ONE DOLLAR 94 CENTS PLUS KENTUCKY SALES TAX

Magistrates pass lower tax

As compromise, magistrates cut new rate in half

BY CHRIS EVANS
PRESS EDITOR

An 11th-hour appeal from the community has prompted county magistrates to take half as much for a new tax that will go into effect July 1.

Magistrates voted unanimously Tuesday morning to amend their original ordinance, which was approved at first reading last month. The original plan was to create a new one-percent occupational license tax. Now, magistrates say they will ask taxpayers for only half that amount.

After nearly two hours of discussion, county leaders say they compromised with the public by cutting their original tax rate. Crittenden County Fiscal Court adopted a one-half of one-percent (0.5) tax on payroll and net profits.

Terms of the amended plan were forged across party lines. Magistrates Jeff Ellis, a republican, and Curt Buntin, a democrat, were among the leading voices behind the compromise. Each said comments from citizens at Monday night's public hearing had moved them to seek a reduction in the rate originally sought. Others magistrates were similarly affected.

However, Ellis and Buntin declared their intentions to seek other sources of revenue, as did other magistrates, in order to help the county meet financial obligations. Options will include higher property taxes and/or an increase in the insurance premium tax, which is now two percent.

"I listened to what the people said last night," Buntin told fellow members of the fiscal court before voting Tuesday morning. "They want us to spread it out. What I heard is that they don't want us to put the whole Dycusburg resident Paul Stinnett makes a point to county officials during Monday's public hearing regarding the then-proposed one-percent payroll and net profits tax. Stinnett made several comments, mostly opposing the tax.

0.5% Tax Facts

■ New County Tax structure goes into effect July 1 for workers and businesses.

■ Payroll Tax: All employers within the county are required to begin withholding on all workers a one-half of one-percent (0.5) tax on applicable gross wages starting July 1 and to make tax liability payments to the county at the end of the third quarter of this calendar year. First tax payments to the county will be due in October.

■ Federal Employees: Federal employees are required to declare gross wages and pay one-half of one percent (0.5) to the county each quarter.

■ Net Profits: Every person or business entity engaged in any trade, occupation or profession, or other activity for profit, or anyone required to file a return under this ordinance shall be required to buy a $25 business license by Aug. 29. Applications are available at the county judge-executive's office. If any information changes, such as address or status, the business is required to notify the county.

■ Who Must File Net Profits: If a business entity makes, or is required to make, a Federal Income Tax Return, the 0.5-percent occupational license tax shall be computed for the purposes of this county ordinance on the basis of the same calendar or fiscal year required by the federal government and shall employ the same methods of accounting required for federal income tax purposes.

■ Every employer required to deduct and withhold tax under this ordinance shall by Feb. 28 each year file a reconciliation of the occupational license tax withheld and provide either copies of W-2 and W-3, transmittal of wage and tax statements, or a detailed employee listing with the required equivalent information, as determined by Crittenden County.

Big changes for Frances area voters

Mexico Church is new election place

STAFF REPORT

When voters go to the polls Tuesday, those casting ballots in the Crayne, Mott City, Frances and Dycusburg areas will find some big changes.

Precincts 7 and 8 have changed. Crittenden County Clerk Carolyn Byford, who is in charge of elections, says last year's attempt to have two precincts at one location created too much confusion. So, they've been split once again and this time, those voters who have customarily voted at the Frances Liberty Lodge will not go to Mexico Baptist Church. Voters who traditionally voted at Frances Baptist Church will now cast ballots across the street at the lodge.

Last fall during the general election, those Precinct 8 residents who had normally voted at the church, were required to go across the street to the lodge, where Precinct 7 has been for many years. Now, Precinct 8 will get the lodge as its permanent location and those residing in Precinct 7 will vote closer to town at Mexico Baptist.

Byford said residents may call her office at 965-3403 if they have questions about where to vote. A simple test can help answer those questions, however. Ask yourself who is your county magistrate. If it's Donnetta Travis, you vote at Mexico Baptist. If it's Glenn Underdown, you vote at the Frances Lodge.

Most Dycusburg residents will have a little farther to travel this election. They vote at Mexico Baptist.

These are the only changes to polling places this year, Byford said. Polls open at 6 a.m., and close at 6 p.m. There are very few names on the ballot, which local leaders say will certainly curb voter turnout.

The only local race is in the republican primary for Crittenden County circuit court clerk. Longtime Clerk Madeline Henderson is not seeking re-election. Those seeking the post are Melissa Guill and Vanda Hunt Adamson.

