges.

•Ranzy Odell Robinson, 56, of Paducah was indicted on a felony charge of first-degree possession of a controlled substance (methamphetamine); and misdemeanor possession of drug paraphernalia.

The unplanned arrival of the newest member of the Evans family was met with mixed reviews in 2024. As siblings often do when the family dynamic changes to include a little one, our new addition has been greeted with equal parts jealousy and pure adoration by our son and daughter, respectively.

No, you didn't miss the birth of a fourth Evans offspring – we got a cat.

I still can't believe it, honestly. Primarily because the male head of the house allowed it, given the alleged existence of a cat allergy. I'm not sure whether it was his soft side or his natural instinct to hunt in the wild that resulted in the cutest ball of white fur making its way from our barn to our living room. Regardless, Kit Carson turned out to be one of the most exciting things to happen in our household in 2024.

Like many pregnancies, this one was a surprise. We had no idea the feral barn cat was expecting until mid-May, when we discovered a pile of five tiny furballs. As they grew, they quickly learned from their mama to run and hide from humans, which turned into an amusing game for everyone when we went to check on them. Our favorite kitten gradually ventured to our back porch, then made brief visits inside before eventually becoming part of the family.

Rarely a day has passed since then without our 20-year-old son asking why we got a cat or why I'm "so obsessed with that cat."

On an equal number of days, our youngest and I have relished kitty snuggles, laughing at how much Kit Carson loves chewing on wet hair and kneading his favorite blanket. His routines are as reliable as clockwork – and a couple of us no longer need a morning alarm.

Apparently, the crepuscular nature of cats explains his pre-dawn waking. Like the deer that sneak around outside, cats can see better in low light, which explains Kit Carson's insistence on breakfast and insect-chasing at an hour I'd prefer not to see. Once I read that fact, his behavior started to make sense. But like a baby crying for attention or food, Kit Carson always gets his way. If the first couple of meows don't work, he escalates to walking across a sleeping body.

The girls in the house think this is so smart. The men disagree.

It's apparently common for families to get a pet when the empty nest draws near. We hadn't planned on it, but some of the best things in life are unexpected. Now, (some of us) can't imagine life without Kit-Kat, Kitty, Kitty Cat, Kit Carson.

Here's hoping your 2024 was also filled with funny pet stories, minimal cat scratches, and plenty of joy for (most of) the family.

Christmas brings out our best

Have you ever noticed that folks seem to be more generous in December?

Since December comes right after the Thanksgiving season, it seems to me that people are typically more generous during this time. A grateful heart tends to be a generous heart... a heart that is full of both Thanks and Giving. This attitude seems to carry over into December as many folks look for opportunities to share their blessings with others.

One online resource states that 30 percent of all charitable giving occurs in December, with 10 percent of all charitable giving happening in the last three days of the year. This suggests two different motivations for giving.

The increase in giving during December is a positive phenomenon, often stemming from hearts of gratitude. Many non-profits depend on the generosity of their donors in December to make up for shortfalls in contributions throughout the year. On the other hand, giving in the last three days of the year often appears to be motivated by the tax-deductible nature of the gifts rather than a true reflection of generosity.

My parents were wonderful examples of being generous with others, especially during tough times. I can remember, as a kid and teenager, going with my dad to deliver boxes of food to various people during this season. It was greatly needed, yet from my parents' perspective, it was to be done without fanfare. I also observed others doing the same thing during this wonderful time of the year... What a blessing!

Have you ever volunteered to ring the Salvation Army bell during the Christmas season? I did several times in the 1990s while living in Earlington (here in Hopkins County). I learned how to spot those with the true Christmas spirit and, unfortunately, those who were more like "scrooges." Those with the true Christmas spirit spot you from afar and start digging for something to put into the shiny red kettle. They walk up with a smile, look you in the eye, and say a warm, "Merry Christmas." On the other hand, the scrooges look down at the ground and pass by without a word, totally ignoring you. Interestingly, I've learned to distinguish bell ringers who convey the true Christmas spirit from those who seem less enthusiastic.

When I get out of my vehicle at any store and hear the familiar "tinkle-tinkle" of the Salvation Army bell, I immediately dig out a bill of some denomination. If it's really cold and windy outside, I make sure it's a bill with a zero on it; their endurance is well worth my small gift. I look the ringer in the eye and extend a warm "Merry Christmas." By the way, I do this on my way into the store so that when I come out with my hands full, I'm not fumbling around for cash.

