Kentucky farmers and fishermen can file their 2012 state income taxes by April 15 instead of March 1, the Kentucky Department of Revenue announced Monday. The six-week extension parallels a similar IRS date change for federal taxes for farmers and fishermen, after the late passage of the recently enacted American Taxpayer Relief Act.

County near top of donation list

Crittenden County was in the top 10 counties in Kentucky for percentage of people making monetary donations in January to the state's organ donation program, reports Crittenden County Circuit Clerk Melissa Guill.

According to the Trust for Life registry, 62.2 percent of Crittenden Countians renewing or receiving a driver's license or identification for the first time opted to donate $1 to the program. That ranked the county seventh in the commonwealth.

"I believe that the increased awareness and the implementation of the organ donor icon on the driver's license of registered organ donors has made for this increase," she said. "Even though some people do not want to be placed on the organ donor registry or cannot be placed on the registry due to health issues, most are willing to donate the $1, which in turns helps to promote the Trust for Life program."

Inmate walkaway raises safety concerns

By DARYL K. TABOR
PRESS EDITOR

The walkaway of a prisoner from a kitchen work detail at Crittenden County Detention Center last week has raised the concern of at least one Marion couple who resides in the area where the inmate was known to have hidden out while on the lam.

"Shame on our local law enforcement for not taking the proper steps to advise us of this situation," wrote Laurel Diaz in a letter to the editor found inside this week's issue of The Crittenden Press. "We could have been taken hostage, harmed, robbed, beaten up, (our) car stolen or even worse."

But state and city police, while empathizing with Diaz, say the manpower they mustered was most needed to recapture the inmate. Authorities said calling residents or knocking on doors was just not feasible.

"Public safety has and always will be our primary concern," Marion Police Chief Ray O'Neal said, conveying his concern for the situation.

Inmate Jason Arkenberg escaped guard oversight at the jail around 6:30 a.m. Feb. 10 and hid out for a period in the state highway garage off Old Salem Road. He was arrested around 3:30 p.m. the same day less than a mile away at the former Turner and Conyer sawmill off U.S. 60 West.

"We live directly across from the school bus garage on West Elm Street, and it would have been helpful to know that a 'dangerous' criminal was hiding out near our house on a Sunday morning when we were all home," wrote Diaz, who lives with her husband Tom. "We can see the state garage from our front windows and the former Turner and Conyer sawmill is just to the west of our house."

Trooper Stu Recke, public information officer for Kentucky State Police (KSP) Post 2 in Madisonville, explained the lack of notification.

"Manpower is always an issue," he said. "When our resources are out there searching, we cannot afford going door to door to warn people."

O'Neal said as with any jail escapee or walkaway, state police is the lead agency in the search, though city, county and jail authorities work in conjunction with KSP.

Recke acknowledged Diaz's concern

CCHS greenhouse up, running in time for National FFA Week

In celebration of National FFA Week currently under way, members of the Crittenden County High School chapter have organized a variety of activities to educate the public about agriculture and show appreciation to those who support FFA programs. High school agriculture education instructor Larry Duvall said more than 550,000 FFA members will be celebrating across the nation.

Local ag education students have also been celebrating the completion of a greenhouse next to Rocket Arena. Duvall said students have worked diligently constructing and placing tables inside the greenhouse. Last month, students purchased their first plants at an auction. They are also growing a variety of plants from seed, raising herbs such as cilantro and basil Duvall said incorporating a greenhouse into instruction has been something he has wanted for students for more than 10 years.

"It was just a case of economics and coming up with the funding for it. Three years ago, we were able to get a grant from the Kentucky Agricultural Development Board. Crittenden County Board of Education came up with some matching money for that. That's when we actually were able to fund the purchase of the greenhouse," he said.

Burglary, drug charges head court docket

STAFF REPORT

Crittenden Circuit Judge Rene Williams sentenced three individuals to prison last Thursday. She revoked probation for another man, gave probation to one woman for a felony trafficking charge and man accused of flagrant non-support, and the judge reduced bond for a woman accused of taking money from the 88 Dip restaurant.

The cases heard in circuit court last week were as follows:

■ James Jones, 48, of Marion pleaded guilty to two felonies, two counts of first-degree possession of a controlled substance (Percocet and methamphetamine); and four misdemeanors, possession of drug paraphernalia; carrying a concealed deadly weapon; second-degree possession of a controlled substance (hydrocodone); and third-degree possession of a controlled substance (Valium).

According to court records, Jones was arrested in January 2011 after loud music from an unattended vehicle at Bellville Manor Apartments caught the attention of police. After locating the owner, officers found a large hunting knife concealed in the small of his back and under his shirt. They also found a meth pipe and drugs belonging to the defendant. Jones was sentenced to one year on each felony case and 12 months for each of the misdemeanors with all sentences to run concurrent for a total of one year in prison. Probation was denied upon recommendation of the commonwealth's attorney.

■ Phillip L. Sitar, 43, of Marion pleaded guilty to an amended charge of first-degree wanton endangerment. He was originally charged with second-degree rape. Sitar was sentenced to five years in prison, but the commonwealth will not oppose probation after 180 days are served. Sitar was alleged to have had a sexual relationship with a minor under the age of 16 on Aug. 2, 2009.

■ Amanda Waters Kennedy, 30, of Marion pleaded guilty to two felony counts, one of burglary for stealing jewelry and another of theft for taking a Jeep Wrangler from a home on East Gum Street. The cases stem from two incidents in October 2011. Kennedy is currently serving an unrelated sentence for charges in Caldwell County. In these cases, she was sentenced to five years for theft and one year for burglary. The sentences will run concurrent for a total of five years. Probation was denied and she was ordered to pay $5,000 restitution to victims.

■ Deborah J. Marshall, 63, of Marion pleaded guilty to trafficking in a controlled substance. Marshall sold 20 doses of hydrocodone to a co-operating witness on July 18 of last year. She was sentenced to five years in prison with all of the time probated for a period of five years.

■ Judge Williams revoked probation for Rick W. Crabtree, 32, of Marion. Crabtree violated terms of his probation by failing to properly report to his probation officer. Crabtree was originally charged in 2010 with receiving stolen property (under $10,000) by complicity and two counts of receiving stolen property (under $500) by complicity. The property was a vehicle license plate and license plate decal.

■ Michael Elliott, 38, of West Point, Ky., pleaded guilty to flagrant non-support. He was given five years of supervised probation and ordered to make regular child support

Signal changes at Main, Bellville streets to improve traffic flow

By DARYL K. TABOR
PRESS EDITOR

For the second year in a row, the ride along Main Street in Marion is about to get a little more hassle-free.

Keith Todd, Kentucky Transportation Cabinet (KyTC) spokesman for the state's two westernmost districts, said scheduled alterations at the intersection of Main and Bellville streets should ease the flow of traffic along the main thoroughfare through the city. By summer, according to Todd, a replacement of the lights and equipment that triggers signal changes at the primary intersection in Marion should be complete.

The most notable change will give the green light more frequently to travelers along Main Street/U.S. 60. Currently, the signal alternates based on a timer. Adding traffic-sensitive detectors at East Bellville Street/Ky. 120 and West Bellville Street/Ky. 91 North portions of the intersection will keep the traffic along Main Street moving unless a vehicle is detected at either side of the aforementioned crossing corridor.

"This means the Main Street legs will be green more often," Todd said. "Now it's strictly timed. If you come up at midnight and there is no repairs were continually made to the line. The new traffic signals should make travel along the street even smoother.

This coming change is a result of a request by city officials for a traffic study to justify dedicated turning lanes and signals at the busy intersection. Todd said the traffic count of just under 12,000 vehicles a day, though heavy

House set to eye pension reform

The second week of Part 2 of the 2013 regular session of the Kentucky General Assembly saw a flurry of new bills being filed, bringing the total in the House to 409. The last day to file new bills in the House was Tuesday.