Smart phones No. 1 killer of teen drivers

How'd I miss this one?

I guarantee it wasn't because I was on Facebook or feverishly texting like a middle schooler.

May 1 was "Don't be a Ding Dong Day," and I missed it. Yep, it was officially, "Stop the Texts Day."

It was sponsored by attorney generals in several states, including our own Jack Conway, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), and the Ad Council.

According to a national survey released by the Ad Council, 60 percent of young adult drivers (ages 16-24) say they have texted while driving. Honestly, I'd rather them have a poodle in the front seat.

This texting is out of control. People who text and drive are plain nuts. Their wicks don't stick out of the wax, as grandpa would say.

To educate young adult drivers about the dangers of texting while driving, state officials, consumer protection agencies and the Ad Council have revealed new public service advertisements (PSAs) featuring NASCAR driver Kasey Kahne. The new PSAs are being unveiled this month to coincide with National Youth Traffic Safety Month.

Let's not forget that young adults aren't the only offenders. I see middle aged folks making the same dangerous mistakes.

NHTSA reports that distracted driving is the No. 1 killer of American teens.

Get that?

No. 1 killer. Let's say it one more time, No. 1 killer.

So when we put one of these smart phones in their hands, I'm not sure who's more mindless, us or them.

"In 2010, more than 3,000 people were killed and an additional 416,000 injured nationally due to distracted driving," the Kentucky attorney general said in a statement released during don't text and drive week.

"I want Kentuckians to know that they are risking their lives and the lives of others when they text and drive. It is also illegal," he added.

Get, that one, too?

It's illegal.

There ought to be mandatory jail time like for DUI.

Texting and driving, or reading and driving is premeditated reckless driving.

Kentucky Revised Statute 189.292 – the law that prohibits texting and driving – became effective in July of 2010. The law also prohibits persons under age 18 from using a personal communication device while driving.

According to Kentucky State Police, there were 312 citations issued in 2011 for distracted driving. Fines for distracted driving citations are $25 (first offense) and subsequent offenses $50, plus court costs.

By comparison, there were more than that many DUI charges filed in the State Police Post 1 area of western Kentucky last year. The fine for first-offense drunk driving is from two to 30 days in jail, a fine from $200 to $500 and license suspension for 30 to 120 days.

In June 2009, Car and Driver Magazine conducted a test to see whose reaction times were worse, someone texting or reading, or someone legally drunk. In every aspect of the study, the texter and reader had much slower reaction time at 35 and 70 mph than did the individuals who were at 0.08 percent blood-alcohol content.

Please, I beg you, don't take those results to be an endorsement for drinking and driving. But, understand that results for smart phone use by drivers are so horrendously bad, we'd rather have that poodle we talked about earlier driving the car instead of riding in the passenger seat.

Texting and driving is indeed impaired driving and we should take it as seriously as we do drunk driving.

In 2009, more than 200 fatalities on Kentucky's roads and highways were blamed on distracted driving. The number of accidents pinned on inattentive drivers was 57,000. Again, by comparison, the following year there were 187 fatal accidents in Kentucky where at least one driver had been drinking.

Smart phones are killing more people on our highways than beer drinkers and pill poppers. Think about that.

When are we going to wake up and really crack down on this pervasive problem?

And we must not forget that this isn't just a teen problem. It's more widespread. A couple of years back I did my own visual survey about people talking on phones. It was incredible how many folks I met on the highway who were distracted by using mobile phones. Now, I will admit, phone calls are one thing, but typing and reading? Well, that's a blatant disregard for everyone else on the road.

Get off the smart phone if you're behind the wheel!

Pull off the road to text.

We can learn great deal from ant's persistence

Did you know ants are the undertakers of the insect world? Working like an army of tiny soldiers trained for military duty, they carry dead insects back to their nests. Although they can carry up to 20 times their body weight, the ant's abilities aren't due to phenomenal strength or some rare oddity of nature. Instead, research shows its productivity lies in three instinctive gifts: organization, unity and persistence. Mix those qualities with sheer huge numbers and the tiny insect ends up accomplishing unbelievable tasks.

A born leader, the female has a pivotal role in the colony's survival. Without a boss to guide her, she instinctively goes about her work making sure she has food available year-round. Besides her eagerness to work, she looks to the future, preparing her meat in the summer and gathering her food at harvest. The colony's growth and success depends on her ability to organize her unit.

One only has to watch the ant work for a short period of time to get the message – there is no room for slothfulness or idleness in the ant hill. More industrious than earthworms, they move and circulate the nutrient-enriched dirt that is vital to our ecosystem's health. In reality, we need them a lot more than they need us.

