Hurricane Camp opens Monday

Hurricane Camp Meeting opens Monday and runs through Sunday of next week. An old-fashioned, non-denominational revival at an open-air tabernacle near Tolu, the camp meeting has been held for 122 straight years. Missionary and Marion native Steve English will be the evangelist throughout the nightly services, which start at 7 p.m. Dinner will be available each evening starting at 5:30 in the camp cafeteria.

Bobcats open play Friday at Marion

Marion Bobcats semi-pro baseball team will open its third season at 7:05 p.m., Friday at home against Farmington, Mo. It will be Farmers Bank Night and the first pitch will be thrown out by young Jaylee Champion, who is representing bank employees. Her mother works at the bank and Jaylee won a drawing to toss the first ball. The Bobcats play 3 straight home games against the Browns before going on the road.

Alyssa Qualls, a 2010 valedictorian, was inadvertently left out of a list of top graduates published in last week's Press. The error was due to incomplete information provided to the newspaper.

Access road still in budget; no water nor school funds

The Kentucky General Assembly passed a $17 billion budget during last week's special session, which includes deep cuts in state spending. Crittenden County will not be getting money to build a new middle school or water lines as called for in an earlier draft of the budget. However, local officials remain optimistic that funds will be released for a new access road to Industrial Park North and a new Department of Highways maintenance facility at the industrial park. Read more about the budget in Rep. Mike Cherry's column, page 2A.

Peoples, Underdown, Herron, Lewis honored

STAFF REPORT

For almost 40 years, Joe Yarbrough has been a community ambassador and civic leader. On Tuesday night, Crittenden County Chamber of Commerce honored the Marion insurance agency owner with its annual Person of the Year Award.

A graduate of Ole Miss, Yarbrough moved to Crittenden County in 1972 after marrying Marion native Susan Sullenger. He purchased the former Guggenheim Insurance Company and became one of the first presidents of the Chamber. Yarbrough remains one of the Chamber's longest serving members.

The merchant-based civic group also recognized The Peoples Bank with its Community Pride Award, largely for the bank's addition of a new branch on North Main Street. Bank President Terry Bunnell accepted the award on behalf of the employees and singled out those who played a major role in designing the new facility, namely Michelle Minton and Tammy Wallace.

Farm subsidies require new IRS disclosure form

STAFF REPORT

Farmers and landowners who receive farm subsidy payments for commodity, conservation, price support or disaster benefits, have less than two weeks to mail special forms to the IRS allowing it to verify your income to the USDA for eligibility requirements.

This affects anyone who receives farm subsidy payments, including CRP (Conservation Reserve Program).

Larry Orr, a certified public accountant in Marion and local farmer, says this is a relatively new law created by the 2008 Farm Bill.

Individuals must complete and mail form CCC-927 and farm entities

CRP payments could be withheld if form is not mailed to IRS by June 15.

must use form CCC-928. The deadline is June 15.

"If you don't file the form, you will be locked out of receiving farm program payments," said Orr, whose office has the forms and is assisting clients in completing them.

Forms are also available at Farm Service Agency office and on the Internet. They are not filed at the FSA office. They must be mailed to the IRS. The address is posted in the top right corner of the form.

The disclosure forms give the IRS consent to use and share your income information with USDA to determine eligibility for farm programs. The 2008 Farm Bill set limits on how much farms or individuals can earn in a year and still qualify for farm subsidy payments.

Orr says the limit on Adjusted Gross Income (AGI) is $500,000 non-farm AGI and $750,000 in farm AGI.

The IRS, by law, cannot share your income tax return information with anyone, including the USDA, without your consent. That is why these forms are required for future eligibility in farm subsidy programs.

The IRS will review your records and let the USDA know if you are under the AGI limits, over the AGI limits or if you need to provide further information, Orr said.

According to various online information, about six percent of the forms are being returned without being properly completed. Forms are relatively simple to complete, requiring only name, address, taxpayer identification number (social security number), the box to check that gives consent for the tax years for the IRS to review and a signature and date.

Orr says that based on his information regarding the forms, he is advising clients to check both 2009 and 2010 boxes in line 3 of the form.

Veterans are worthy of everything we can give

Another Memorial Day has passed to remind us of the great sacrifice so many have paid for all the wonderful blessings and freedoms we have enjoyed for the past 214 years.

However, we certainly are a sorry lot if we only remember all that just one day out of the year.

Every time we can drive from one county to another, from one state to another without having to show our passport should be reminder enough that we do not answer to the Crown of England, dictatorship of Hitler's Germany, Russia's ruthless rule or Shari Law of the Muslims all because of the horrible price so many thousands of our men and women have and are paying.

We are eternally indebted to all these heroes and always will be, even if we lose the blessed freedoms for which they fought and died.

How hard it must be on the living heroes and their families and especially the families of those who paid the ultimate price for the blessings of the greatest nation on earth they bought with their blood and tears to see so many of the blessings slipping away under unprecedented laws and ungodly morals.

It is a heartbreak for me, as I remember so well when WW II broke out, our young men and women would line up to enlist in the service knowing they all had a good chance of never getting to come back to the country for which they might die.

Those who are suffering from war wounds, and many languishing in veterans hospitals must have a hard time coping with seeing our U.S. Constitution they swore to defend and protect be shredded day after day by the powers that be who also took an oath to preserve, protect and defend the same.

Another thing that is being shoved on our veterans is the 52 page end-of-life planning document called

Your Life, Your Choices. This document subtly and not so subtly steers vulnerable individuals to conclude for themselves that life is not worth living.

Now, before anyone defending the powers that be blows their cork, please pull the 52-page document up on your computer and read it for yourselves. Do not take my word or the left's word for it.