A number of bills cleared the House, and I will take this opportunity to discuss a few. One bill was House Bill 3, appropriately called the "Human Trafficking Victims Rights Act." I was proud to be a co-sponsor of this legislation which cracks down on the crime of human trafficking and makes provisions for the protection of the youth who have been victimized by the horrific acts of those who prey on vulnerable children. State law enforcement and prosecutors from across the commonwealth joined forces in support of this bill.

House Bill 47 was also passed. This legislation allows someone convicted of a single incident of a violation, a misdemeanor or a Class D felony to petition the court to have his or her record expunged if the person has not been convicted of another violation, misdemeanor or felony within five years. The county attorney and the victim of the crime are to be notified and will have the right to testify before the record is expunged. I voted for passage.

House Bill 49 was also passed. This bill establishes a garnishment process for those who have defaulted on their school loans. I voted for the measure.

I voted no on House Bill 184, a bill that created a new administrative body to be attached to the Office of the Governor. The Early Childhood Advisory Council, in my opinion, was redundant. While the intent of the legislation is commendable, we are well past the time where we can create bodies that are tasked with increasing subsidies and give monetary awards without first cutting government spending to offset the increased burden to the taxpayer. We simply can no longer afford to do this. I will support this legislation if money is taken from another body to fund the council.

Among legislation generating the most discussion in Frankfort are a number of bills that deal with the issue of a burgeoning debt in the Kentucky Retirement Systems. Senate Bill 2 cleared that chamber and is awaiting a hearing in the House State Government Committee. This bill mirrors what the governor's pension reform committee suggested. I anticipate that many changes will be suggested in committee.

So far, however, no bill has been passed by both the House and Senate.

Last week, I reported that I submitted House Bill 267 to protect our Second and 10th Amendment rights. Because of questions about how the bill was worded, I withdrew House Bill 267 and introduced House Bill 382 in its place. House Bill 382 is a much more straight-forward piece of legislation that prohibits the enforceability of any new federal law, rule, regulation, or order relating to the ownership or registration of certain firearms, magazines or other firearms accessories. This bill has been sent to the Judiciary Committee for

Legalizing hemp, school safety among Senate activity

There was no lack of action last week in Frankfort. With an intensity seldom seen this early in a legislative session, committee rooms, hallways and legislative chambers were buzzing with discussion, debate and consideration of important bills from morning to night.

A range of bills aimed at improving our commonwealth in a variety of ways were approved by the Senate last week.

In an effort to boost the economy and support Kentucky farmers, Senate Bill 50 was approved by a 31-6 vote. The measure would regulate the growing of industrial hemp in Kentucky if the crop is legalized by the federal government.

Supporters of the measure say that Kentucky's climate and mode of cultivation would make hemp an ideal alternative crop for tobacco farmers in the state. They also tout the economic benefits of added jobs from the production of goods made with hemp, including ropes, fabrics and plastics.

If the bill becomes law, Kentucky farmers would still have to wait for the federal ban to be lifted to begin growing the crops. Members of the commonwealth's congressional delegation told state lawmakers last week that they are working in Washington to do just that, even filing legislation to do so.

Senate Bill 43 would make it easier for physicians' assistants to work in Kentucky. The measure would change our credentialing standards to more closely match those of surrounding states. We hope this would encourage more physicians' assistants to stay in the commonwealth to provide much-needed health service to our citizens.

Senate Bill 10 would cap the state's general fund debt at 6 percent of revenues. Six percent is a level generally accepted by the bond-rating agencies and the threshold the legislature has historically attempted to operate within. The measure excludes debt for universities, the Kentucky Housing Authority and other agencies using funds outside the general fund, including the stand-alone road fund. Senate Bill 23, passed unanimously, would allow courts to review DNA evidence after a person has been convicted of a violent felony. This is a simple act of justice to help people prove their innocence. DNA evidence frequently convicts the guilty; it should also be available to exonerate the innocent. Based on recommendations from the Kentucky Center on School Safety, Senate Bill 8 would put comprehensive emergency management response plans, developed with the aid of local first responders, in all Kentucky school districts. The bill would require severe weather, fire, lockdown and other safety drills to be completed each school year. Prepared schools are safe schools and the safety of our children is always a top concern.

These bills now go to the House for consideration.

This is just a small sample of the bills we considered last week. Each day, bills as diverse as the varying concerns of this great state's hard-working citizens are taken up in our committees and chambers. While every bill may not affect every person, every Kentuckian is ultimately affected by the work we do. I encourage you to get involved in the work that impacts you.

This legislative session is nearly half over, but there is still plenty of time for you to get involved. Committee meetings and chamber proceedings are open to the public and aired on KET—including online streaming on the KET website. If you cannot drive up, tune in or log in.

As always, I would like to hear from you.

Frankfort looking to save lives, make money off cigarette laws

If only Natasha Harris and John Alleman had lived some place where government cared about their welfare just a bit more.

It seems that both Harris and Alleman died from one of America's favorite past-times, consuming junk food. If they had lived in such a caring place as, say, New York City, where the intake of colas and trans fats are restricted, Harris would not likely have died from a daily overdose of soft drinks and Alleman could have avoided the deadly heart attack surely prompted by eating too many 10,000-calorie burgers.

Harris, doctors revealed last week, died in 2010 due in large part to her consumption of 10 liters of Coke a day. The 30-year-old consumed more than 2 pounds of sugar and almost 1,000 milligrams of caffeine in liquid form each day. Well before death, she lost all of her teeth.

For comparison, the average American consumes 5.5 ounces of added sugar—those found in junk food—per day. Your morning cup of Folgers contains about 100 milligrams of caffeine.

Despite Harris' uber-consumption of junk, she wasn't even American. She was from New Zealand, a cluster of islands off Australia's southeast coast.

Alleman, meantime, lived in Sin City—Las Vegas. He was the unofficial spokesman for and regular customer at the Heart Attack Grill, home of such high-calorie menu items as the Quadruple Bypass Burger, Flatliner Fries, Butterfat Shake, Full Sugar Coke and for the weight-consciousness, the 6,000-calorie Double Bypass Burger.

Again, for contrast, the suggested energy intake for an average person is 2,000 to 2,500 calories a day.

Alleman, 52, is not alone in his penalty for gluttony at the eatery. This "Taste Worth Dying For," the restaurant's slogan, has given us numerous heart attack victims over the years.

Aside from their uncomfortable deaths, both Harris and Alleman died happy—well, at least doing what they wanted to do, even if it wasn't wise. But had they lived where the powers that be cared more, they might still be with us. After all, government knows best, right?

Fortunately, we appear to have that compassion in Kentucky, at least when it comes to cigarettes. Three-dozen cities and counties have already taken it upon themselves to see that lungs stay clean and crud-free by outlawing public smoking. A proposed statewide ban is also making its appearance in Frankfort again this winter, seeking to save private entrepreneurs from the freedom to decide what is best for business.

It's hard to argue the fiscal and physical benefits of such a prohibition, particularly when tied to state health care costs. Why not go all in, outlawing tobacco completely?

But wait... Kentucky is the nation's No. 2 tobacco-producing state, and 3 percent of the state's revenue is from tobacco taxes. Lawmakers are even looking to increase this sin tax to further close fiscal gaps.

You can't continue to ride the same thoroughbred you're looking to ship off to the glue factory, can you? So it seems Frankfort is stuck somewhere between maintaining a commonwealth and a common-health.

I'm sure they'll get it right, though. Thirty-six other states have already declared martial law against smoking. Heck, even Russia is halfway there.

