State sets tax rate at 12.2 cents

The Kentucky Department of Revenue has set the 2010 state real property tax rate at 12.2 cents per $100 of assessed value, the same as it was in 2009. By law, the state must set its rate no later than July 1. This rate is based on the revenue generated from the increase in taxable real property assessments from 2009 to 2010. If the increase in revenue is more than four percent after the exclusion of new property added to the tax roll during 2010, then the prior year rate must be reduced. Because the assessment increase for 2010 is estimated at .85 percent, the state rate will remain the same as 2009's rate. All of the revenue generated from the state property tax rate goes into the state's general fund.

One escapee caught in Clinton Co.

STAFF REPORT
One of two men who escaped from a jail work detail last week remains at large this week. Police caught one man in Clinton County over the holiday weekend. State and local police launched an extensive search starting last Wednesday, June 30 for two inmates of the Crittenden County Detention Center, who escaped from a work detail at the Kentucky Department of Highways maintenance facility on Old Morganfield Road at 1 p.m. The men were identified as Chase Bingham, 19, of Marion and Alonzo Jackson, 44, of Manchester, Ky. Bingham was taken into custody Sunday after contacting counselors at a juvenile corrections center in Albany, Ky., with which he was previously familiar. Local authorities were expected to go get him Wednesday and bring him back to Crittenden County. Jackson remains at large. The two men escaped from their work detail last week after stealing a Ford F-150 pickup truck from the state highway garage. They had been assigned to the state highway crew for the last couple of weeks. After leaving the maintenance facility near

MPD promotes Hodge to city police lieutenant

STAFF REPORT
Fourteen-year Marion Police Department veteran Marty Hodge has been promoted to lieutenant. The last person to hold that rank within the police force was Don Perry, who was lieutenant for more than 20 years. Perry retired from the police force and is now a county deputy. Hodge, 44, started in law enforcement in 1993 as a Crittenden County deputy. He joined Marion Police Department in 1996 and completed the police academy training the following year. A combat veteran, Hodge is a retired sergeant first class from the Kentucky National Guard. He has served overseas in Iraq and Korea. As part of his new job duties, Hodge will be manager of the Public Safety Answering Point, also known as central dispatching or E-911. He has experience with the county's 911 system. Hodge was assistant director of the original effort to develop the service, working under his father-in-law Walter Weldon in

ACLU and its type are taking control of America

God and the Constitution of the United States both give atheists and Christians the right to proclaim their religious preference in the public square.

Never do we Christians use the courts of our beloved country to try to take those rights away from the atheists, but the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), started by Roger N. Baldwin in 1920, has the past 90 years done just that to take those rights away from the Christians.

Baldwin boldly stated that the courts are the vehicles the group uses to assert its interpretation of the U.S. Constitution.

They have fought to take the words "One nation under God" out of the Pledge of Allegiance; stop our military academies from continuing to pray at meals; to remove prayer from schools; rip the Ten Commandments out of our courthouses; stop Christian valedictorians from talking about Jesus Christ; stop students from praying at school sports; to remove the cross from war memorials; fought for the so-called rights of pedophiles; rights to desecrate the American flag; rights of terrorists while working to incriminate our CIA agents and on and on.

Why has this been its goal? Reflecting on his early years as the ACLU's executive director, Baldwin candidly revealed his original motives and objectives when he once said that he was for socialism, disarmament, and ultimately, for abolishing the state itself as an instrument of violence and compulsion. He said he sought social ownership of property, the abolition of the properties class, and sole control of those who produce wealth.

Communism is the goal, he indicated, and he didn't regret being part of the communist tactic. He said that he knew what he was doing. That he was not an innocent liberal, and that he wanted what the communists wanted. He said he traveled the united front road to get it.

In 1981, Jimmy Carter awarded Baldwin the nation's Medal of Freedom – the highest honor a civilian can receive in America just days before he was replaced by President Reagan in the White House.

The ACLU's policy No. 92 actually states: The ACLU opposes the tax exemption of all churches. Yet the ACLU has gone to court in Rhode Island to fight for tax-exempt status for satanists in that state.

On Jan. 17, 1931, the Special House (of Representatives) Committee to Investigate Communist Activities in the United States issued a report which stated the following: "The American Civil Liberties Union is closely affiliated with the communist movement in the United States, and fully 90 percent of its efforts are on behalf of communists who have come into conflict with the law. It claims to stand for free speech, free press and free assembly; but it is quite apparent that the main function of the ACLU is to attempt to protect the communists in their advocacy of force and violence to overthrow the government, replacing the American flag with a red flag and erecting a Soviet government in place of the republican form of government guaranteed to each state by the Federal Constitution."

The report went on to say that Roger N. Baldwin, its guiding spirit, made no attempt to hide his friendship for the communists and their principles.

The U.S. Congress also reported that since its beginnings, the ACLU has waged war against Christianity. This is a fact for all to see as we listen to the daily news.

We have a former board member of the ACLU on the Supreme Court, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, who was appointed by President Clinton. There are several ACLU members and former members serving the present administration.

Judge David Hamilton, a former leader for the Indiana chapter of the ACLU – a fund raiser for ACORN, a federal judge in Indiana who stopped the Indiana State House from praying in the name of Jesus, but later said praying in the name of Allah was okay – was nominated by Obama for the Seventh Circuit Court, and confirmed by 59 to 39 senators.