According to an article by Jim Towey, in the Wall Street Journal last August, bureaucrats in 2008 at the Veterans Administration National Center for Ethics in Health Care promoted this book as the VA's preferred living will throughout its vast network of hospitals and nursing homes. After the Bush White House took a look at how this document was treating complex health and moral issues, the VA suspended its use. Unfortunately, under President Obama, the VA has now resuscitated Your Life, Your Choices.

The primary author of this workbook is Dr. Robert Pearlman, who is now chief of ethics evaluation for the center, a man who in 1996 advocated for physician-assisted suicide in Vacco vs. Quill before the U.S. Supreme Court and is known for his support of health-care rationing.

The circumstances listed include ones common among the elderly and disabled such living in a nursing home, being in a wheelchair and not being able to shake the blues. There is a section which provocatively asks, "Have you ever heard anyone say,

'If I'm a vegetable, pull the plug?'" There also are guilt-inducing scenarios such as "I can no longer contribute to my family's well being, I am a severe financial burden on my family" and that the situation "causes severe emotional burden for my family."

One can only imagine a soldier surviving the war in Iraq and returning without all of his limbs only to encounter a veteran's health-care system that seems intent on his surrender.

Mr. Towey said it did not surprise him to learn that the VA panel of experts that sought to update Your Life, Your Choices between 2007-2008 did not include any representatives of faith groups or disability rights advocates. And as you might guess, the only organization listed in the new version as a resource on advance directives was the Hemlock Society, the champion of suicide.

Mr. Towey stated that this hurry-up-and-die message is clear and unconscionable.

Worse, a July 2009 VA directive instructs its primary care physicians to raise advance care planning with all VA patients and to refer them to Your Life, Your Choices. This is not just for those of advanced age and debilitated condition – all patients.

The last statement in his column was "America's 24 million veterans deserve better" and with all my heart I concur.

Our veterans deserve the very best we can give them, especially the ones who fought in combat, and all those injured stateside or in combat abroad.

America, remember that the blessings we do not appreciate can be taken from us. That is Bible-proven true in history.

Stories from an old soldier

A good storyteller can make anything believable, but it is difficult to fathom the horror narrated by World War II author Micheal Freeland during his presentation last week at the Crittenden County Senior Citizens Center.

Freeland, a Hopkinsville resident, grew up in Henry County, Tenn., the same neck of the woods as myself, but many years earlier. While my own parents were in diapers, Freeland was off to Europe fighting the Germans and keeping a diary of his experiences as an Army medic.

What separates Freeland from more notable war historians such as Ambrose and others is that his stories are about the foot soldier.

"Since I went back to (Europe) in 2005, this has been my therapy, my mission to tell stories of these common soldiers, not the generals," he said.

Freeland told a group of about a dozen seniors who'd come to hear his speech in honor of Older Americans Month, and as a lead up to Memorial Day.

"Wars are fought by young men, like those from this county and others, who went off to war to fight and die. I watched boys skipping off to Europe fearless with a swagger in their step. Some never came back and many of those who did were gray and broken," he said.

There were four men in the audience who had served in the military. They knew Freeland was telling the horrific truth about war.

He told of one soldier in his outfit who lost two legs and declared it a good trade, because he was getting to go home. Another, he said, was shot through the face and while recovering went AWOL so he could rejoin his unit.

Another friend, whom he writes about in his book, was nicknamed Mississippi. A special forces soldier, Mississippi suffered a mental breakdown on the front lines from the stress of dodging bombs and German fire.

"He was crying out for Mama. The sergeant had him taken away. We called it a Section 8," Freeland recounted.

Although the pain behind the stories is evident on Freeland's face, you can see the purpose in his eyes. Through telling the accounts he penned in a diary over 65 years ago – true stories about real people – Freeland is able to complete what he calls a mission.

He does that in his book From Blood River to Burlin published in 2007.

Legislature adopts austere budget

It is difficult to feel pleased about much of anything as I sit at my Frankfort desk writing very late Friday night. Yet, I do, and I am glad to report that the House and Senate have passed a two-year budget for FY 2011-2012. We did so in a minimum amount of time – it takes at least five legislative days to pass legislation through both chambers. Using one additional day to complete the transportation budget, we finished in six days.

Still, the legislative system is designed for us to have a budget in place by the time we finish our even-numbered year General Assembly session in mid-April. This year there remained, as always, a number of unresolved bills, either because the House and Senate could not agree or time ran out before a compromise could be reached.

The most prominent of those, of course, was the state's two-year budget, which must be completed before the start of the fiscal year in July. Otherwise, according to a 2005 Kentucky Supreme Court ruling, only those services included in our Constitution or mandated by the federal government – schools, prisons, and Medicaid for example – can continue to receive funding in order to function.

The House had hoped to avoid this situation by offering a bare-bones plan in the regular session's final hours. This approach would have given us time to see if the economy continues to improve, and it would have let the governor make any necessary cuts, as he has done in the past, until the next legislative session in January 2011. This last-ditch effort was not agreed to by the Senate and the governor called us into special session this past week to complete the job.

Fortunately, House and Senate leaders reached a broad agreement heading into the week. That agreement maintains our goal of preserving classroom funding and replacing some of our worst school buildings, referred to as Category Five schools, while not placing an unfair burden on some of our most vulnerable citizens. In addition, postsecondary schools will only see minimal cuts, and there will be no lay-offs of career employees.