Too bad for Natasha Harris and John Alleman there were no loving government mandates to protect them from their own self-destructive choices.

Law should have warned of escapee
To the editor
After reading The Press' coverage and follow-up on its blog about the escaped prisoner from the local detention center, I'm wondering why the state police and/or local police did not advise the residents who live in the vicinity where this prisoner was holed up of his presence so we could protect ourselves.

We live directly across from the school bus garage on West Elm Street, and it would have been helpful to know that a "dangerous" criminal was hiding out near our house on a Sunday morning when we were all home. We can see the state garage from our front windows and the former Turner and Conyer sawmill is just to the west of our house.
I didn't even know there was an escapee until I heard it

Girl Scout Cookies more than snacks

Everyone loves Girl Scout Cookies. But did you know that with every Samoa or Thin Mint you buy, you are helping build strong, successful girls?
With Girl Scout Cookie booths set for the coming month, this is a great time to talk about what girls gain from Girl Scouting. It is a good time to look at why we all have a stake in helping today's girls succeed.

For 100 years, Girl Scouts has provided girls with ways to learn and lead. Our cookie program is a key part of our mission to build girls of courage, confidence and character who make the world a better place.
Girls who sell Girl Scout Cookies learn teamwork. They create business plans, and work with their customers. They learn to set goals, make decisions, manage money and behave ethically. Think about how vital these skills are in all walks of life.
Recent national research found that girls who take part in Girl Scouting graduate high school and go to college in higher numbers. As adults, they are more active in their communities and earn more income over a lifetime.
So, when you see local Girl Scouts working cookie booths outside your favorite stores over the coming weeks, remember that with every cookie you buy, you're investing in girls. Through this program, girls learn they can do anything; be anything. That's a pretty amazing return on a

Crittenden Grand Jury hands down 11 indictments last week

STAFF REPORT

The Crittenden County Grand Jury indicted 11 individuals last week on a variety of charges. A grand jury does not determine guilt or innocence. It merely decides whether there is enough evidence to continuing prosecuting a case in circuit court as a felony. Indicted last Thursday were the following:

■ Brittany N. Beard, 18, Marion was indicted on charges of enhanced first-degree complicity to trafficking in a controlled substance (methamphetamine), a class B felony; enhanced complicity to possession of marijuana, a class D felony; enhanced complicity to possession of drug paraphernalia, a class D felony; and complicity to second-degree wanton endangerment, a class A misdemeanor.

The charges stem from a Kentucky State Police investigation that led to the discovery on Dec. 15 of an alleged large amount of meth, a loaded AR-15 rifle and other drug-related items at a home in rural Crittenden County where Beard was found along with her father, siblings and her own child.

■ Barry K. Beard, 42, of Marion was indicted on charges of enhanced first-degree complicity to trafficking in a controlled substance (methamphetamine), a class B felony; enhanced complicity to possession of marijuana, a class D felony; enhanced complicity to possession of drug paraphernalia, a class D felony; complicity to second-degree wanton endanger-

■ Larry Joseph Edging, 35, of Marion was indicted on charges of complicity to first-degree burglary, a class B felony; and complicity to theft, a class D felony. According to court records, Edging is accused of taking a 9mm Ruger handgun, PlayStation 3, compound bow, medications and other items Jan. 6 from a home on Highland Circle in Marion.

■ Jonathan M. Mathieu, 21, of Marion was indicted on charges of complicity to first-degree burglary, a class B felony; and complicity to theft, a class D felony. According to court records, Mathieu is accused of taking a 9mm Ruger handgun, PlayStation 3, compound bow, medications and other items Jan. 6 from a home on Highland Circle in Marion.

■ Corey M. Winn, 27, of Marion was indicted on 15 counts of second-degree criminal possession of a forged instrument. Court records say Winn is accused of writing 15 checks between Nov. 12 and Nov. 27 on the account of another person and cashing those checks, which amounted to $1,499.25.

■ James M. Sitar, 33, of Marion was indicted on two counts of second-degree rape of a female less than 14 years old. Court records allege that Sitar engaged in sexual intercourse with a girl under the age of consent in his residence on two occasions between March 30 and April 8 of last year and on or about June 23 of last year. The case was investigated by Kentucky State Police.

■ Terry Bricken, no age given, of Vine Grove, Ky., was indicted on a charge of flagrant non-support. Court records say that Bricken owes $11,602.44 in child support.

of Louisville was indicted on charges of second-degree escape, a class D felony; two counts of third-degree burglary, class D felonies; theft, a class A misdemeanor; and third-degree criminal mischief, a class B misdemeanor. The charges stem from Arkenberg's escape from the Crittenden County Detention Center on Feb. 10 and his breaking into two buildings in Marion where he allegedly damaged and stole property. Arkenberg was a trusty on work detail, emptying garbage behind the jail when he walked off earlier this month. His freedom was short lived as Marion police found him later that evening hiding at the former Turner and Conyer Sawmill on the west side of town.

■ Laura Jean Wallhead, 29, of Marion was indicted on charges of complicity to third-degree burglary, a class D felony; complicity to third-degree criminal mischief, a class B misdemeanor. According to court records, Wallhead is believed to have worked in concert with another person in the burglary of the 88 Dip restaurant on Feb. 8. Restaurant owners say about $1,700 in cash, coins and checks were taken from the restaurant after it closed on a Friday night earlier this month. Wallhead, who was employed at the Dip, is believed to have gone to the restaurant after hours, crawled through a window and taken a money bag hidden inside the building.

STAFF REPORT

The Kentucky Court of Appeals has upheld three decisions by the Crittenden County Circuit Court.

The first involved, Rodney Gibson, who appealed his probation revocation, action which was taken July 14, 2011, after Circuit Judge Rene Williams learned that Gibson had been terminated from the Drug Court Program. Gibson was ordered to serve the remainder of his five-year sentence from a 2007 trafficking in a controlled substance within 1,000 feet of a school conviction. Originally, he had served just over two years of the sentence when he was granted shock probation and enrolled in the Drug Court Program.

In revoking his probation, the court found that Gibson had violated terms of Drug Court on 15 occasions.

In his appeal, Gibson argued that Judge Williams and the circuit court administers the drug court program and were not independent arbiters of his probation hearing. He also alleged the court committed errors in the hearing and claimed the court violated his due process rights due to the Commonwealth's lack of compliance with the minimum requirements for notice and disclosure of evidence. He cited 2011 legislation known as House Bill 463, which was aimed at curbing the cost of incarceration without compromising public safety. He alleged that based on the new law, he should be allowed to continue free on probation.

The state appeals court affirmed the revocation on all grounds, finding that there was neither abuse of the court's discretion nor evidence supporting Gibson's claim that he deserved another chance on probation after 15 violations.

The second case involved a local teen, Joshua Bean, who was removed from juvenile court and his case taken to circuit court where he was charged with complicity to first-degree burglary and complicity to theft of a firearm. Bean appealed because he said the court had not met its burden of proof to charge him as a youthful offender in adult court. The Kentucky Court of Appeals ruled in favor of Crittenden Circuit Court, finding that the trial court did not abuse its discretion by granting the motion transferring Bean to circuit court for trial as a youthful offender.

The final case upheld by the appeals court was that of Tiffany Lanham, who on Oct. 6, 2008, pled guilty to two counts of trafficking in a controlled substance within 1,000 yards of a school by complicity and one count of second-degree trafficking in a controlled substance by complicity. A month later, Lanham was given shock probation by the court. In 2011, probation and parole officers testified that Lanham had failed to report as required by terms of her probation to an officer for two straight months. The court also learned that Lanham had been charged with receiving stolen property in Lyon County and failed to report the situation to her probation officer.