What irony. He was confirmed to the same Seventh Circuit Court that years before overruled his ruling on the Indiana State House.

Only God knows how all of this makes my heart ache for America and our future religious freedoms and God's continued blessings. It will take more than any election to undo this kind of damage to our religious freedoms, because these people are becoming so entrenched. It will take a miraculous act of God.

So Christians, please pray for America to return to the God-fearing and God-blessed nation countless thousands of our men and women have fought and died for. Many of our best are still on foreign soil suffering and dying for our freedoms.

Ol' timey politics... There's nothing personal

Politics is a full contact sport which requires a sharp mind and thick skin. It deals with issues that are near and dear to us and life altering. But many times it is easy to take things too personal, so we should try to never lose our humor. If we do, we will find it hard to open a newspaper or turn on a TV without getting angry. The perfect example of enjoying life, ol' time politics, and not taking matters of contention too personal would be my favorite election in Kentucky history.

The year was 1915 and the gubernatorial election was heating up between a Democrat from Henderson named Augustus Owsley Stanley and a Republican from Somerset named Edwin Porch Morrow. This is probably the only time you will ever hear of two best friends running for a political office against each other. As a matter of fact, they shared a motel room to cut down on campaign expenses, sat next to one another on the train, played cards, smoked cigars together, and even drank out of the same bourbon bottle.

Augustus Owsley Stanley was a fiery-eyed Democrat who would rally up his base by starting every speech like this, "Hello, I'm A.O. Stanley of Henderson where the cypress trees grow so tall that the topmost branches tickle the feet of the Democratic angels in Heaven and the roots go so deep that they scratch the bald headed Republicans sinners in Hell."

As one could imagine, you either loved Stanley or hated him, but no one could say that he was not a showman.

As the election grew closer, the two gentlemen made a campaign stop that was allegedly Fancy Farm; however, there is no historical information stating this as factual. It was a sweltering hot day, and the burgoo (a Catholic stew traditionally served at Kentucky political functions) was plenty, and the bourbon flowed freely. If you ran for governor, back in the day, you better have had a strong liver. It was not polite to deny a free drink, especially if you were trying to get votes. Both of these gentlemen had consumed massive quantities of burgoo and bourbon. After a few hours of shaking hands, kissing babies, and everything else required for running for political office, it was time to give their speeches.

Morrow gave his speech first, and it was surprisingly coherent considering how much bourbon he had drunk. When it came time for Stanley to address his audience, he stood up and was in a drunken fog. The podium was only about 10 feet away, but it might of well had been 10 miles. He took one step, quickly turned around and projectile vomited the other way. Losing your liquor in Kentucky is not a good thing when you are running for its highest office.

There was no denying what had happened. The crowd was large, the press was there, and it was sure to spread like wildfire all across the commonwealth. Meanwhile Morrow had a possum eating grin on his face, thinking that there is no way his friend could talk his way out of this predicament, and that he was basically guaranteed the governorship. Stanley, however, was a sharp candidate who was not likely to be outwitted. He cleaned himself up, turned around and said, "Gentleman, I am sorry for the grotesque scene I have just displayed, but every time Ed Morrow opens his mouth I get sick to my stomach."

Stanley went on to become the governor of Kentucky, which he despised. In Kentucky, we are about as tough on our governors as we are on our Baptist preachers... we have to get a new one every few years. An important life lesson can be learned from a political experience of two best friends.

Letters to the Editor

This Tea partier was there to help

To the Editor:

After reading Tyler Collins' article "Crittenden County does not share Tea Party mentality," it has to be the most lamebrain article I have ever read in The Press from start to finish.

There were no Tea partiers at the time of the ice storm, only people with Tea Party mentalities. I, having a Tea Party mentality, got up the morning after the ice storm and saw how ravaged it was and asked myself, "What can I do to help our community?" Already having thoughts in my mind what I could do, I went to Marion and stopped by the Pizza Roundup, which I own. Everybody in the county was without power. After leaving the restaurant, I went to the Marion Police Department and asked Ray O'Neal what they were doing to feed those in need. He told me there were no recourses yet. I told him I could help if he got me some volunteers to help and he did. Within hours, we were handing out meals to the First Responders, county and city workers, state and county road department workers, the shelter at the elementary school and anyone else in need.

For the next few days while the county and city were without power, Pizza Roundup, with help from coal oil lamps for light, our gas stove and one small pizza oven – plus help from countless volunteers and ingredients off of our shelves and from other businesses and individuals – prepared thousands of meals at no charge to anyone.

I did not ask anyone what their political party was, but I do know they were patriots willing to work with a man to feed the community with a Tea Party mentality, who walked out of his house after the storm with a thought in his mind, "What can I do to help our community get through this disaster."

There once was a president I really liked who made a statement that went something like this, "Ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country." In this case, a real Tea partier asks, "What can I do for my country?"

Steve Haire

Columnist has a misguided opinion of the Tea Party

To the Editor:

I am writing in regard to Mr. Tyler Collins' article which was in the June 24 paper. His article contained misguided information about the Tea Party movement. My wife and I have been proud Tea Party supporters for the past two years. We attended our first party in the spring of 2009 in Paducah. There I found a very family-friendly atmosphere, as well as Republicans, Democrats and Independents alike. Those speaking at the event shared the same values, which I cherish with all my heart. God, family and country are the three most important desires in my life. They are the structure which helps hold me up, and with all structure, a solid foundation is needed.