More specifically, the budget passed on Friday accomplishes these goals through cuts of 3.5 percent in fiscal year 2011 and 4.5 percent in 2012 for most state agencies – with lesser cuts for postsecondary education and corrections – increased government efficiencies, and limited new bond indebtedness (which means no newly authorized water or sewer projects for Kentucky communities this next budget cycle). Exempt from across-the-board cuts that most agencies will face are Medicaid, merit-based KEES scholarships earned by thousands of Kentucky high school students each year, and per-pupil funding that public schools receive through the state's SEEK formula designed to equalize education funding among school districts.

The two-year spending plan maintains all 177 instructional days currently on the public school calendar (with one day paid for by school districts and the rest paid for by the state), holds down additional general fund-supported debt, limits agency-fund debt for universities and other entities to around $515 million, adds around $20 million to the state's "rainy day" budget reserve trust fund, and allows the governor – if required to avoid lay-offs – to order very limited furloughs without disproportionately targeting lower-paid workers.

Added to the budget in the final hours of the special session was a mechanism for school districts to fund aging schools most in need of replacement. Under that plan, the state will match funding for districts that levy what is called an "equalizing nickel," or five cents per $100 in property value, to fund facilities construction. The money would only go to so-called Category Five schools, which are those facilities considered to be in the worst shape.

But make no mistake about it, this is the most austere budget I have seen in my legislative tenure and the old-timers say the same. It actually decreases state spending by some $1.5 billion over the biennium. There were no tax or fee increases of any form and the mostly across-the-board cuts will be felt. Other legislators and I are already hearing from dissatisfied constituents, agencies and organizations.

This is not a budget to crow about, but it lives within our means and, for what it is worth, remains far better than what many other states are facing.

Kentucky has seen a sliver of a silver lining in recent weeks. In April, unemployment dipped slightly, jobs increased for the second month in a row, and the total workforce was at its highest level in a year. State revenues continue to lag, but there was a bright spot in the report: sales tax receipts were up 8.5 percent, indicating that consumer confidence is returning. Another positive sign is that our road fund appears poised for long-term growth.

While the budget was the dominant issue of the week, it was not the only one. Also on the governor's call were items to help strengthen the state's unemployment insurance fund and to enable the state's bourbon industry to showcase its product at such special events as this year's World Equestrian Games.

The fix for the unemployment insurance passed both chambers and reflected a major agreement reached last year by the business and labor community. It will help businesses save up to $700 million over a decade and set up on a path to return the fund to a stronger financial position.

The bill to allow free samples of Kentucky alcohol products at special events passed the Senate but failed in the House and did not become law.

The final item on the governor's call, the transportation budget, was finalized Saturday when it passed both chambers with no changes to already announced road plans in our district.

So, another budget session has come and gone and the result is what I expected at the beginning – a bare bones budget with deficits covered by cuts and no new revenue. That is what I am confident the majority of you expected and, like me, would reluctantly agree to. My biggest regret is we did not get the budget done during our regular session, necessitating the expense of a special session. Because of this, I have decided to not accept my salary for this session and will donate it to selected charities.

Livestock on loose gets guilty verdict

STAFF REPORT

A local livestock farmer was found guilty last week in Crittenden District Court of two counts of allowing cattle to run at large. The jury set his fine at $5 per head. Fifty-five cattle were involved in the two incidents.

Robert Rhea, the farmer who lives on Wring-Grimes Road in the rural western part of the county, was fined $275 and ordered to pay court costs as well, for a total of $638. He was found guilty of the violation – an offense equal to a traffic citation – for allowing his cattle to get into the highway on Ky. 855 North and in a neighbor's yard and field.

Rhea did not hire an attorney. He represented himself at trial and told the jury that he'd done everything he could to keep the cattle in, including mending fences almost every day.

"Cattle get out, that's just the way it is," Rhea told the jury. "I shouldn't even be here. I have a cow tied to a tree right now that's getting ready to have a calf. I hope she's alive when I get back."

Testimony from his neighbor, including a piece of fence entered as evidence, alleged that his repair jobs were inadequate.

Rhea testified that he has always responded quickly when his cattle have gotten outside of their fence. The 68-year-old farmer, who said he'd run cattle on the farm for 15 years without incident, was wearing blue bib overalls and a long-sleeve plaid shirt as he made his case. He never denied that he cattle had indeed gotten out, but insisted that they didn't cause the damage alleged by his neighbor, David Loveless.

Loveless, his brother Dewey and his wife Connie, testified against Rhea. Two other neighbors, Mark Howard and Jason Wallace, also testified that they'd seen the cattle running at large.

County Attorney Rebecca Johnson told the jury there are laws to protect citizens and their property against livestock running freely, even in a rural county. She presented evidence and testimony, including photographs, that Rhea's cattle had gotten off of his property and into the highway and onto Loveless' property in November 2009 and February of this year.

Loveless said he'd tried to talk to Rhea about the matter, but was rebuffed. Loveless said he had been letting Rhea use his livestock trailer at no expense and would continue to do so.

"Bobby Rhea and I have always gotten along until this past year," David Loveless said, pointing out that the cattle issue had created strife in their otherwise neighborly relationship.

Johnson, in presenting the case to a four-woman, two-man jury, showed that Rhea's cattle had damaged Loveless' yard, leaving deep hoof prints; damaged his Ceresa Lespedeza crop field, from which he harvests seed; and created a hazard for motorists on the state highway, including the school bus.

"Cattle on the roadway is a serious hazard," Johnson said with emphasis during her closing argument.

The jury fixed Rhea's fine at the minimum possible. It could have fined him up to $25 per head. The case was tried in front of Judge Kenton Watson last Wednesday.

Jury believes woman stole phone

STAFF REPORT

A Marion woman was found guilty last week of stealing a cellular phone from a Cabinet for Health and Family Services case-worker's desk on March 3.