Last Friday, I noticed something very exciting, and I made an exception – I gave on my way out as well! The sole individual ringing the bell as I entered received my customary gift and greeting. However, when I came out, I couldn't believe what I was seeing. The single bell ringer had been replaced by a group of six children who appeared to be around 8-10 years old, supervised by three adults. Even though I had already given, I simply had to acknowledge and encourage these young kids, who were getting much more of an education than they realized. Thankfully, I had six $1 bills, so I stopped and handed each child a dollar, thanking them for giving their time for such an excellent cause. I also thanked the adults for teaching these kids the importance of volunteering during the Christmas season. My heart was thrilled by the smiles on these kids' faces as I handed each of them the bills for the red shiny kettle... What a blessing!

What are you doing to share the love of Jesus during this exciting time of year? Remember... Jesus is the reason for the season.

It's not about the presents, it's not about the snow, it's not about ol' Santa at the big North Pole; it's not about the reindeer with the red, shiny nose. It's all about baby Jesus, every wise man knows!

This December, why not make your heart a "Bethlehem" and invite Jesus to be born there? Then you can truly experience the hope, peace, joy and love of this exciting Christmas season.

Merry Christmas!

Eye Exam Alert

Starting next week, you'll need vision test to drive

STAFF REPORT

As the week of Christmas unfolds, a significant change is just around the corner for Kentucky motorists. Starting Jan. 1, drivers will need to complete an eye exam – either by an eye doctor or a free one offered by the state – to renew licenses.

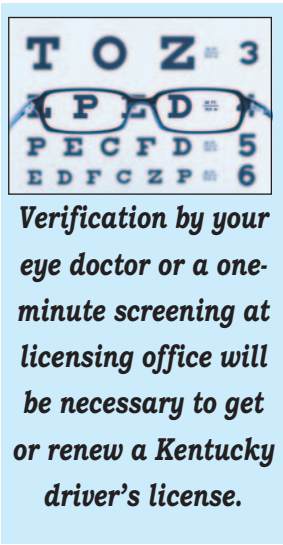

This new requirement stems from a law passed in 2021 but delayed to give the state time to prepare. With the New Year just days away, the clock is ticking for Kentuckians to familiarize themselves with the new process.

The legislation, House Bill 439, received strong support from lawmakers and the medical community when it passed, according to a recent article by Jack Brammer for the Kentucky Lantern. It was approved by the state House with an 89-5 vote and by the Senate with a 31-4 vote before being signed into law by Governor Andy Beshear. Originally slated to take effect in mid-2024, the implementation was postponed to January 2025 to ensure the infrastructure was ready.

At the time, many saw the move as a logical step for improving road safety, aligning Kentucky with 42 other states that already mandate vision screenings for driver's license renewals. However, as implementation nears, criticisms have surfaced, according to the Lantern's report.

Approximately 650,000 Kentuckians are set to renew their licenses in 2025. Many only recently learned of the vision-screening requirement through mailed flyers from the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet, prompting backlash.

Some have labeled the law "nanny state hogwash" on social media, arguing that it adds unnecessary bureaucracy to the already complex driver's license renewal system. Challenges posed by the new regional licensing office model – replacing the county circuit clerk system in mid-2022 – has increased the burden on new and renewing drivers.

For those without a history of vision issues, this new law may seem further cumbersome.

Despite criticism, advocates for the law remain steadfast. The bill's primary sponsor, Representative Kim Moser, R-Taylor Mill, emphasized the importance of improving driver safety.

"Data show that a decrease in visual acuity leads to more traffic accidents," Moser told the Lantern. "The vision of a 16-year-old who takes an eye test to get their license is vastly different from that of an older individual renewing their license. Periodic evaluation is necessary."

Kentucky State Police and medical professionals also back the measure.

Drivers can renew every four or eight years, with vision screening required at each renewal.

Renewal costs remain unchanged at $21.50 for a four-year standard license and $43 for an eight-year standard license. Real ID licenses cost slightly more.

Drivers may choose between completing their eyesight screening at a regional office or with a licensed medical provider.

If opting for a medical provider, drivers must take a completed state-issued form to their renewal appointment. The form must be signed and dated within 12 months of the renewal visit. For those using the state-provided screening, the process involves looking into a device and answering questions about what is seen. This takes about a minute.

Drivers who fail the screening will need to visit a vision specialist for further evaluation and corrective measures before proceeding with their renewal. Corrective lenses should be brought to the screening, and licenses will be marked with a restriction if glasses are required for passing.

Online and mail-in renewals remain available for those who choose to complete their vision test with a medical professional. In such cases, the official signed form must be uploaded to the renewal system at drive.ky.gov.