Jesus said, "Therefore, whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock." The foundation of my life is God. My wife and I heard one key instruction preached at the Tea Party and that was prayer. Prayer is the tool to saving this nation. Ronald Reagan said, "When we forget that we are a nation under God, then we are a nation gone under."

Family is very important, as well. At the Tea Party, I did not hear any anti-government speeches, nor did I hear anyone support not paying taxes. What I did hear were people protesting future taxes, not for us, but for our children and grandchildren. Last week, the CBO posted that at the year's end, the federal debt will be 62 percent of the nation's economy, which is the highest since World War II. The government spending is out of control and I don't want my children to foot the bill.

The Tea Party believes in a conservative base government. We do not believe in an anti-government. We believe in a limited government. We believe in checks and balances, and we believe in the U.S. Constitution.

Jesus said in Matthew, "For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in Heaven, the same is my brother and sister and mother." Tyler Collins is my brother in Christ and I do understand we don't see eye to eye, but I do encourage him to join me next April for the 2011 Tea Party in Paducah. I believe he will see and hear a patriotic message, which will touch his heart as it did mine.

That attitude did not build America

To the Editor:

I am writing in regard to Mr. Tyler Collins' article which was in the June 24 paper. Almost everyone has heard about the Tea Party and witnessed its protest on TV networks. Amid all the excitement of what appears to be an honorable cause, some may feel the urge to jump on the Tea Party express prematurely, without fully understanding what it is supporting. I bet more people know what they are getting out of the Tea Party than the millions of protesters and taxpayers who were perfectly happy with the free enterprise system of their health care. Not to say there could be some reform to make it better for everyone. The people would have liked to have been represented instead of it being crafted behind closed doors and read by no one until it was made into law. To me, this sounds like Obamaism, Russian Putinism and Venezuela Chevezism. Sounds like a touch of communism to me.

I do very much believe in helping my neighbors who are in need because I know I have been blessed because I have worked all my life. I just don't want to hand my money to the government to have Obama redistribute it to freeloaders and organization like ACORN that Obama loved, and backed as well. ACORN promoted prostitution of underage and illegal children and how not to get caught cheating your taxes. What does that say about our government?

I find it very hard to respect a president or government official who turns a blind eye to states like Arizona which is trying to protect its families from the Mexican illegal aliens and the drug cartel. Obama on his campaign trail promised if he was elected president of the United States he would open the Canadian border to where the citizens of America could get cheaper, legal prescription drugs through NAFTA. I guess promises are made to be broken. Instead of getting the legal prescription drugs from Canada so that people would have more money at the end of the month to spend elsewhere, all we are getting is free flowing pot, cocaine and illegal drugs from Mexico on our streets. Is this what we want, or should we stand behind one of our states and help it to keep that stuff out?

How about President Obama promising to close Gitmo? I guess that was just another lie. By the way, what is wrong with Gitmo? The taxpayers have already borrowed money from China to build that one and now he wants us to borrow more money to build another prison in Chicago. Every American, man, woman and child owes over $42,000 a person to get our government out of debt now.

Another thing is the $780 billion stimulus package that nobody had time to read before it became a law. It was a total failure. That was pure government waste and enough is enough. Our grandchildren will have a very hard time paying back what the greedy American people and politicians have squandered. It is time the people and the government of the United States learned to sacrifice so our children and grandchildren might have some hope for their future.

I believe in smaller government, fewer taxes and making people stand on their own so that they save money for downpayments on houses and don't take risky loans at my expense. I believe whole heartedly, big businesses start as small businesses bought and built by regular people using their skills, gifts and resources to turn their passions into products or services and create jobs in the process.

Mr. Collins, you say we are supposed to respect those in authority even though the ones in authority are not always deserving. I guess you are talking about Obama, Palosi and Reed. With Independence Day last weekend, I am glad our forefathers did not have your political views and mentality. When you go to bed tonight and say your prayers, you should thank God for the brave patriots who have fought and died so you can live in a nation with liberty and justice for all. God bless America and keep America free.

Liberal ideas may come from liberal profs

To the Editor:

After reading the article "Crittenden County does not share Tea Party mentality" written by Tyler Collins in the June 24 Crittenden Press, I felt compelled to respond. Mr. Collins' article is an apparent attempt to demonize and smear the Tea Party.

Mr. Collins states in his article that "...some may feel the urge to jump on the Tea Party Express prematurely, without fully understanding what they are supporting."

It is obvious that Mr. Collins does not understand what the Tea Party stands for. The Tea Party is not "anti-government" as he states. It is for a limited, responsible government. He states that the Tea Party believes that government should not interfere at all with the market or big business. This is simply not true. Government has its role in the market but it should be a very limited role. And lastly Mr. Collins talks about the ice storm and how if the Tea Party had been in charge, people would have starved, etc.

I would suggest to you, Mr. Collins, that those Tea Party people that you blasted were probably the ones out with chain saws cleaning up not only their yards, but their neighbors' yards as well. They were not the ones sitting around complaining. Before you try to demonize and smear a group of people I would suggest that you quit listening to your liberal professors who are trying to push their liberal agenda on you and spend a little time researching the subject.