Lanham appealed the revocation, claiming she hadn't had fair notice that the court would use the situation in Lyon County against her at the revocation hearing and that the court should have considered sanctions other than revocation. The appeals court ruled against the defendant and found that Crittenden Circuit Court had acted within its discretion.

during a brief period of the afternoons, did not justify such a significant upgrade of the intersection.

But the consolation prize will make the intersection among the first in western Kentucky to be outfitted with some of the transportation cabinet's newest technology.

"The signal was due for some upgrades anyway," Todd said.

The new traffic-detection gadgets, descriptively called pucks because of their resemblance in size and shape to the scoring disks used in hockey, replace traditional wire loop detectors that are difficult to install and maintain, explained Todd. The pucks operate on a wireless system that cuts down on electrical maintenance issues.

To install the pucks, a hole is drilled in the pavement, they are then dropped in and covered with high-strength epoxy to protect them. The pucks contain a battery that can last up to 10 years or longer.

Upgrades at the intersection will make the downtown intersection the fifth or sixth location in the 12 counties comprising KyTC District 1 to be outfitted with the new technology. New, larger lights placed at a higher level will also be a part of the overall improvements.

"By doing this, it makes traffic flow more efficient," Todd said.

The changes will not affect Marion Fire

School board mulls $100,000 payment to insurance program

STAFF REPORT

Crittenden County Board of Education is being asked to pay in more than $100,000 to a little-used workers' compensation and liability insurance program to help meet a $60 million shortfall in the state trust.

At a work session last week, board members agreed more information is needed before the district pays into the Kentucky School Boards Insurance Trust (KSBIT), which is asking participating school districts across the state to help close its fiscal gap.

Most of Kentucky's school districts have paid into the low-cost insurance program, but the local district has not used KSBIT since 2004. Nevertheless, the district is being asked to pay for the years it did participate. The estimated total assessment is $103,722.

Crittenden County Superintendent Dr. Rachel Yarbrough said KSBIT officials stated the estimates are high and the final amount districts are charged may be lower. KSBIT is offering districts the option to pay the assessments outright or through bonding over a period of years.

Dr. Yarbrough said she and many other school superintendents across the state have concerns regarding the amount of money owed to KSBIT. She said many more questions need to be answered and facts gathered before school districts can properly address the issue.

Administrator to set parking limits

STAFF REPORT

Marion City Administrator Mark Bryant was given the authority at Monday's city council meeting to designate downtown business parking spots as short-term.

The measure will allow for no more than 15-minute parking in the areas established by Bryant. Signs will be placed in the affected areas to notify those parking along the street. Violators will be subject to a $10 fine.

"The only place at this time I would anticipate putting in a short-term parking limit is directly across from the dry cleaners," said Bryant, referring to Coach's Cleaners, owned by Councilman Frank Pierce. "The space is obviously his easiest customer access point, and if someone parks there for the full two hour limit (or longer), it really puts a burden on him."

County borders clutter state maps

Though Kentucky has a little more than one-third of the population of Ohio and 4,000 fewer square miles, Kentucky has 32 more counties than its northern neighbor.

State Rep. Adam Koenig (R-Erlanger) for the third year in a row has filed a bill to make it easier for two or more of Kentucky's 120 counties to merge.

The procedure in the bill would require an ordinance by the fiscal court or petition by residents to put the proposed consolidation on the ballot in the counties. It would also set guidelines for transferring taxing districts and allow voters to pick the county seat.

Rep. Koenig is also the sponsor of a bill aimed at eliminating the constitutional office of constable.

Several black cemeteries dot county

(Editor's note: In Part 2 of her February series, Brenda Underdown recognizes Black History Month with some more stories involving black citizens of the community.)

The story of Matilda Threlkeld, who is also thought to be buried in Marion's old cemetery, was written in the Dec. 22, 1880, edition of The Crittenden Press. Her log cabin sat on West Bellville Street near where the Cumberland Presbyterian Church sits today.

"In the quiet little village of Marion, where the eyes of the people have never fallen upon a President from father Washington down to Jas. A. Garfield, and where the lineage of either of the illustrious has never been knowingly looked upon, the discovery of a descendant of the "Sage of Monticello" might awaken a ruffle of astonishment.

"Yet within the walls of a poorly-chinked, ill-constructed log cabin in the suburbs of our out-of-the-way village may be found an ancient woman through whose veins the blood of Thomas Jefferson is slowly ebbing. 'Aunt'" Matilda Threlkeld is verging upon the age of four score. And Old Time has pressed his blighting fingers upon her until the aged woman can no more leave the miserable hovel she calls home.

"According to her own testament, she was born in Albermarle County, Va., and is a daughter of Charles Lewis, whose mother was a sister of Thomas Jefferson. The brothers—Randolph, Charles and Lilburn—emigrated to this state when 'Aunt' Matilda was but a child. After remaining in Gallatin County a short time, they permanently settled in Livingston County where 'Aunt' Matilda was raised, being hired out as a servant girl. Subsequently, she came to Marion, which has since been her home.

"Fluent in conversation with an active mind and a memory unshattered by time, she relates many historical events in a well-delineated manner that indicated a parentage above the mediocrity. She remembers well the soldiers of Gen. (Andrew) Jackson, and can relate incidents connected with the War of 1812. She told the writer, which illustrates the longevity of her mind, as follows: 'When Jackson was fighting, I was living in old Salem. A number of his soldiers took dinner at my master's one day. (With) whiskey being scarce, one of the soldiers drank during the meal 30 cups of coffee. I remember distinctly of handing him that number, for I was waiting upon the table and counted every cup. My arms ached when I was done passing it.

"Among other things, she remembers the Lewis tragedy that occurred about five miles from Smithland when she was 12 years old, an account of which was published in the Livingston County Cumberland Wave some seven years ago."

Some other obituaries from The Crittenden Press tell us of some history of the black citizens that lived and died here.

March 11, 1894: "On the 27th of April, 'Uncle' Amos Woods, one of the old-time, old-style Negroes, died at his home in the county at the age of 84 years. He was an honest, industrious old man, one who had the respect of his own people as well as that of the white folks who knew him. He was raised by the late Henry Woods, father of our county clerk, and to the day of his death, was strongly attached to the members of the Woods family."

He has no marked monument.

Oct. 13, 1904: "Tom Brown, the famous colored 'bone beater,' died Friday night at the county poor house, where he had been confined for the last two years."

March 21, 1912: "Thursday morning, March 14, 1912, Mary Fowler, colored, probably the oldest citizen of the county, died at the home of her son, Wylie McCain, on South Main Street in this city of the diseases incident to old age.

"She had been twice married but both her husbands died. By her first husband, she was the mother of 11 children, four of whom survive and all of whom live in this city, being Harriet Lee, her oldest child, now 83 years old; Mary, Wylie and Elijah McCain. Her second husband, Louis Fowler, died several years ago, and since his death, she has resided with her son, Wylie.

"The old family Bible of the Thompson family to whom she belonged before the war, is now in possession of her daughter, Harriet Lee, and shows her date of birth Aug. 1, 1812. Had she lived only a few months (longer), she would have rounded out the 100 years.

"She was a member of the colored M.E. church, and her funeral was preached there by Father James of Princeton, and her remains were laid to rest in the cemetery of her people north of the city to await the resurrection morn."

I am sure there are numerous unmarked, and now lost forever in time, black cemeteries scattered around the county. The ones that I have knowledge of include the following:

■ Mt. Pleasant, which is in the Bells Mines community. This cemetery is in such a remote area that if you haven't been familiar with it in the past, is it almost impossible to find. It is on top of a hill overlooking Cool Springs Hollow off Bells Mines Road. It is a large cemetery, but with only a few graves marked with tombstones. The rest are identified with sandstone rocks or sunken places with no markers. It was formerly the location of a black settlement. From old history, it is told they once ran a still located near the spring that ran at the foot of the hill.