A four-woman, 2-man jury fixed Kayla Millikan's fine at $250 and ordered her to serve 30 days in jail. Court records indicate that Millikan had received a judicial diversion on a previous felony charge, which could be jeopardized by last week's conviction.

The case was tried last Wednesday in front of Judge Kenton Watson. County Attorney Rebecca Johnson prosecuted the case and Paul Sysol of Henderson was Millikan's court-appointed attorney.

Millikan did not deny that the phone was in her possession on March 4 when Police Chief Ray O'Neal went there looking for it. Millikan alleged that she was intoxicated from prescribed, legal medications on the day the phone was taken from caseworker Patsy Payne's desk, and if she took it, she didn't remember it.

Johnson called witnesses to testify with regard to Millikan's state of intoxication on the day the phone disappeared. A cashier at Five Star testified that she saw Millikan that day and she didn't notice her to be intoxicated. Likewise, Payne and Bill McMican, another case-worker, said they had no reason to believe that Millikan was anything but sober the day she came to the office in Marion seeking public assistance. After all, she had filled out the application factually and signed her name to it.

The jury was instructed to find Millikan innocent if it believed she was too intoxicated to have known right from wrong. Johnson went to great lengths during the two-hour trial to show that witnesses – one of whom alleged to have seen Millikan intoxicated before – believed her to be sober on the day she took the phone.

Edward D. Stone played important role in county

This is another article about one of our own Crittenden County folks.

Edward D. Stone, was one of six children born to Thomas and Mary Horning Stone. Edward was born in 1884 in the Repton community, where his parents lived. His father was a substantial farmer and a good citizen of the Repton neighborhood.

Edward was always interested in Crittenden County and made it his home, serving the community as county attorney for many years. He was also well informed of the history of the county.

In September 1941, Stone wrote the following article for The Press.

By request, I have prepared the following information about Crittenden County, which I trust may be of some value to those seeking the same.

Crittenden County was organized in 1842 from a part of Livingston County and was the 91st county formed in the state. Crittenden County is in the northwestern part of the state and is bounded on the north by the Ohio River and borders the counties of Livingston, Lyon, Caldwell, Webster and Union. Its 250,240 acres of land are made up of ridge land, lowland and undulating prairies, ranging in elevation from 330 to 750 feet.

The county has a splendid water supply – the Ohio River borders a distance of 30 miles, the Cumberland River 15 miles and Tradewater River 20 miles. There are many small streams in the county, such as Hurricane and Crooked creeks, which empty into the Ohio on the north; Livingston and Clay Lick, which flow southward and empty into the Cumberland River; and Piney, Long Branch and Caney creeks, which empty into Tradewater River on the northeast.

The surface is rolling and high, and the farming products are corn, tobacco, oats and wheat, and growing almost all kinds of grasses. Fruit growing is not very extensive, its largely for home consumption.

Timber consists principally of oak and hickory. The county has 1,777 farms with a value of land and improvement of $2,715,000 and assessed value of all property of $3,833,409.00, according to 1939 census.

Marion is the county seat and is a beautiful city with a population proper of about 2,235. The county has a population of about 11,675.

Education facilities

The county has 44 rural schools, four high schools. The city of Marion also has a splendid public school system.

Civic organizations

The Woman's Club and the Kiwanis Club are the civic organizations of the county. The Parent-Teacher Association is also a great force.

We are proud of our county and believe that Crittenden County stands in front rank among the 3,065 counties in the United States.

Edward Stone, after completing law school and then practicing law in Marion for several years, ran for county attorney in 1922 and was elected.

In the 1926 election he ran unopposed, in the 1930 election he was beaten by a small margin by Robert L. Moore, but then in the 1934 election he was re-elected for another four years. He was also elected for the 1938 term but was killed in a freak car accident in 1941.

***

Here is his obituary from the September 5, 1941 edition of The Crittenden Press.

County Attorney Edward D. Stone was struck by a car driven by Miss Lenora Dorothy Geisler, of Hammond, Ind., on Aug. 29 in the afternoon opposite his home on U.S. 60 near Winlow Park.

He was rushed to the office of local physician and then dispatched to Sturgis hospital. He died en route near Mattoon school.

A coroner's jury empanelled by Coroner C.T. Boucher returned a verdict "unavoidable" accident caused by car driven by Miss Lenora Dorothy Geisler. Jury members were A.H. Travis, foreman, J.H. Owen, T.F. Sigler, T.H. Rushing, C.W. Threlkeld and Robert Fritts. Driver of the car was not held.

Probably the only eyewitness to the accident was the nine-year-old son of Orville Driver. The youth was stationed near the scene, looking at the motorized caravan of the 5th Army, which was passing the Stone home.

Stone had crossed U.S. 60 and turned North, facing the South-bound caravan when he was struck. The front of the North-bound late-model Ford sedan did not strike him and it is supposed that his trousers or other article of clothing became entangled in handle of the right front door. The impact was sufficient to cause breaking of glass in both front and rear doors. Stone's left elbow was mangled, several ribs torn from the breastbone, fractured left jaw and other bruises.

Harold Stone, nephew, working on the official's lawn, heard the impact and was the first to reach him. A truck bearing officers of the 5th Army stopped and an officer advised that an ambulance be called immediately and not to move the injured. The same officer released articles clothing binding the body.

Edward Daniel Stone, 57, was born in the Repton community attended Going Spring School. After completing elementary work, he entered Post Oak Normal, then under supervision of the late W.K. Powell, and later was degreed in law from Cumberland University in Lebanon, Tenn.