Kentuckians can renew their licenses up to six months before expiration, and early renewal is recommended for those who may need corrective measures.

Commercial driver's license (CDL) holders with valid, unexpired licenses are exempt from the new vision screening since their annual medical certification already includes vision testing.

As the holidays give way to the New Year, Kentuckians should prepare for this change. Whether you opt for a quick screening at a regional office or visit your eye doctor, your vision must meet a 20/40 standard.

License renewals can be done at any of the state's regional offices. Most residents in this area use the offices at Madisonville and Paducah.

Almost 4 years in, Dr. Meinschein takes stock of education remodel

STAFF REPORT

Under the forward-thinking leadership of Superintendent Dr. David Meinschein, a Livingston Central High alumnus, the Livingston County School District appears to be thriving. As Meinschein nears the midpoint of his fourth year, the district is preparing to unveil its newly renovated $6 million Local Area Vocational Education Center – a cutting-edge facility that represents the culmination of years of planning and vision.

The grand opening, anticipated in the coming weeks, will highlight state-of-the-art opportunities for students, from modern nursing programs to agricultural technology. The renovation project, funded largely from a grant with a 10% local match, transforms the building into a hub of innovation and career readiness, reflecting Meinschein's guiding principle: "At the end of the day, kids need to transition into the workplace or college."

The tech center's debut is just one piece of an overarching plan, the superintendent says, that backs up the district's mission to "advocate and create a world-class opportunity for students."

The Vibrant Learning Experience is a multifaceted program aimed at immersing students in the rich historical and cultural heritage of Livingston County. With its first director and program coordinator soon to be named, the program will seek to further engage students through innovative projects such as living history exhibits and creative storytelling about the county's past.

The Vibrant Learning Experience isn't confined to history. It also champions STEM education, with a particular focus on encouraging girls to explore fields like math and engineering. Instructional Supervisor Kristy Nelson noted,

Dr. David Meinschein grew up in Carrsville where his father was a longtime pastor. You pronounce his name like this: "Mine-Shine."

"We've identified gaps in rural areas where girls historically haven't entered STEM fields."

A school district motto developed by Meinschein is displayed in front of the new board of education office complex next to South Livingston Elementary on the Cutoff Road.

"Honoring Our Past and Enlightening Our Future," is proudly displayed at the new building, an 8,000-square-foot facility that will also serve as a resource center for the Vibrant Learning Program and other initiatives.

Over the last three years, the district has modernized its headquarters and its schools with upgrades to HVAC, lighting and water systems to improve sustainability and cost efficiency.

Implementation of new reading and math curricula over the past two years has already shown measurable progress in student achievement. The high school's Kentucky Summative Assessment (KSA) scores last year were fifth highest in the commonwealth.

The district's commitment to career readiness has also been infectious, said Instructional Supervisor Jennifer Gosselin, pointing out that Meinschein's energy and vision have brought a renewed sense of purpose to the staff.

"If you want to improve an organization, you do it through people, not programs," said Meinschein, who also sits on the Murray State University Board of Regents.

Livingston Central isn't just an educational institution, explains the superintendent, it's an economic driver for the county and beyond. Programs like welding, which saw 90 students enroll in its first year, exemplify the district's focus on workforce development. The district also actively draws on community partnerships, hosting tech days and inviting local businesses to collaborate on student projects. There are even greater plans on the stove that will soon launch to improve connectivity between the school district and its alumni.

"This is a 20-year project in the making," said Meinschein, and it's really just getting started.

"It has all been about laying a foundation and making sure things are in order here (in schools) then sharing that vision with others," to promote further engagement with the community, said Amy Ramage, director of pupil personnel.

Because it is categorized as a "hold harmless" school district – one of only a handful in Kentucky – it must generate 68% of its annual budgetary spending from local taxes. Yet the district ranks 67th in teacher pay out of 171 districts in Kentucky.

Part of Meinschein's plan to improve Livingston County's educational district has been to diligently recruit and retain the best teachers he can find. A source of pride has also been the district's ability to develop leaders from within and to bring back former students who've chosen a career in education. Three of the district's four principals are Livingston Central graduates.

"We're creating a great place where people want to work and be the best they can be. In order to craft a great vision and cast that vision, you have to have great people," the superintendent said. "If you do those two things, it will take care of all of the ancillary things around you, and your district will do great things."