■ The Hughes and Wilson Colored Cemetery located off of the Turkey Knob Road in a grove of trees. When last visited in 2004, there were only five tombstones with engraving found, but as many as 15 unmarked graves were also located.

Two who are buried there were veterans of the colored forces in the Union Army. One is Joseph W. Hughes, who died Nov. 19, 1904. His obituary tells that he was a most influential and highly-respected colored man in the county. The other, Robert Hughes, died Dec. 20, 1926, at the age of 94 years old. His obituary says he was a veteran of the Union Army, and during slavery, he was owned by the late Julia Hughes.

Robert and Joseph Hughes are also part of the African-American Civil War Memorial located at Washington, D.C. Their names are engraved on Plaque A-19.

At one time, this was a cared-for cemetery, for when last visited it had an ornate iron fence around it.

■ Another large black cemetery is located on Zion Cemetery Road, which is near the Levias community. It is known as the Mt. Zion Colored Cemetery, not to be confused with the Mt. Zion Church cemetery near Mattoon. This cemetery has several monuments, but most are sandstones or unmarked graves. In past years, a nearby neighbor, Charles Glore, has cleaned up this old cemetery and refurbished the sign leading to the cemetery.

■ There were also a considerable number of blacks who lived in and around the

Tolu area. Although not much history is known of it, there was a large, two-story colored church located close to the 8-mile marker on Ky. 297 close to Tolu. After the church was discontinued, the building was occupied as a home by the Dalton family for many years.

Ed Belt, now deceased, also told me that there was a fairly good-sized black cemetery located somewhere in the same vicinity, but that it had only sandstones and did not have any marked stones. I don't know if anything is left of it now or not.

Also in this area was a colored settlement known as Jetnico. An old article in The Crittenden Press dated Jan. 4, 1894 tells that at Jetnico, in the Hurricane neighborhood, Christmas was celebrated by James Ray, D. Todd and Wm. Todd, all colored, in an inglorious way. The two Todds were pitted against Ray. Several shots were fired. The Todds used a pistol and were bad marksmen. Ray used a shotgun, and D. Todd's face bore the marks of his excellence as a shot. Squire LaRue held them in bond to answer any indictment the grand jury might find.

From July 19, 1900, an item says the colored Methodists are arranging for a big, 12-day meeting at Blue Springs Church near Tolu. They were expecting a big meeting.

■ Located just a short distance from Tolu on Ky. 135, across the highway from where the old Wallace Mansion known as Ridgeway used to be, there is another black cemetery. It is known as the Franklin Farm Cemetery. It was at one time a large cemetery, but only with a few monuments with engraving on them. It has been unkempt for many, many years.

New book studies history of Hardin County, Fords Ferry

BY JASON TRAVIS

For Patsy Ledbetter, it's always special to visit Crittenden County and the farm that has been in her family for more than 100 years.

"I love to cross that river and go down to old Fords Ferry," the Cave In Rock, Ill. resident said. "We have a farm at Fords Ferry that belonged to my great-grandfather."

Ledbetter recently published "The Way It Was in Hardin County," a book that includes history about Hardin County, Ill., Fords Ferry and the Ohio River. The 400-page hardback includes more than 500 pictures.

"If I tell a story or tell about something, I have a picture to prove it," Ledbetter said.

A retired teacher, Ledbetter hadn't considered writing a book until she substituted in her granddaughter's classroom. After the students completed their school work, she would tell them stories about the local history of the area.

One day, a student raised her hand and suggested Ledbetter write a book.

While the seed was planted, it didn't take root until she was encouraged again to write a book after speaking to three women on the steamboat Delta Queen who had just completed a writing class.

The books have been available since Christmas. Ledbetter said half of the books published have been sold.

They have been shipped to New York, Texas, Indiana and as far away as Utah.

"We're selling these books like hotcakes," she said. "I just sold one a minute ago out my front door," she said last week.

To obtain a copy of the book, you can contact Ledbetter at her residence at (618) 289-3801.

The price of the book is $60, plus handling charges. Ledbetter has a passion for teaching and sharing the local history of the area. The book is yet another chapter in the educator's career.

She taught 31 years at the third-grade level in Hardin County's school system. She was a substitute teacher for an 14 additional years.

"I loved every minute of it.

My grandmother taught at Fords Ferry. My mother taught in Hardin County. I taught in Hardin County. Our daughter teaches in Hardin County now. Our granddaughter teaches in Princeton, Ind.," she said. "That's five generations of teachers."

With the book being received so well, there might be another chapter to write in her career. Ledbetter hinted she might consider writing a second volume.

While life may seem so very short, eternity is forever

It seems such a short time ago I was running over the hills overlooking the Ohio River and walking to Hebron School through fields, climbing fences and picking wild grapes on the way home.

One of the sweetest highlights of those years was when I was 12 years old. I got to be the one to take a sweet, beautiful little five-year-old nephew, Bruce Easley, to school with me. I can still see his blonde curls and his little blue and white sunsuit.

I'd carry him as long as I could and then let him walk awhile. I'd lift him over the fences and was so proud to mother him all that day.

Now, he is gone, and how short his life was. Back then, we did not think of life being so fleeting.

It seemed I would never get out of school; then on to more learning; then marriage; then building my businesses; then giving God my sins and my life. Then, before I hardly knew it, my precious mother was gone; then my sisters, brothers and my dear Kenny.

My family has always been the lifeboat of my heart. When you begin to lose members, you really realize just how short life is. You realize how the precious memories fill your life and the pain over the loss of loved ones makes you wish you had done more for them.

It is so hard to believe how many years I've spent on this earth. It seems you go to bed one night and wake up the next morning and years have flown by.

Most of my graduating class has already gone to their reward. I look about me and so many have left this earth much younger than myself. We never know when our last breath will be taken.

It only takes one second for our hearts to stop. So many in my family and extended family have been snatched away in an instant.

My warning to all; how true the words of Job: "My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle." He was an old man when he said that.

James 4:13-15 (paraphrased) also reminds us of the shortness of life: "Make your plans, but remember to say, 'If it be God's will,' for you do not know what will be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is even as a vapor that appears for a little while and then vanishes away."

How wise to use our short life following the One who owns it and gave His only Son to buy it back from the devil who stole it to give us a chance to live it to glorify Him.

I beg of all to think about your life. Does it bring glory and respect to your parents, your children, your spouse and your community?

Will you be remembered and admired as a respected, God-fearing, character-building, God-loving, holy person or a detriment to your family and community?

Do you live so that you can say as Paul, "Follow me as I follow Christ"?

"For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that everyone may receive the things done in his body, according to that he has done, whether it be good or whether it be evil," reads 2nd Corinthians 4:10.

God is so good to all of us and none of us deserve His goodness, forgiveness or the honor and pleasure of serving Him only through His agape love.

"For he that will love life and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil and his lips that they speak no guile; let him hate evil and do good; let him seek peace and follow it. For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and His ears are open unto their prayers; but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil," 1st Peter 3:10-12 tells us.

If you fail at this, then this question is relevant: "Or do you despise the riches of His goodness and patience and long-suffering, not knowing that the goodness of God leads you to repentance? But after your hardness and non-repentant heart you treasure up unto yourself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, who will render to every man according to his deeds," reads Romans 2:4-6.

I don't want anyone to go to hell, nor does God. Listen to Him. "...I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from him way and live: turn you, turn you from your evil ways, for why will you die? ...I will judge every one after his ways," Ezekiel 33:11,20 explains.