Kenergy worker Hunt aids chicks, Haitian victims

Donnie Hunt of Marion has been involved in two rescue efforts recently as part of his work as a lineman for Kenergy Corp. Hunt and another Kenergy employee were dispatched to Lyon County with a bucket truck on June 3 to rescue two osprey chicks at Moon Bay on Barkley Lake. The two young birds were saved after they became entangled in fishing line. The fledgling pair of fish hawks were perched in a nest 40 feet off the ground. Would-be rescuers had no way to reach them until a wildlife officer thought of Kenergy Corp., a rural electric distribution co-op that serves 14 counties in western Kentucky. Officials called Kenergy's Marion office, which quickly dispatched a bucket truck along with Hunt and Kevin Board of Caldwell County. The Kenergy crew lifted a wildlife officer to the nest. One chick had fishing line wrapped tightly around a talon, limiting the bird's movement for at least a day. The second chick had recently become entangled, according to Kenergy's Web site. The wildlife officer freed them from the line. "Without (Kenergy's) quick assistance, both ospreys could not have survived," said Ed Ray, who works with the Kentucky Environmental Education Projects (KEEP). KEEP's Web site, www.KEEPKy.org, shows video of osprey nests in the Moon Bay area. The organization reports that people from England, Germany, Poland and Hawaii watch the Moon Bay ospreys. "Many more people are watching from around the U.S. and Kentucky," Ray said. Thanks to Kenergy, "we should now be able to watch these ospreys finish growing up until they are mature enough to fly away," Ray said. Hunt went on another mission earlier this spring to help humans devastated by the Haiti earthquake. It's not unusual for Donnie Hunt to lend a hand after disaster strikes. Three times in the past, the Kenergy line foreman participated in recovery efforts after hurricanes pounded the Southeast United States. When a devastating earthquake hit Haiti earlier this year, Hunt was ready to roll again. He and his pastor, Victor Hassell from Sturgis Cumberland Presbyterian Church, joined a humanitarian mission to visit the Caribbean country May 15-22. Their construction crew laid rebar and poured concrete. But they also doled out food, visited a school and played with orphans. Because Hunt has eight grandchildren, the latter proved to be his favorite part of the adventure. "The kids needed someone to play with them, hold them, love them." During his visit, Hunt learned a lot about Haiti and its residents, who practice an odd mix of voodoo and Christianity. Church-going is a nightly affair. As part of his weeklong mission, Hunt repaired a church. No concrete trucks eased the burden. Instead, a Haitian worker mixed small amounts of concrete with a shovel all day. He poured the mixture – two to three scoops per bucket – and a human chain moved the concrete to the work zone. Unlike U.S. recovery efforts, little or no heavy equipment assisted with cleanup, and Hunt saw only a handful of organizations working in the poverty-stricken village where he stayed. International workers couldn't drink the local water, so they purchased hundreds of bags that held only three to four ounces – barely enough for a good swallow in 100-degree heat. Helpers' diets existed mostly of rice, but one night Hunt was offered goat stew. He respectfully declined the dish. Hunt stayed at a pastor's home, sleeping on the roof in a tent. The house lacked electricity. A generator ran about two hours each night. A 500-gallon water tank on the roof supplied running water, but no pressure. Gravity was the only force moving water from the roof to the shower or sink. "It was quite an education," Hunt says.

"He has a great deal of knowledge of how our 911 system evolved and how it is put together, and that will be a plus," said Police Chief Ray O'Neal, who announced the promotion last Thursday along with Mayor Mickey Alexander and City Administrator Mark Bryant. O'Neal said Hodge will be second in command at the police department, which has six full-time officers and six to seven dispatchers. "Marty has been my right-hand man for the past three years," O'Neal said. "We have been rewriting our policy and procedures and he has been very instrumental in putting that together." Hodge was one of three senior patrolmen before receiving the promotion. He will continue regular patrols for the city police department along with his new managerial duties.

Crittenden man defied King George 200 years ago

These hallowed grounds of Crittenden County, if they could talk, many a tale they could tell us of the long ago people who are buried under its sod. Some have tombstones to mark their graves, others lie unmarked, we know not where they are buried or the stories they carried with them to unmarked graves.

This article first appeared in The Crittenden Press in August 1975, but its well worth repeating. Since we have just celebrated July 4, it's interesting to find out that Crittenden County has some ties to this time in our history. Mr. Wayne Boyd, who researched and wrote the article, was a wonderful genealogist. Although he lived in Indiana, he had many family ties to Crittenden County and did extensive research of many families. He has been dead several years, but his name and research is still remembered and treasured by all genealogists here in the county.

The following article on the Tryon Association was submitted by Hubert Wayne Boyd of Indianapolis, Ind.

Aug. 14 (1975) marks the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Tryon Association documentation and Mr. Boyd related how the signing is connected with a Crittenden Countian.

Every schoolboy and girl knows the date of our Declaration of Independence, but relatively few people are aware that there were other signed protests before July 4, 1776.

On Aug. 14, 1775, Samuel Lofton, a middle aged resident of Tryon County, N.C., together with 47 of his neighbors, signed the Tryon Association. News had reached the southern frontier of the hostile actions of the British against the citizens of Boston, and Mr. Lofton and his associates were angered – enough, as they tell us in this 200-year-old document to: “Take up arms and risque (risk) our lives and fortunes...”