After being licensed to practice, he opened Marion offices, continuing in private practice for several years, later being elected county attorney.

At time of death, he was completing his 16th successive year in the office and had been nominated for another four-year term. This was equivalent to election as Stone was unopposed in the general election. During years of private practice he was twice elected to the State Legislature.

He never married, his interests centered on education, youth and advancement of Crittenden County.

Hundreds paid respects to the deceased official at his home and during the funeral hour the church was unable to accommodate the throngs.

Funeral services were conducted at Marion Methodist Church of which Stone was a member, with Dr. H.H. Jones officiating. Interment was in Repton Cemetery.

Survivors are a sister, Mrs. W.H. Herrington, of Ashford, Ala.; three brothers, Rev. F. Duke Stone, of Memphis, Wm. D. Stone, of Detroit and V.L. Stone, of Marion.

Stone served his county well in his years in office and was well liked and respected by all that knew him. The Crittenden County Bar Association described him as an ethical, upright, absolutely fair and valuable member of the Bar Association.

Teach your young children well

There is a lot of hate and anger in the world today. Children have the ability to pick up on and imitate these upsetting and often difficult emotions from a young age.

There is a great advantage to teaching tolerance, acceptance and the appreciation of others' differences to children, often, and especially early in their lives.

Parents can help teach and encourage tolerance in children in a variety of ways. It is important to expose children to diverse groups of people and situations.

It is even better if children can grow up spending the majority of their lives in a diverse environment.

Simply exposing children to a broad range of people can build a foundation for tolerance.

Spending time in diverse settings is also powerful because it opens up the opportunity for discussion about differences that children may have noticed.

Allow children the opportunity to point out, talk about and ask questions regarding the differences in people and places.

Young children especially are naturally curious. They will probably feel more comfortable calling attention to variations than an older child.

Children of all ages need the help of trusted adults to carefully and respectfully answer their questions.

Adults should speak honestly and without bias when addressing dissimilarities between individuals and cultures.

Finally, adults should be careful to only share information that is age appropriate and helpful in building the child's knowledge and acceptance of others.

Bonnie and Don Pugh took The Press with them as they sailed the Sea of Galilee while on at tour of Israel.

The Press went with Blake Tabor, Kelly Williams, Belinda, Betty, Whitney and Eugene Williams, Sandra and Rick Hargrove, Ashtan and Greggor Park, David and Daniel Williams and Justin, Josh and Crystal Hargrove to the Smoky Mountains in February.

Scouts take in local history

Boy Scout Troop 30 and Cub Scout Pack 30 made a trip during their overnight camp out to Fort Donelson, which is the Civil War fort where General Grant seized control of the western river routes of the confederacy, cutting off vital supply lines to the South and dividing the western half of the South from the eastern half.

The National Cemetery contains over 1,000 men who died during the battle. Over 500 of those are unknown.

The troops also visited the cemetery as well as the original home where General Buckner of the confederacy surrendered to General Grant.

These two West Point graduates were friends prior to the war.

4-Hers put water knowledge to use

Submitted by Bonnie Baker

One goal of 4-H is to help young people understand their roles as citizens within their community. This year the 4-H Rocket Club has accomplished this goal by giving back to its school as well as the community.

The 4-H Rocket Club has been working hard all year, learning about water quality and the importance of wetland areas to the health of the environment.

Back in the fall, the club earned a Toyota H<sub>2</sub>O grant to help fund its project. As part of the grant the members attended lessons from the Project Wet curriculum as well as the 4-H science, engineering and technology watershed curriculum. With the help of Torey Earle, the University of Kentucky science, engineering and technology specialist for West Kentucky, the members learned how to teach a wetland class.

During an environmental camp that was held for seventh and eighth-grade Crittenden County students at the West Kentucky 4-H Camp, club members gave back to their schools by teaching a hands-on class about wetlands.

The members worked with over 80 students during this class. This gave the 4-Hers an opportunity to not only demonstrate their understanding of what they had learned, but also allowed them to gain workforce preparation skills such as speaking to a large audience, organization and responsibility. Many of the 4-Hers stated they now have a better understanding of what it takes to be a teacher.

They also gave back to our community through a beautification project at Lake George. Club leaders Sarah Ford and Donna and Larry Haire donated plants and all of the members worked to place them around the trees and monument at Lake George. The members learned about the types of plants that grow well in the environment and how to place them for best landscape impact.

By donating their time and effort, 4-Hers gain far more than they gave. They now have a better understanding not only of their environment, but their place within their community as well. The 4-H program continues to give youth opportunities to enrich their lives through projects like these.

For more information about this or any other 4-H programs, contact the Crittenden County Extension Office at 965-5236.

Free fishing all this weekend in Kentucky

Each year, the celebration of National Fishing and Boating Week includes Free Fishing Weekend. Anglers may fish in Kentucky this weekend, June 5-6, without a fishing license or a trout permit. All fishing regulations such as minimum size limits and daily creel limits remain in effect during Free Fishing Weekend.

This year, National Fishing and Boating Week runs June 5-13. The celebration aims to bring new people into fishing, boating and other water-related recreation.

"We also want to stress that getting outside and enjoying fishing is a healthy activity for kids," said Marc Johnson, aquatic education coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "It gets them off the couch."

Kids ages 15 and under may fish without a license or permit year-round. The Free Fishing Weekend allows their parents or family visiting from out of state to join them for free.

"There are many fishing events during Free Fishing Weekend, sponsored by the parks and recreation departments of towns all over Kentucky," Johnson said. "Check with your local parks department to see where fishing events are held."

In the area, there is a fishing tournament sponsored by the City of Grand Rivers and Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife. Call the Grand Rivers Tourism Department at 888-493-0152.