Benefit successful for Hampton Church

STAFF REPORT

A weekend benefit for North Livingston Baptist Church, which was decimated by a January tornado, was a huge success according to its pastor, Danny Starrick of Marion.

New Union General Baptist Church in Lola hosted Saturday's event which was put together by Kent Wilcox with his group, Refresh. Several artists and churches joined together for the evening of food and fellowship.

Starrick said estimates put the number in attendance at around 200. However, he believes that number is perhaps too low.

"It was a packed house from 2 through about 8:30 (p.m.) and several came and went through the evening," he said.

The event raised $6,658 for tornado relief to help rebuild the Hampton church.

Salem Baptist Church welcomes new pastor

STAFF REPORT

Salem Baptist Church has called Charles "Chuck" Ellis to be their senior pastor.

Ellis is a native of southern Illinois, but is not new to Kentucky. He married Pamela Claycomb of Irvington, Ky., in 1980.

While going to seminary, Ellis was the pastor of Garfield Baptist Church in Breckinridge County for five years. He then went to Grayson County for two years.

"We had to return to Illinois to aid in taking care of my daddy, but we are so glad to be back home now," Ellis said. "We have always said that to be where God places you is the most exciting experience there is. Salem is a wonderful community and the church is great."

"I see Salem Baptist as

having been strategically, specifically placed where it is to reach this area for Christ. God has given us resources, personnel and a desire to see what He will do with them."

The church and the new pastor are inviting members of the community to come and experience the "newness and sweetness of God's spirit" they are enjoying during the services.

"Every church has a past, but we want you to be a part of our new future and to grow with us during this journey into God's direction and grace," said Ellis.

Paducah man dies following tractor rollover in Livingston

STAFF REPORT

A McCracken County man was killed early Friday afternoon off Lola Road in Livingston County in a farm-related accident.

Gerald Dennis "Jerry" Haley, 69, of Paducah was unloading a tractor from a trailer when it overturned, killing him. The victim was in the tractor at the time, around 1:30 p.m.

Haley, also known as "Papa Bear," was a retired mechanic with the Mc-Cracken County Board of Education. He was a member of the Harley Owners Group and SNR Flat Track Racing, a motorcycle racing circuit.

Surviving family members include two brothers and a sister living in Smithland.

Liquor petition signatures expected by May; Lyon sales delayed by change

STAFF REPORT

The organizer of a petition in Crittenden County for a countywide referendum on alcohol sales expects to have the requisite number of signatures before summer.

Jerritt Hovey-Brown, who started the petition earlier this month, said last week that by May she should have the required 971 signatures of registered voters in the county to call for a local option election, the first here since 2000. The petition must be turned in to the county clerk for verification of names by mid-August.

Meantime, Lyon County voters have already approved countywide alcohol sales, but will have to wait a while longer before it is legal. According to The Times Leader, magistrates last week approved changes to a draft ordinance regulating liquor sales. A second reading of the ordinance is being delayed until Wednesday.

According to the paper, distance requirements prohibit establishments from selling alcohol within 500 feet of school buildings and 300 feet of parks and churches.

Legislation in Frankfort tied to the City of Eddyville will also have to be enacted to grant greater benefit to the county through liquor sales. Senate Bill 123, filed by Stan Humphries (R-Cadiz) seeks to reclassify Eddyville, with a population of 2,555, from a city of fifth class to one of fourth class, which requires a population of 3,001 to 7,999.

"The main differences are that a county with a fourth-class city can permit restaurant drink and motel drink licenses by ordinance, can levy an additional regulatory license fee under KRS 243.075 and can permit Sunday alcohol sales by ordinance," Stephen B. Humphress, general counsel with the Kentucky Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control said. "A county with a fifth class city cannot."

Marion is already a fourth-class city, should alcohol sales be legal.

The reclassification sought by Eddyville officials is not uncommon.

"(The state constitution) leaves classification solely in the hands of the legislature," said Lynsey Womack-Denney with the Kentucky Department of Local Government. "Almost every session, at least one city is reclassified outside of its pre-repeal population category. To our knowledge, the practice has never been challenged in court."

Burna Legion post offering new community social day

STAFF REPORT

American Legion Post 217 in Burna invites the public to a special social day each month, beginning on Tuesday. This event will be held the fourth Tuesday of each month as long as interest is shown.

Friends and neighbors may come by for an enjoyable time together. The Ladies Auxiliary will provide lunch beginning at 11 a.m. There will be board games, cards, jigsaw puzzles, crossword, Sudoku, puzzle books and plenty of fellowship available, said Auxiliary member Faye Gibson.

"If the weather permits and someone brings the washers or horseshoes, there might be some friendly competition," she said. "There are just endless possibilities for a good time."

Auxiliary President Terry Black said the purpose of this event is to provide a chance for those in the community to join together in fellowship the way it was done in the past.

"We want everyone to relax and have a good time," she said. "There is no senior citizens center in Burna, so we wanted to offer our building as a place that our neighbors and friends could gather and connect with old friends and make new ones."

"For those interested in crafts and/or scrapbooking, bring your projects along and enjoy fellowship while you work. The Auxiliary ladies will be working on the military honors quilts and we would be proud to have anyone help us honor all Livingston County military in this way," added Gibson.

The American Legion Post 217 is an alcohol and smoke free facility. It is located on American Legion Drive next door to the Livingston County Middle School at Burna.

The PressBRIEFS

Crittenden County's severe weather alert sirens will be tested again Friday. The 11 county sirens and one inside the City of Marion are tested at noon on the second and fourth Friday of each month.

The alarm will be a 1-minute solid tone, but an actual tornado warning will be a wavering tone for 3 minutes. The differing signals are to acclimate residents to the audible difference between a test and actual warning.

Marion City Council on Monday approved a zoning change to allow a former residential home in the 300 block of North Main Street to become a new business.

Whitfield demands Corps alternatives

U.S. Rep. Ed Whitfield (R-Hopkinsville) on Friday said last week he is demanding the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers consider alternative options to permanent barrel blockades along the Cumberland River to allow conditional boating to river tailwaters for sportsmen and recreational fishermen.

Crittenden County Judge-Executive Perry Newcom has also pled with the Corps to reconsider the blockade.

Grant presented to Fohs Hall Community Arts Foundation

STAFF REPORT

State arts leaders gathered Feb. 13 for Arts Day in Kentucky, an annual meeting that fosters discussions in the commonwealth's arts community about the state of the arts industry in Kentucky. The day is also an opportunity for arts leaders to thank members of the Kentucky General Assembly for their continued support of arts funding through the Kentucky Arts Council.

Sen. Dorsey Ridley (D-Henderson) and Rep. Lynn Bechler (R-Marion) presented the Fohs Hall Community Arts Foundation with a check for $2,392 for a Kentucky Arts Partnership (KAP) grant awarded by the arts council in July 2012. The funding awarded to Fohs Hall Community Arts Foundation is part of $1.7 million the arts council awarded to 104 non-profit arts organizations across the state for the 2013 fiscal year.

"Kentucky is fortunate to have excellent arts organizations in every region of the Commonwealth that provide arts experiences to audiences in their communities and visitors alike," said Lori Meadows, arts council executive director. "The state arts agency is proud to partner with Fohs Hall Community Arts Foundation to ensure year-round participation in the arts is available to the people of Kentucky."

PHOTO SUBMITTED

On Feb. 13, arts leaders came from across the Commonwealth to celebrate the public value of the arts and to thank legislators for their continued support of the Kentucky Arts Council. Checks were presented to organizations awarded Kentucky Arts Partnership operational support grants by the arts council in July 2012. KAP grants provide operating support on a competitive basis to arts and cultural organizations and community arts programs to ensure year-round participation in the arts is

Engineering scholarship deadline is March 1st

STAFF REPORT

The application deadlines for the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet's (KyTC) Engineering Scholarship programs are quickly approaching.