The text follows: “1775 August 14, The unprecedented, barbarous and bloody actions committed by the British Troops on our American Brethren near Boston on the 19 of April and 20 of May last, together with the hostile operations and Traitorous Designs now carrying on by the Tools of Ministerial Vengeance and Despotism for the Subjugating all British America, suggest to us the painful necessity of having recourse to arms for the preservation of those rights and liberties, which the principles of our Constitution and the laws of God, nature and nations have made it our duty to defend.

Therefore, we, the subscribers, freeholders and inhabitants of Tryon County, do hereby faithfully unite ourselves under the most sacred ties of religion, honor and love to our country, firmly to resist force by force, in defense of our natural freedom and constitutional rights against all invasions, and at the same time do solemnly engage to take up arms and risque (risk) our lives and fortunes in maintaining the freedom of our country, whenever the wisdom and council of the continental congress or our provincial convention shall declare it necessary, and this engagement we will continue in and hold sacred until a reconciliation shall take place between Great Britain and America on constitutional principles, which we most ardently desire.

And we do firmly agree to hold all such persons inimical to the liberties of America, who shall refuse to subscribe to this Association.”

Signed by:

Thomason, Jacob Farny (Forney), Davis Whiteside, John Beeman, John Morris, Joseph Hardin, John Robison, James McIntyre, Vallentine Mauny, George Black, Jas. Logan, Jas. Baird, Christan Carpinter, Abel Beatty, Jacob Turner, Jonathan Price, Jas. Miller, Peter Sides, William Whitesides, John Dellinger, George Dellinger, Samuel Karbender (Carpenter), Jacob Moony Junr, John Wells, Jacob Castner (Costner), Robert Haselip, James Buchanan, Moses Moore, Joseph Kuykendal, Adam Sims, Richd Walker, Samuel Smith, Joseph Neel, Samuel Lofton.

Resolved nem con that we will continue to profess all loyalty and attachment to our Sovereign Lord, King George III, his crown and dignity, so long as he secures to us those rights and liberties, which the principles of our constitution require.”

In 1919, a tablet was erected at the site of the old Tryon County Courthouse five miles north of Bessemer City, N.C., which is now in Gaston County. The bronze plate on the reverse side of the monument contains the following:

“Here in August 1775, was formulated and signed the Tryon Declaration of Rights and Independence from British Tyranny.” Then appear the names of 49 signers.

Samuel Lofton remained in Gaston County N.C., until about 1783 when he moved to Pendleton District, S.C. In 1790, he was the first sheriff of Pendleton (now Anderson County).

In about 1801 he came west to what was then still Livingston County, bringing his second wife Sarah and their children, and settled in the Piney Fork area. He died here in January 1808. He is possibly buried in the Allen-Phillips cemetery without a marker.

By Act of State Legislature of 1802, the county seat of Livingston County was relocated at Centerville, which is in southern Crittenden County, north of Fredonia. Samuel Lofton's son John Guy Lofton 1773-1837 and his son-in-law William Edgar Phillips 1758-1820 (married to Eliza Betsy Lofton) were both surveyors and justices of the peace at Centerville in 1805.

The seat of government remained at Centerville until May 1809 when it was moved to Salem, and it remained there until early 1842 when Crittenden County was created and the new town of Marion was established as its seat.

John G. Lofton moved to Madison County, Ill., and W.E. Phillips went to Louisiana in May of 1809.

Two of Samuel Lofton's daughters, Miss Sarah Lofton 1771-1851 and Mrs. Isabella Lofton Phillips 1775-1852 are buried in the Phillips-Allen cemetery a short distance south of Sugar Grove Church. The latter was an ancestor of many Crittenden people, including the late Mr. Joseph N. Dean.

Col. Andrew Neel or Neal (the third name signed on the Tryon Association) was a son of Col. Thomas Neel 1730-1779, whose sister was Samuel Lofton's first wife. The Neels were commanding officers of James Clinton 1761-1847, who is buried at Piney Fork Cemetery with a tombstone and military marker, and of William Clark 1757-1834, both Revolutionary War soldiers and ancestors of many Crittenden Countians. William Clark is thought to be buried in the Kilpatrick Cemetery in an unmarked grave.

Perhaps it is worth pointing out that, of the 48 signers of the Tryon document, 47 signed their names. Only Moses Moore signed with an “M”.

Samuel Lofton's daughters, Margaret Lofton McDow, Sarah Lofton, Isabella Lofton Phillips and Eliza Lofton Phillips were all literate and articulate women. The early records at Smithland show that the illiterates were the exception, rather than the rule.

Crittenden County may well be proud that one of its own men had the courage to subscribe his name 200 years ago to the cause of liberty!

Gardening produces fresh vegetables, increases health

Celebrity chefs say people eat with their eyes first. Then, they serve up a deliciously crafted work of art on a plate. It may be true, but most of us use our senses of smell and taste to satisfy hunger.

Lots of people turn to salt as a fast flavor-fix for food. Table salt is 40-percent sodium, which is an important mineral for the human body. Problems arise when salt is overused, especially as a flavor substitute in bland foods and low-fat recipes. Excessive sodium in the diet is linked to high blood pressure, which can result in heart disease, kidney failure and stroke. Even though salt serves as the major source of sodium in the diet, the recommended maximum daily intake is just 2,400 milligrams or about 1 teaspoon.