Complete fishing regulations can be found in the 2010-11 Kentucky Fishing and Boating Guide, available online at fw.ky.gov and wherever fishing licenses are sold.

Rate request questioned in light of KU being sold

Kentucky Attorney General Jack Conway has filed a motion to dismiss the pending LG&E and Kentucky Utilities rate increase cases because the utilities are being sold to a Pennsylvania corporation.

"This is the largest combined rate increase request in Kentucky history," Conway said. "If these utilities are being sold, the new company ... should have to make its case to the PSC."

LG&E and KU have requested a total of almost $250 million dollars in rate increases that would go into effect on July 31. The utilities want increases to recoup investments in a new power plant and costs incurred by recent ice and windstorms. LG&E and KU are Kentucky's largest providers electricity.

Police write multiple citations over holiday

Marion and state police wrote more than 60 traffic citations in Crittenden County over the Memorial Day weekend. Most were seat belt violations, but there were various other offenses including driving on suspended licenses and no insurance. Police made one arrest for DUI in Marion.

Marion Police Chief Ray O'Neal says motorists should be aware of the federal Click It or Ticket campaign that runs through Sunday, encouraging motorists to buckle up or be fined.

Statistics indicate that 398 (61.3 percent) of the 649 people who were killed in motor vehicles last year in Kentucky were not wearing a seat belt. When worn correctly, seat belts are proven to reduce the risk of fatal injury to front-seat occupants by 45 percent – and by 60 percent in pickup trucks, SUVs and minivans.

Despite a wealth of data showing that seat belts save lives – and also despite implementation of a primary seat belt law – Kentucky's 80 percent seat belt usage rate lags behind the national rate of 84 percent.

Adult, juvenile arrested on 2 burglary charges

An 18-year-old Marion man and a 17-year-old male juvenile face charges of first- and second-degree burglary for allegedly taking items from two homes in Marion shortly after midnight Friday. The two were apprehended by Marion police officers Chuck Hoover and George Foster.

Cody N. Sullivan, 18, and the juvenile are accused of entering a home on North Maple Street and taking a .22 rifle, compound bow, swords, CD player and other items. They are also accused of taking cigarettes from another home on North College Street.

Sullivan appeared in court Wednesday and his bond was reduced from $10,000 cash to 10 percent of the original bond.

Magistrates plan to complete chip & seal work this summer

Magistrates have accepted two of three sealed bids for chip and seal road work this summer. The Crittenden County Fiscal Court met in special session Friday morning to consider price contracts for repair and development of chip and seal roads in the rural part of the county.

Work on the roads is to be completed this summer. The county road department will prepare about 10-12 miles of road for resurfacing or first-time surfacing.

Crown Construction and Paving of Princeton and Don Russell Construction of Fredonia were the lowest of three bidders. Magistrates accepted both bids and will use which ever contractor is available at the time of need.

Cost will be about $8,200 per mile for double-layer chip and seal, the most common practice. Some single-layer may be done in some districts, which will lower the cost.

Crittenden County now on FEMA flooding list

Crittenden County and 18 other counties have been designated for Individual Assistance as part of Kentucky's federal disaster declaration, according to officials from the Kentucky Division of Emergency Management and the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

This announcement brings the total number of counties designated for Individual Assistance to 61. Livingston County was also among the latest additions to the list.

Individual Assistance for homeowners and renters can include grants to help pay for temporary housing, home repairs and other serious disaster-related expenses not met by insurance or other assistance programs. Also low-interest loans from the U.S. Small Business Administration are available to cover residential and business losses not fully compensated by insurance.

A man and woman were taken to the hospital last Wednesday, May 26 about 10 a.m., after a three-vehicle accident at the intersection of U.S. 641 and U.S. 60 in Marion. There were six people in two pickups and a car. According to police reports, witnesses and drivers of the two pickups, said that a Buick Regal driven by Christine Gregory, 46, of Marion failed to stop at a red light. As her car crossed the intersection it was hit from two directions by trucks driven by William Duncan Jr., and William Smith. Duncan's son, Hunter, was also in his vehicle. Gregory was taken to Crittenden Hospital and later flown to Deaconess Hospital in Evansville with broken legs and lacerations. A passenger in her car, Robert York, was taken to Crittenden Hospital and admitted. Duncan and his son were taken to the hospital. The father was treated and released. The son was not injured. Crittenden Rescue Squad had to extricate York and Gregory from the vehicle.

makes federal funding available to Commonwealth and local governments and certain private nonprofit organizations on a cost-sharing basis for emergency work and the repair or replacement of facilities damaged by the severe storms, flooding, mudslides and tornadoes that began May 1 in the counties of Bracken, Carroll, Crittenden, Franklin, Gallatin, Harrison, Lee, Livingston, Lyon, Marshall, McLean, Montgomery, Morgan, Robertson, Trigg, Union, and Wolfe counties. This brings the total number of counties designated for Public Assistance to 72.

Under this cost-share program, FEMA usually funds 75 percent of the cost for eligible work by Commonwealth and local governments and certain private non-profit organizations. Additional designations may be made at a later date if requested by the Commonwealth and warranted by the results of further damage assessments.

Disaster victims with damage, large or small, are urged to register for assistance by calling 1-800-621-FEMA (3362) or TTY 1-800-462-7585 for hearing or speech disabilities. The telephone lines are staffed daily from 6 a.m., to 9 p.m., until further notice. An application may be completed online at www.disasterassistance.gov.

Pathway Academy will host June 22 graduation

Crittenden County School District is getting ready to see its fourth class of Pathway Academy graduate on June 22. Pathway Academy is a program that gives potential high school dropouts a chance to earn a high school diploma, rather than a GED.