Each year, the Cabinet awards 10 to 20 new civil engineering scholarships and five to 10 new engineering technology scholarships.

A civil engineering scholarship may be worth up to $44,000. Plus, there's job placement after graduation and the opportunity for a potentially rewarding career. In fact, many current and former Cabinet leaders were scholarship recipients—including Cabinet Secretary

Mike Hancock and State Highway Engineer Steve Waddle.

The Engineering Technology Scholarship Program is in its fifth year and prepares students for careers with KyTC after graduation. Each engineering technology scholarship student receives $2,500 per semester to complete an Associate's Degree in Civil Engineering Technology.

For more information, log on to transportation.ky.gov. Under the Programs & Services tab, click Scholarship Opportunities.

The application deadline for both scholarship programs is Friday, March 1.

Benefit your family by writing your memoir

Memories can be very powerful and remind us of life's ups and downs and times of growth, maturity and happiness. Do you remember what your first job was like? What was the make and model of your first car? How did you feel when you held your first child?

Your special memories may not only be important to you, but they could be important to family and friends as well. Many people wish they knew more about their family history. Writing your life story can help.

The account of the series of events and experiences that make you the person you are today can be written, recorded or both.

Life stories include information about family and friends, the different locations and dwellings that you've called home, your education, work, hobbies, spirituality and how you were affected by important world events, such as the end of the Vietnam War or 9/11. Life stories should also include family medical history as this can provide useful information for both you and future generations. Knowing your family medical history can encourage preventative measures and even lead to early detection of certain health problems or disorders.

Documenting and sharing a life story has many mental and social benefits. The process contributes to overall mental healthiness, reinforces a sense of purpose and strengthens family and caregiver relationships.

In addition, the legacy of a life story and family history influences future generations.

Writing a life story takes time and careful thought. The University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension publication FCS7-200, "Life Story: What Is It and How Do You Write It?" has a worksheet with sample questions that encourage you to think about significant events and memories.

It is available online at <http://www.ca.uky.edu/agc/pubs/fcs7/fcs7200/fcs7200.PDF> or at the local extension office. Photographs, mementos and talking to others can also be helpful tools that jar memories.

If you don't feel comfortable writing or recording your life story by yourself, ask a family member, friend or caregiver to help.

For more information on life stories, contact the Crittenden County Cooperative Extension Service at 270-965-5236.

Educational programs of the Cooperative Extension Service serve all people regardless of race, color, age, sex, religion, disability or national origin.

Livingston Hospital adds new face to surgical staff

STAFF REPORT

Dr. James Bergin, M.D., F.A.C.S., joins Livingston Hospital clinics with varied experiences in healing. He has been in both private and group practice, performed bariatric surgery and complex abdominal wall reconstruction and has wound care experience. He is a fellow with the American College of Surgeons—hence the FACS acronym after his name—which admits to its fellowship only those whose professional activity is devoted to surgical practice and who agree without compromise to practice by the professional and ethical standards of the association.

Bergin, an Illinois native, earned his bachelor of science degree in bio-medical engineering from Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., just north of Chicago. He then went to medical school at the University of Illinois College of Medicine in Peoria, where he was in the James Scholar Program, an honors course of study in research. He then headed back to the shores of Lake Michigan where he completed his general surgery residency at Loyola University Chicago.

Following his residency, the surgeon started practice in Bowling Green, part of a group for six years and a solo private practice for three. He then relocated to Columbia in rural central Kentucky where he was employed as a physician.

Bergin and his wife Nikki, a native of Russellville, have two children—son Paul, eight, and daughter Keylin, three. The 43-year-old doctor and his wife share more than just a family together—both are in health care and both love to bow hunt. Nikki received surgical scrub technician training while in Bowling Green, where the couple met.

Paul also enjoys bow hunting, having gone on his first turkey hunt last spring.

Born in Mt. Morris, Ill., a city in far northern Illinois about the size of Marion, Bergin's father was in the publishing industry and his mother was a special education teacher. In high school,

Public urged to fill out transportation survey

FROM STAFF AND AP REPORTS

Officials with the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet are urging citizens to make their voices heard about transportation needs in the state by filling out a survey.

Keith Todd, a resident of Marion and spokesperson for the Cabinet's westernmost districts, said more input is needed from rural residents to balance the survey results.

There is a Monday deadline to fill out the survey, which will help the agency update its long-range plans to accommodate transportation needs in the state.

As of last week, more than 13,000 people had taken the confidential Your Turn survey, which is offered online and in print.

The confidential survey includes 19 questions about demographics, transportation wants and needs and options for funding.

The statement says responses to the survey will be used to gauge the public's expectations for transportation in the state and to plan for the future.

The survey can be taken by going to <http://www.yourturn.transportation.ky.gov>.

Trigg outquicks Rockets in 5th

Speed gets best of toughness

STAFF REPORT
In very simple terms, you might call Crittenden County's basketball game Tuesday night in the opening round of the Fifth District Tournament a contest of toughness vs. quickness. A gutsy performance by senior forward Bobby Knox and the rest of the Rockets had host Trigg County on the ropes late, but the Wildcats' quickness prevailed. Trigg beat the Rockets 60-57, but it was only by inches – literally.
Senior Rocket guard Ethan Hill stole the ball at midcourt with a second to play then took a couple of long dribbles before firing a shot that was on line, but just short of its mark. Had it gone in, the game would have gone into overtime.
“You're guys are tough, they're just really tough,” said veteran Trigg County coach Mike Wright. “I thought (Deonquez) Nance and (Dee) Murphey's quickness created some problems for Crittenden and that was the difference.”
Trigg scored 20 points off Rocket turnovers.
Nance, the Second Region Player of the Year, had a typical game, pumping in 27 points and leading his team with four steals. At 5-foot-6, Nance plays a much bigger role on his team than one might expect.

So does Knox for the Rockets.
“He's as important to us as any player is to their team,” Rocket coach Denis Hodge said as his team finishes 15-16.
The 6-2 Knox scored 16 points and sucked up 17 rebounds, taking his team on his broad shoulders at times. Knox scored eight straight points in the second quarter as the Rockets struggled to stay in the game after Trigg had gone on a 10-0 run to eat up an early Crittenden lead.

Hill, who had been the team's catalyst down the stretch this year, struggled to find his rhythm against Trigg's tenacious defense. So Knox was working extra hard around the basket. He'd scored six in the fourth period before fouling out with 1:30 to go while fighting for an offensive rebound.

“Bobby just attacks the rim,” Hodge said. “He plays with as much passion as any four player can play with. Just because someone is between him and rim, it doesn't mean that's going to stop him.”
Trigg went ahead by seven after Knox fouled out, but Travis Gilbert and Aaron Owen sank a couple of late three-pointers to keep it close until the very end.
Rockets close out at .500
To close out their regular season late last week, the Rockets played very well in two home outings.
The Rockets took the Class A Second Region champion UHA Blazers to the wire last Thursday at Marion before losing by one. Crittenden's six three-pointers helped keep the game close as did Devin Clark's 14 rebounds.
On Friday, the Rockets beat Fort Campbell, a team that Crittenden had lost to earlier in the season. Ethan Hill scored 19 points and Bobby Knox 11. Knox also had an equal number of rebounds.
The Rockets finished the regular season with a 15-15 mark, the best since 2004. Their record was seventh best in the 15-team Second Region.