Culinary herbs also enhance the flavor of food without the associated health concerns. They come in several forms; fresh, dried or ground. Volatile oils in fresh herbs are released into food as flavor and scent when chopped or cooked. Drying fresh herbs, especially in whole leaf form, concentrates these oils. Powdered or ground herbs initially release the highest flavor concentration but often have a shorter shelf life than dried herbs. A good rule of thumb is 1 tablespoon of fresh is equal to 1 teaspoon of dried or ¼ teaspoon of ground herb. When using dried herbs, rub the ingredient between your palms first to release volatile oils, and then add to food.

Here are a few common herbs and suggestions for cooking with them. Basil is widely used in southern European cuisines. It pairs especially well with fish, shellfish, eggs, vegetables and tomato-based dishes. Basil is an easy to grow annual available in many varieties and flavors. Italian basil is the kind most often found in dried and ground form at grocery stores. Basil retains good flavor when dried but loses depth when compared to fresh.

Oregano also is popular in southern European cooking and is considered essential to Italian cuisine. Use it to enhance tomato sauces, soups, salad dressings and bean and vegetable dishes. Drying brings out the best flavor and you can usually find oregano in this form. A perennial in most gardens, it is easy to grow once established. A good choice for growers is True Greek Oregano.

Parsley offers more than a garnish for the plate. This leafy herb has a distinct "green vegetable" flavor which punches up just about any dish. Parsley is especially popular in soups. Common species include flat-leaf parsley and curled leaf parsley. Parsley becomes bland and almost flavorless when dried, so use it fresh or freeze small quantities for cooking later. A self-seeding annual, parsley is fairly easy to grow but does best in cool weather and partial shade.

Thyme is an aromatic herb with widespread use in cooking. This woody herb contains high levels of volatile oils which means a little bit goes a long way. Thyme pairs well with poultry, seafood, beans, vegetable dishes and salad dressings. A perennial except in the coldest climates, thyme can be fussy when grown as a plant. Its many benefits for home cooks make it worth the trouble. Thyme retains good flavor when dried.

When using an herb for the first time, start with a small amount to find out if you like it. Here is a simple taste test. Combine ½ cup butter with 1 tablespoon minced fresh herb and let it sit for two hours to allow the flavors to mix. Spread on crackers or warm bread.

You can have fun experimenting with herbs and they can help you unload some of the high-salt, high-fat content in your diet.

Aurora native preaches at Piney Fork Cumberland Presbyterian Church

BY CHRIS HARDESTY
PRESS STAFF WRITER

Whether standing behind the pulpit or going for a ride on his 2004 Harley-Davidson low-rider, new Piney Fork Cumberland Presbyterian pastor Daniel Hopkins has a fervor for serving the Lord that cannot be hidden.

After accepting the Lord as his personal savior at the age of 14 at Hardin Baptist Church, the Aurora native did not always find it easy to stay on the straight and narrow path.

As is the case with many teenagers even after they get saved, Hopkins found himself not always giving the proper heed to spiritual things.

"I got out of church for quite awhile," he said.

The new Piney Fork pastor estimated that he got out of church for eight or nine years and quit caring about the things of God during that span.

"I thought I had better things to do and I realize that now," he said.

But fortunately for him, he began attending church once again with his parents at Unity Cumberland Presbyterian Church located in Hardin.

An avid lover of motorcycles, Hopkins has been employed by Town & Country Motorsports in Murray, Ky., for the last four years.

He surrendered to the ministry just over a year ago in April 2009, and he did not have to wait long for an opportunity to preach.

Harold Cannon, an elder at Piney Fork, contacted the Marshall County native about serving there in August of last year.

He accepted the church as pastor in April and has nothing but good things to say about his first pastorship.

Sunday attendance ranges from 25-35, whereas for Sunday night Bible Study the at-

Bro. Daniel Hopkins, 28, will be commuting with his wife, Keisha Hopkins, and sons, Hunter Basham, 7, and Brody Hopkins, 3 to Piney Fork Cumberland Presbyterian Church as the new pastor.

While having both Sundays and Mondays off from his job at Town and Country, it gives Hopkins a day to unwind from preaching before heading back to work for another week.

"The Lord has been good to us. I can't complain," he said.

Since beginning to fill in at the church on Hwy. 506, there have been a few Sunday nights that he has gaveback to fill in at his former home church in Hardin.

"Its always good to go back to my home church. We're doing the Lord's work and it never crossed my mind to leave Piney Fork," the new pastor said.

When asked to list his favorite moment during his time at Piney Fork, Hopkins did not hesitate to answer. "It's all been good. To watch the Lord work is an awesome thing," he said.

July 15 last day to file annual acreage reports

Kentucky Farm Service Agency is reminding producers to submit their annual acreage report to their local FSA county office by July 15 to meet FSA program eligibility requirements. Accurate acreage reports are necessary to determine and maintain eligibility for various programs, such as the Direct and Counter-cyclical Program and newer programs authorized in the 2008 Farm Bill. Programs include the Supplemental Revenue Assistance Payments Program, Average Crop Revenue Election Program, Livestock Forage Disaster Program, Tree Assistance Program and Emergency Assistance for Livestock, Honeybees and Farm Raised Fish Program. Acreage reports are considered timely filed when completed by the applicable final crop reporting deadline of July 15.