The current class will graduate three students.

Clay woman hurt in Wednesday wreck

Tonya Sandberg, 41, of Clay was injured in a single-vehicle accident shortly before 8 a.m., on Ky. 132 Wednesday morning. Deputy Greg Rushing said the driver of the Dodge Durango apparently fell asleep, ran off the road, went through a fence and came to rest against a pond levee. She was driving home from work in Princeton, the police report said.

Sandberg was taken by Crittenden EMS to Regional Medical Center in Madisonville.

Sizemore laughs when he tells about earning the Engineering Merit Badge.

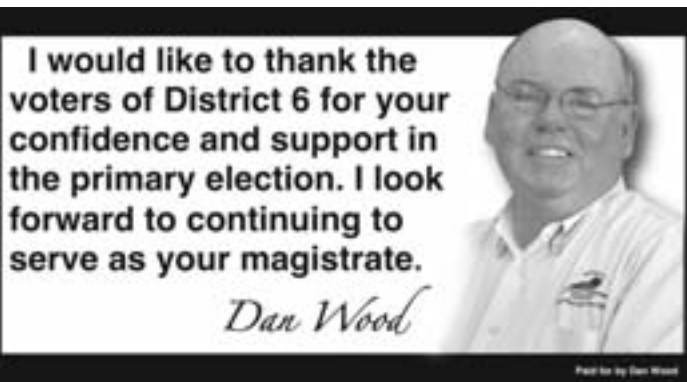

"We stayed a whole day in a classroom at Murray State listening to lectures from very dry, monotone voices," he said.

The most memorable badge on his chest came from First Aid Training earlier in his Scouting career at Camp Roy C. Manchester, where he now serves as a counselor. The instructor for that badge is now his boss at the camp.

Sizemore and a few of his fellow Scouts helped save a couple from carbon monoxide poisoning during a 2009 ice storm and thinks that will always rank among his most memorable, and cove-

Rockets drop opening game of region tourney

BY CHRIS HARDESTY
PRESS SPORTS WRITER

Faulty starting pitching, striking out 12 times and stranding eight baserunners were three huge problems in the Rockets' 6-2 setback in the opening round of the Second Region Tournament against Christian County Monday at Hopkinsville.

Rocket starting hurler Casey Oliver continually fell behind on the count to Colonel hitters in his brief two innings of work. In the first, he allowed three hits, two walks and one hits batsman and the Colonels quickly took a 3-0 lead.

He was not much sharper in the second, allowing two more hits and a walk as Christian extended their lead to a comfortable 5-0 advantage.

But he was not the only reason for the setback as Crittenden (18-14) had 12 strikeouts as four hitters struck out at least twice in the season-ending loss.

Rocket eighth grade sensation Travis Gilbert who finished the season 8-0, relieved Oliver in the third and restored some order to keep his team in the game. After walking the first batter he faced in that frame, he retired six straight hitters.

Still trailing 5-0 in the bottom of the third with two outs, leadoff hitter J.D. Gray walked to extend the inning. After stealing second, Oliver laced a hard-hit RBI-single to center field to get his team on the board, making it 5-1.

A single by Joey Pluskota and a walk to Alex Porter loaded the bases, giving them an opportunity to get right back in contention.

But Dylan Clark struck out to end the threat and a chance to put more pressure on Christian went by the wayside.

With that same score in the bottom of the fifth and the Colonels having dipped into their bullpen, Crittenden had another shot at making the game interesting.

Gilbert, batting in the number nine slot, led off the frame with a single. After a two-out walk to Pluskota, Porter came through with an RBI-double that plated pinch-runner Taylor Champion to cut the deficit to 5-2.

Unfortunately, they could not record a key hit in that inning either as Clark grounded out to first in the final at-bat of his high school career.

After Gilbert surrendered a leadoff double in the sixth, he retired six more in a row, giving his squad a chance for a late-inning comeback.

Unfortunately, a pair of Colonel relievers combined to fan five more Rocket hitters in the sixth and seventh, denying them a third consecutive opening round win in the Second Region Tournament.

While Rocket skipper Vince Clark did not fault his team's effort, their lack of execution left a bit to be desired.

"We had opportunities and we didn't perform," he said.

He lamented the 12 strikeouts as stranding eight runners and knew things like that could not occur if they had hopes of pulling an upset.

"We could have played better. That's what baseball is like," he said.

He thanked the seven seniors on the squad and knows they will be hard to replace in the future.

"They left their mark on Crittenden County baseball," Clark said.

Girls lose first ever Region appearance

STAFF REPORT

A scoreless nail-biter ended with a Hopkins Central stopping Crittenden County's dreams of a regional softball victory on Memorial Day in Hopkinsville.

The Lady Rockets (10-15) had earned their first ever berth in the Second Region Tournament Monday and had played like jewels until the final inning when The Storm plated the game's only run.

Sammie Jo Quisenberry pitched a superb game for 6 1/2 innings, keeping the Hopkins Central bats at bay. Had it not been for an injury to Crittenden starting shortstop Jessica Tinsley, the game might still be deadlocked.

The contest was tied at zero in the bottom of the seventh and final inning when Hopkins Central led off with a base hit. One out later, Crittenden was trying to turn a double play when Tinsley broke a finger. She was removed from the game and coach Glenna Rich made a substitute on the infield, sending Quisenberry to shortstop for defensive purposes.

Emily Owen went to the mound.

Hopkins Central followed the injury timeout with an RBI single to win the game.

Ironically, Crittenden had lost by 10 runs to The Storm earlier this season.