At December's Caldwell County Board of Education meeting, Fredonia's Stephanie Feagan was honored for her contributions to school district during her tenure on the school board. Her term came to a close this month. Feagan has for the past four years represented the school board district that includes Fredonia, Donaldson and Briarfield. Pictured are board members and school officials (from left) Kim Cook, Tim Kennaday, Stephanie Feagan, Superintendent Dr. Jeremy Roach, Stacy Brantley and Anna Ray.

Drive Sober program launched for holidays

Law enforcement agencies across Kentucky are joining the nationwide "Drive Sober or Get Pulled Over" campaign, which runs through Jan. 1, to promote safer highways during the holiday season, according to a news release from the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet (KYTC). Bill Bell, executive director of the KYTC Office of Highway Safety, urged Kentuckians to celebrate responsibly.

"Every crash caused by impaired driving is 100% preventable. Plan ahead for a sober ride so your family can start the new year with joy instead of tragedy," Bell said.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) reports that impaired driving crashes increase during the holidays. Over the past five years in Kentucky, the Christmas and New Year holidays saw 452 such crashes, resulting in 179 injuries and 11 fatalities.

The campaign, funded by the NHTSA, provides resources to law enforcement through state highway safety offices. It aims to save lives and reduce crashes during one of the busiest travel seasons of the year. Kentucky officials encourage drivers to arrange sober transportation, report impaired drivers by calling 800-222-5555 or 911, and always wear seat belts. For a safer start to 2025, Kentuckians are urged to take the pledge to drive sober.

Crittenden County Sheriff's Department and Marion Police Department have actively participated in this program in the past.

What should you know about RMDs?

You may spend many decades contributing to your IRA and 401(k), but eventually you will likely need to take the money out - in fact, you must take the money out or face penalties. What should you know about these mandatory withdrawals?

Here are some of the basics:

- What are they called? Mandatory withdrawals are technically called required minimum distributions, or RMDs.
- When must I take RMDs? If you were born before 1951, you've probably already begun taking RMDs. If you were born between 1951 and 1959, your RMD age is 73. And if you were born in 1960 or later, your RMD age is 75. You can postpone accepting your first RMD until April 1 of the year after you reach your RMD age, but this will result in two RMDs for the year. After you take your first RMD, you must take subsequent ones by December 31 of each year.

- What penalties will be assessed if I don't take all my RMDs? For every dollar not withdrawn, the IRS will charge a 25% penalty, but this can drop to 10% if you subsequently withdraw the correct amount within two years.
- Which accounts have RMDs? RMDs apply to traditional IRAs, as well as other types of IRAs, including SIMPLE and SEP IRAs. RMDs don't apply to Roth IRAs. RMDs also apply to traditional 401(k)s, but not Roth 401(k)s.
- Can I withdraw more than the RMD for any given year? Yes, you are free to take out as much as you want. However, if you take out more than the RMD for one year, you can't apply the excess to the RMD for the next year.

- How are RMDs calculated? Typically, your RMDs are determined by dividing your account balance from the prior December 31 by a life expectancy factor published by the IRS. Your financial professional should be able to perform this calculation for you.
- If I have multiple accounts, do I have to take an RMD from each one? If you are taking RMDs from a traditional IRA, you must calculate each RMD individually, but you can take the total amount from one or more IRAs. If you're taking RMDs from a 401(k) or similar plan, you must take the RMD from each of your accounts.

- How are RMDs taxed? You are typically taxed at your income tax rate on the amount of the withdrawn RMD. You may be able to avoid taxes in a particular year if you transfer your RMDs to a qualified charity in what's known as a qualified charitable distribution.
- If I inherit an IRA or 401(k), am I subject to RMDs? Yes. When you take RMDs from an inherited account, you generally must withdraw all the funds within 10 years, as opposed to over your lifetime, which is the RMD window that applies to your own accounts. The rules are somewhat different if you inherit an IRA or 401(k) from your spouse. In any case, though, you'll want to consult with your tax advisor about how to take RMDs from an inherited account.

Grant Rogers

If you're already subject to RMDs, be sure you've taken them before the year ends. And if you haven't yet started taking RMDs, learn as much as you can about them - because the more you know, the more likely you'll make the right moves at the right time.

Keeping Spirits Bright

The staff at Henry and Henry Monuments would like to say thank you for a wonderful year and offer holiday wishes to all our customers.

We know, for many of you this season will be the first without a loved one. Our prayer for you is that the spirit of Christmas can bring you some comfort, peace and joy as you remember happy times past.

When the time is right to remember those lost loved ones with the finest memorials, Henry & Henry will be there for you.

God bless us all and Merry Christmas!