Wranglers Campgrounds hosts annual rodeo

Wranglers Campground at Land Between the Lakes is hosting its 14th annual Grand Jubilee and Primitive Rodeo July 16-17. Wranglers Campground is located five miles south of Golden Pond Visitor Center. The Jubilee is a celebration for all the horse lovers and trail riders who have made Wranglers Campground such a success during the past year. There will be children's activities and a visit from Smokey Bear. Half-price camping will also be offered on Friday and Saturday. J-N Rodeo Company returns to Wranglers Campground with events beginning at 8 p.m., for rodeo activities such as saddle-bronc and bareback riding, steer wrestling, calf roping, barrel racing, break-away roping and bull riding. "Primitive" refers to the informal atmosphere - Wranglers Campground does not have a permanent arena, so bring your own lawn chairs. Rodeo admission is $8 ages 13 and up; $5 ages 12 and under.

USDA provides emergency livestock assistance

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack has announced that disaster assistance is being issued to livestock, honeybee and farm-raised fish producers that suffered losses in 2008 because of disease, adverse weather or other conditions. The aid will come from the Emergency Assistance for Livestock, Honeybees and Farm-Raised Fish Program (ELAP). "American farmers, ranchers and producers should have protection from market disruptions and disasters," Vilsack said. "The assistance will be particularly helpful to beekeepers whose bees suffered from Colony Collapse Disorder (CCD) and will also assist other producers facing economic challenges."

Under the program, producers are compensated for losses that are not covered under other Supplemental Agricultural Disaster Assistance Payment programs established by the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008, specifically Livestock Forage Disaster Program (LFP), Livestock Indemnity Program (LIP), and Supplemental Revenue Assistance Payments (SURE) Program. ELAP benefits related to 2009 losses are expected to be issued later this summer. ELAP eligibility provisions have been amended for both honeybee and farm-raised fish producers. The modifications include allowing honeybee and farm-raised fish producers who did not replace their honeybees or fish that were lost due to a natural disaster to be eligible for ELAP payments based on the fair market value of the honeybees or fish that were lost. For more information about USDA Farm Service Agency disaster assistance programs, please visit your FSA county office or www.fsa.usda.gov

U.S. farmers plant record 78.9 million of soybeans

U.S. farmers planted 78.9 million acres of soybeans, exceeding last year's planted area by 1.4 million acres, or two percent, and setting a new record high, according to the Acreage report released today by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS).

Aided by favorable weather conditions early in the season, farmers in the Northern and Western Corn Belt and the Northeast increased their soybean acreage.

Record-high planted acreage was reported in Kansas, Nebraska, New York and Pennsylvania, while Minnesota and Oklahoma tied their all-time record highs. Iowa continues to lead all states in total soybean acres with 10.2 million acres.

Farmers also planted a near record-breaking 87.9 million acres to corn, up 1.4 million acres from last year but down one percent from March. This marks the second consecutive increase in planted acreage to corn and the second highest acreage on record since 1946, only behind 2007.

Illinois and Kansas reported the largest increases in corn acres with both states planting 600,000 acres above last year. While Iowa continues to lead the nation with 13.3 million corn acres, the state experienced a decrease of 400,000 acres from 2009. This drop is primarily attributed to the increase in soybeans planted.

The acreage report also shows an increase in cotton acres for the first time since 2006, due in part to advantageous weather and high prices. Farmers planted 10.9 million acres of cotton, up 1.8 million acres, or 19.2 percent, from 2009. Increased acreage was widespread throughout most of the Cotton Belt.

Despite the increases in corn, soybean and cotton acres, total U.S. crop area is slightly down, decreasing by 0.1 percent, or 360,000 acres, from last year.

NASS's acreage estimates are based on surveys conducted during the first two weeks of June on approximately 11,000 segments of land and from a sample of approximately 71,500 farm operators across the United States.

Avoid backlash by setting tension

LEE MCCLELLAN
KENTUCKY AFIELD

My grandfather had an old, huge saltwater Penn baitcasting reel spooled with black Dacron line attached to one of the earliest fiberglass rods. A large switch on the side of the reel released the spool to cast. Your thumb controlled everything.

It didn't have a spool tension control knob or adjustable braking like modern baitcasting reels. My grandfather would tie a casting dummy onto that antique rod and let the grandkids go at it in his back yard. My sister could cast better than my brother and me.

The first few times I cast that thing I marveled at my casting distance and paid no attention to my thumb. The reel blew up into a lump of black Dacron spaghetti when the casting dummy hit the ground. I would pick, prod and pull out the backlash or give up, cut the line and retie, only to do it all over again. I've struggled with baitcasting equipment ever since.

Early in my fishing career, I gravitated toward spinning gear because it didn't backlash and worked better with light lures. But, in the last few years, my baitcasting prowess improved significantly after I took advantage of the modern anti-backlash devices. Now, backlashes occur infrequently, even when I throw the unwieldy Carolina rig.

Backlashes occur to even the best baitcasters, but to cut them down significantly, make sure you use the technology of modern reels to your advantage.

The spool tension control knob usually lies on the right side of the reel (for a right-hand reel). Tie on the lure you plan to throw and press the button to release the spool. Adjust the tension control knob until the lure falls slowly and the spool stops spinning when the lure contacts the floor, boat deck or ground.

The spool tension control knob keeps the spool from spinning too fast at the beginning of the cast when the majority of backlashes occur. Another anti-backlash feature is an adjustable braking system usually located on the left side-plate of the reel (on right-hand reels). The braking system allows an angler quick adjustment for different lure weights to prevent backlashes. Heavier lures require more braking.