Lady Rockets' season goes down to wire with chance vs. Lyon

STAFF REPORT
It wasn't sweet icing, but it wasn't egg either.
Their performance in the Fifth District Tournament may not have salvaged a season marred by just four wins, but the Lady Rockets didn't go away whimpering in their last game.
Crittenden County took Lyon County to the brink before finally calling it a season. The Lady Lyons, who had beaten Crittenden twice this season – once by 19 points – escaped Cadiz with a two-point victory in the opening round the post-season tournament.
With its 31-29 win, the Lyon girls advance to Thursday's district championship game against Livingston Central. Both teams will play in next week's Second Region Tournament.
Closing out the season at 4-23 – after going 4-24 the year before – coach Shannon Hodge continues to find silver linings.
“We played a good four-quarter ballgame,” she said. “Yes, there were spurts and lapses, but I think it was probably the best whole game we've played.”
Crittenden led by five out of the chute thanks to three-pointers by seniors Kaitlin Binkley and Davana Head. The Lady Rockets were tied or led on other occasions, their last lead was early in the fourth period 27-25 on a basket by Chelsea Oliver, who led the team with a dozen points.
Hodge said her seniors set the tone early.
“They played hard tonight and we appreciate their contributions to the program.”
Binkley and Head are the only two who will not return next year.

Lady Rockets SEASON SCORING

Hodge said Oliver's performance was inspiring. The sophomore has led the team in scoring all year long.
“Chelsea came to play. We probably didn't get the ball to her enough tonight,” Hodge said. “If she can play with that type of intensity over the next two years and we can grow some of these young girls, I think we're going to be okay.”
Lyon has been riddled with injuries this season. They lost Jill P'Pool early in the year then her sister Melanie P'Pool went down with a similar knee injury in the past few days. Barrett Blackburn, another starter, played a very limited role in the tournament game because of a leg injury.
Lyon County sophomore guard Rachel Williams picked up her game and led the winners with 12 points, including her team's last three points of the game.

Trailing by two with the ball in the front court, Hodge called a time-out to set up a final shot. The plan was to look inside first to Oliver. If she was covered, it would Binkley, the senior, who took the potential game-winning three pointer from the top of the key. However, Lyon's offense played off guard Mallory McDowell, giving her a clear lane to the basket. She dribbled in and shot a 10-footer that ricocheted off the rim. The sophomore guard retrieved her own rebound and got off another shot, but it too missed. Crittenden got that rebound, also, but couldn't get off a third shot before the final buzzer.
Season finale at Webster
Crittenden lost its final regular-season game at Webster County Friday. The girls got behind early against the 22-4 Lady Trojans, one of the best teams in the region.

Reopening of ME’s office saves county hundreds

STAFF REPORT
The 2013 reopening of the State Medical Examiner's Office in Madisonville is saving western Kentucky counties like Crittenden a considerable amount of money and aggravation.

The medical examiner's office for western Kentucky where autopsies are performed was closed in 2011 when the doctor who performed the examinations quit. That forced county coroners like Brad Gilbert to transport bodies for autopsies in homicide and suspicious cases to Louisville, more than 350 miles away.

The Madisonville office, which averaged more than 260 autopsies annually between 2005 and its closure, reopened in January when Dr. Gregory Wanger moved from Fort Thomas, Ky., to staff the Hopkins County office that services 24 counties.

Last year, Gilbert, now in his third year as Crittenden County's coroner, made six trips to Louisville at a total cost of $842.40 to the county.

"This does not take into consideration the full day one of our employees must take to go to Louisville," he added.

Reopening the regional office is saving small western Kentucky counties hundreds of dollars a year that can be used toward other needs. Larger counties may be saving thousands.

It costs the county only $17.60 per trip to Madisonville, Gilbert said.

and running water lines. The second year included erecting the exterior of the house. The final year included placing sheeting on the greenhouse and getting it functional. That included installing a computerized system that controls heat, fans, exhaust and water cooling.

Students will learn about growing plants in a hydroponics unit. Hydroponics is a method of growing plants in water—with the absence of soil—using mineral nutrient solutions. Duvall said the hydroponics unit was constructed after researching similar systems online.

"Basically it is a guttering system like you would use for your house for downspouts," he said. "We have holes spaced every 10 inches down each line and the lines are 10 inches apart. It goes into a manifold and recirculates back into a tank where a nutrient solution is pumped back into the plants. So we will be growing the plants with zero soil. No soil at all. It will be grown in a product called Rockwool."

In addition to teaching students how to grow different plants in a controlled environment, Duvall said the greenhouse is an entrepreneurial project. The goal is to open the greenhouse to the public near the end of April.

"The students will be marketing the plants to customers and helping customers with plant selection," he said. "They will also be handling the financial side, such as collecting money and writing receipts."

Money from greenhouse sales will be used to help fund FFA activities throughout the year. It will also be used to help fund next year's crop.

SAFETY

that the state inmate could have been dangerous despite being deemed a community-level trusty by the Kentucky Department of Corrections.

"They are in jail for a reason," he said of any inmate. "We always advise people to be cautious."

But Diaz's concern is that she didn't even know to be cautious. The Diazes did not learn of the escapee until hearing about it on WMJL radio the following morning.

"We did everything possible to catch this guy," O'Neal said. "If it'd gone into night, they probably would have seen it on the (television) news."

Lt. Marty Hodge, a Marion Police officer, attempted to put the warning out via the AMBER Alert Program that notifies broadcasters and the communications industry in order to get out the word of a missing child. The system is reserved for dispatching urgent bulletins in only the most serious child-abduction cases, so notification of the walkaway did not qualify.

The information was disseminated on The Press Online at 10:43 a.m. the morning of the escape, shortly after information became available from the jail and local police. The Press received its first notification from state police an hour later. The blog was updated throughout the course of the day as information became available.

Judge-Executive Perry Newcom said he did not learn of the incident until someone asked him about it at church that morning.

Perhaps the most feasible way to notify residents in such an instance, authorities agreed, is what is commonly called "reverse 911" emergency alert. This system notifies registered users of emergency bulletins, but it can be costly.

"When that is not available, we use resources available through media outlets," said Recke, who was not on duty the morning of Feb. 10.

Recke said where he lives in Muhlenberg County, both his home and cell phones are registered with the local notification service, most frequently used during weather emergencies. Lyon County, too, has contracted with a company to provide emergency bulletins to residents.

"We have CodeRED," Lyon

County Judge-Executive Wade White said of Emergency Communications Network's alert system. "It's a great service. People sign up, and I control who can call out. It has an automated service for tornado warnings."

The system works by entering voluntary contact details of an individual or home which will be added to a nationwide database accessed exclusively for critical community alerts and emergency situations.

If Crittenden County had such a service, the Diazes or any other resident of the county could have easily and quickly been notified of the prisoner on the loose. But Newcom said the system is cost prohibitive when considering the fiscal court's budget.

White said his county paid $13,400 for four years of CodeRED service. Just last week, magistrates in Lincoln County, Ky., agreed to a two-year, $15,000 contract for the same service. The system sends out notifications to its county's 25,000 residents interested in receiving notice via landline, cell phone, text message and e-mail.

The service is typically free for residents to register, though they ultimately pay for the notification system.

"It costs taxpayer money, so in a way I am paying for it," Recke said of the local system for which he is signed up.

O'Neal said he wishes the county would look into its own reverse 911 service.

payments in the amount of $150 per month.

■ Upon request by public defender Paul Sysol, bond was reduced to $500 cash from $1,700 cash on suspect Laura Jean Wallhead, 29, of Marion. Wallhead is accused of third-degree burglary, theft and third-degree criminal mischief for allegedly breaking into the 88 Dip restaurant and taking about $1,700 worth of cash, coins and checks.

Newcom said he would like to provide that service, but the fiscal court doesn't currently have the thousands of dollars it would take to contract services like CodeRED.