The Lady Rockets had four hits in the regional matchup. Their best chance to score came in the fourth when senior Torey Baker singled and reached third with one out, but was stranded there at inning's end.

Crittenden, runner-up in the Fifth District Tournament for the first time ever, will lose the services of three seniors from perhaps its best team in history.

Lost to graduation will be first baseman Baker, Quisenberry and second baseman Hannah Brantley.

The girls had surprised the district by earning a trip to Monday's regional tournament after finishing third in the regular season. They beat Lyon in the opening round of the district tournament last week. The Rocket girls were 8-8 at one point, but lost seven of their last nine games.

Weldon and friends are Bobcats die-hards

Submitted by Daryl Tabor

If measured in the number of games attended, Mike Weldon is one of the biggest fans the Marion Bobcats have.

For each of the team's first two seasons, Weldon and a regular group of friends have staked their claim to an area at the far end of the third base grandstand at Guess Field in lawn chairs.

"We have a lot of fun," said Weldon, who also volunteers his time as driver of the team van on road trips. "I really enjoy it."

This week, when the Bobcats open the season at home for the first time ever, the team will be able once again count on Weldon's support.

When you ask him what keeps him coming back to the park in the withering heat to watch a team that in its first two seasons has seen more losses than wins, the answer is rather selfless.

"I'm for anything that brings back something we had," said Weldon, who is too young to have witnessed baseball's heyday in Crittenden County in the first half of the 20th century, but is aware of the identity it can give a community.

"Now we have something to call our own again."

This will be the third year Marion will field a team in the KIT League, a collegiate summer league with players from colleges around the country. Though none of the players are local, for the two months of league play, they will give sports fans something to root for during a time when high school athletics are idle.

That's why businesses like Farmers Bank and Trust Co., who will host opening night with give-aways and handouts, have been backers of the franchise from the beginning.

"The bank makes a huge effort to support programs such as the Bobcats as well as other organizations and events," said Paja Crider, a marketing specialist with the bank. "These programs bring community members together, give our young people activities in which to participate and create an atmosphere that everyone enjoys."

"Atmosphere. That's exactly what we're trying to sell here," touts the team's founder and general manager, Gordon

Guess. "I've been saying that since Day 1."

Guess began putting the team together for its first season near the end of 2007, hoping to give rebirth to local baseball heritage and provide inexpensive summer fun that gives folks something to enjoy at home.

Friday marks the season's start, with the first pitch for against Farmington scheduled for 7:05 p.m. The series will continue on Saturday with a double header beginning at 5:05 p.m. The four-game home stand ends on Monday, with a 7:05 p.m., start against Fulton.

Tickets for adults remain $5, with children under 12 entering for only $3.

However, youth can get into any of the team's 26 home games for free if they wear their team's baseball youth league uniform.

"Baseball is still America's pastime," Guess said. "We're not looking to win a World Series here, but we'll give fans a dose of pastime."

For more information, a complete schedule and updates, visit the team online at MarionBobcats.com.

Adams and Robert Cudnik. The alternates are (back) Lasse Thunbo and Max Busch. The team competes at 2 p.m., at Owsley Frazier Cardinal Park at the University of Louisville.

Three former Crittenden County football players will be participating in the annual West Kentucky vs. Southern Illinois All-Star Football Game on June 11 at Murray State's Roy Stewart Stadium.

Recent graduates and members of the 2009 Rockets' regional finalist team J.D. Gray, Dylan Clark and Aaron Berry will play in the yearly showcase of area talent.

Gray, a quarterback, and Clark, an end, have signed letters of intent to play football at Lindsey Wilson College. Berry is a lineman and one of the top pass rushers in Crittenden County history. All three are Rocket record setters in various categories.

Soccer

CCYSA to host coaches' clinic

Crittenden County Youth Soccer Association is hosting a coaches' clinic at 9 a.m., June 12 at Marion City-Crittenden County Park soccer fields.

The clinic is for anybody interested coaching soccer for any age group.

Baseball

Former local pro to instruct pitching clinic

There will be a free All Pro Dad breakfast and pitching clinic at 8 a.m., June 12 at the Crittenden County High School multi-purpose room.

Josh Stewart, Livingston Central graduate, will be the guest speaker and instructor.

Stewart played college baseball at University of Memphis and was drafted in the fifth round by the Chicago White Sox in 1999. He played for them until 2005.

He played for the Florida Marlins in 2006 before retiring the same year due to an arm injury.

Stewart finished his degree at Murray State, coaches his five-year-old son's T-ball team and works at Ulrich Medical Concepts in Paducah while obtaining his MBA from MSU.

Memorial Day

Remembrance

4 area memorials honor service men and women

STAFF REPORT

A full schedule of Memorial Day tributes were on tap last weekend in Marion and the surrounding area. Four celebrations marked the memories of fallen soldiers, including events by American Legion posts in Marion and Burna, the Veterans Memorial and Walk of Honor at Blackford and at the Shady Grove Cemetery.

Each event held special significance for this year's observance of the Memorial Day celebration.

At Mapleview Cemetery in Marion, Rep. Mike Cherry, a retired naval officer, delivered a heartfelt speech praising those who have given the ultimate sacrifice to defend freedom and commending those who go the extra mile to remember those sacrifices. Supreme Court Justice Bill Cunningham was keynote speaker at Shady Grove where he recounted memories of his own experiences of the Vietnam War, being called upon by Washington to help identify remains of a soldier. He said that Memorial Day brings together this nation like no other holiday.

Providence attorney Daniel Heady was the speaker at Blackford, and at Burna the Legion placed 1,900 tiny white crosses on the lawn in remembrance of fallen soldiers.