I learned early on that a pop of the wrist delivers extra distance when casting a spinning rod. Many other anglers learned this trick in their formative fishing years. It is a big reason why so many struggle with baitcasting equipment.

Use a lob style cast with almost all arm to let the baitcasting rod cast the lure, not your wrist and hands. Don't pop your wrist as you cast a baitcasting rod or a backlash will likely explode in your reel. Wrist pop causes the spool to spin too quickly at the beginning of a cast.

It is a totally different sensation than casting a spinning rod, so practice with short casts before moving up to longer ones. Rotating your arm during the cast until your thumb faces your chest at the end also helps prevent backlashes.

Spinning equipment is easier to use than baitcasting equipment, but problems with loops, tangles and bird's nests plagued me for many years until I learned a few tricks to keep them at bay.

Nothing is more frustrating than wading, floating or boating to a great fishing spot and hearing a swishing sound coming from your spinning reel on one of your first casts, looking down to see a giant bird's nest around your spool.

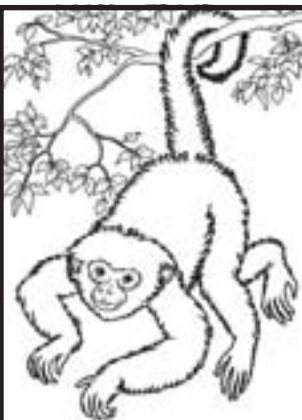

Line twist is the enemy of the spinning reel. It is the root cause of loops, tangles and bird's nests. Manually flipping the bail of your spinning reel after the cast greatly reduces line twist. Cranking the handle to close the bail not only increases wear and tear on the bail spring, it also imparts several twists on the line. Over the course of a fishing day, those twists add up.

Many anglers panic when a fish strikes and begins to pull drag. They reel furiously, ignoring their drag. Reeling against a slipping drag creates monster line twist on spinning reels. Let the line slip before reeling. Keep your rod tip high to maintain tension on the fish while allowing the drag to do its job.

Fishing line doesn't cost much, so replace it regularly and properly spool the line onto your spinning reel. Have a partner slip a pencil through the hole in the filler spool and reel the line onto the spool. Keep some tension on the filler spool with your partner's finger.

Electricity was out for about 4,500 Kenergy customers in Crittenden and surrounding counties for a period of time following the crash.

The pilot and crew had started spraying early Monday morning, at about 7 a.m., and was within an hour from being finished late Monday, said Philip Parish, one of the farm owners.

The crew had been working in the area for a week. They were staying at Days Inn in Kuttawa.

Corn in the field was about eight feet high. Witnesses said the crop duster would fly just over the top of the corn spraying, then lift just before it got to the power line. Part of the craft got entangled in the top line of the four-line overhead transmission line and fell about 55 feet from the nearest utility pole. The top line was snapped in two.

Peek said she had never been in a helicopter before and had asked for a ride last week. She admits she didn't know what to expect, but found the crew pleasant and accommodating for her request.

Vehicles belonging to first responders and crew members of the crop duster that went down Monday line up along a gravel lane leading toward the crash site. The helicopter crashed in the cornfield in the background, about 300 yards behind the metal quonset building.

“He was a very nice man,” she said of the pilot.

Watson's nephew was also working on the crew. The dead pilot has a wife and two adult daughters, according to another crew member.

They were notified after the crash and started toward Kentucky from their homes in Alabama.

Caldwell Springs Fire Department members were among the first on the scene.

One of the firemen, Travis Sosh, said the fire was almost out by the time they arrived. Responding agencies had to drive through the cornfield, pushing down stalks, to find the downed aircraft. Sosh said he had been working nearby and saw the explosion so he knew about where to find it. He called for help from his cell phone then went to the fire department about a mile from the crash scene and got a fire truck.

The accident happened behind Larry and Margaret Parish's home. Margaret heard the explosion, too, and called for her son, Philip. The craft went down about 300 yards behind their home.

The coroner said it was not immediately clear whether the pilot died on impact or from the explosion. An autopsy would make that determination.

Investigating agencies included Kentucky State Police, Crittenden County Sheriff's Department, Caldwell Springs Fire Department, Crittenden County EMS, Crittenden County Rescue Squad and the Crittenden County Coroner's Office.

Callaway new CCHS assistant

STAFF REPORT

Rhonda Callaway has been named as the new assistant principal at Crittenden County High School.

Callaway

Callaway, 46, is a native of Union County. She has dual master's degrees from Murray State in secondary education and administration and is applying to the doctoral program at Western Kentucky University. Her teaching background is in biology.

Callaway has been assistant principal at Crittenden Elementary School for the past year. Prior to that she had worked in the Union County and Owensboro school systems.

The decision to leave the elementary school was a difficult one, she said, however, her training and career strengths are in secondary education.

Callaway has ties to the Voss family of Crittenden County. She and her husband Mark have three children ages 17-26. She is a 1982 graduate of Union County High School.

She will be assistant under a new high school principal, Lori Phillips, who was the CCHS assistant principal last year.

Dousing Dust

Members of the Marion Fire Department hose down the demolition site on the corner of Main and Bellville streets Monday to keep down dust as Parker Excavating of New Castle, Ky., completes the razing of the former Hazzard building to make way for a new fire station. The contractor will be done in about a month and construction is expected to begin almost immediately.