In the Bible, King Solomon uses the example of the ant to get his point across: "Go to the ant, you sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise." The scripture is clear. Laziness was a problem then the same as today.

For people, order makes for a clearer mind and a greater sense of self-esteem.

Nothing makes us feel better about ourselves than a clean house with everything in its rightful place. Just imagine how much we would get done if we had the ant's organizational skills.

Working in unity is a very important element for getting any job done. We've seen it a million times, especially during times of natural disasters. Caught off guard, people are desperate for help. It's difficult for volunteers and rescue workers to know where to start. Very little gets done until everyone puts their heads together and a plan is devised.

The dictionary describes "unity" as the state or condition of being one or the joining of separate things to form one. Many relationships in our lives depend on that kind of union. A husband or wife cannot go their separate ways and expect to have a successful marriage; a basketball team will surely fail unless they work as a whole; clubs can never raise vast monies for charities unless each individual member does his part. Uniting our efforts can produce unbelievable results. Division works just the opposite.

Abraham Lincoln quoted the same scripture, later referred to as the "house divided" speech, during the Civil War. The country was in trouble with one half holding on to slavery and the other half in opposition. He admonished the north and south to come together, but we all know what happened next.

Government has always understood the importance of unity. "United we stand, divided we fall," is the motto on Kentucky's state flag. Throughout our nation's history, the slogan has been quoted by leaders such as George Washington and Patrick Henry who urged our country to unite.

Whatever the job, the ant demands persistence. She doesn't let her tiny size hold her back. She faces challenges with the power of a bulldozer. Tunneling through rough terrain, she removes any obstacle that obstructs her path and continues along her journey.

We shouldn't be surprised. Females have always been at the heart of getting things done. My mom often recalls the old saying: "A man works from sun to sun, but a woman's work is never done!"

Calvin Coolidge, the 30th president of the United States said, "Nothing in this world can take the place of persistence. Talent will not; nothing is more common than unsuccessful people with talent. Genius will not; unrewarded genius is almost a proverb. Education will not; the world is full of educated derelicts. Persistence and determination alone are omnipotent. The slogan 'press on' has solved and always will solve the problems of the human race."

When we look at the verb "work," we see action. Nothing was ever built with idle hands. Our ancestors came to the United States, bringing their muscle and unfailing determination with them. In search of freedom, they brought what they could carry on their backs.

So, if we know what we need to do, what keeps us from accomplishing our goals? The fact is, over time, our lives become complicated and crowded. Getting out of sync starts small – a new baby is born, a teen leaves for college, you start a new job – one thing leads to another, and our world turns upside down, leaving us overwhelmed. That's when we need to take a look at our ant friend's techniques – get organized, work together and keep on keeping on.

Circuit judge accepts 2 guilty pleas

STAFF REPORT

Crittenden Circuit Judge Rene Williams last Thursday accepted guilty pleas from two individuals charged with felonies, set aside a pre-trial felony diversion against a local man and revoked probation of a Marion woman.

•Benjamin J. Williams, 37, of Marion was sentenced to three years in prison and Zac Greenwell, the commonwealth attorney, opposed probation. Williams pleaded guilty to third-degree burglary for entering a Marion home last spring owned by County Clerk Carolyn Byford and her husband.

•John W. Lynch 46, of Marion was ordered to serve two five-year sentences for felonies dating back to 2005 and 2006, one for receiving stolen property. Judge Williams set aside a pre-trial diversion provided to Lynch in the cases. His diversion was invalidated because Lynch violated its terms. He was arrested last year in Crittenden County on a charge of second-degree burglary. He is currently serving the time in the Christian County Jail. The sentences are to run concurrently.

•Trisha Little, 24, lost her probation and was ordered to prison after walking away from a treatment facility in Hopkinsville in February. A month earlier, Judge Williams had set aside Little's pretrial diversion on methamphetamine charges because Little had failed to report to her probation officer in October and November, and she had been charged with shoplifting in Paducah. This time, Williams said, the court's only option was sending Little to prison.

•James R. Hayden, 41, of Paducah pleaded guilty to being a convicted felon in possession of a handgun and enhanced possession of drug paraphernalia. The commonwealth recommended dropping two other charges for being a first-degree persistent felony offender and enhanced second-degree trafficking in a controlled substance. Hayden will be formally sentenced next month. The commonwealth has recommended a 10-year sentence on the possession charge and five years on the gun charge. The prosecutor will not oppose probation in this case. Hayden told the judge he has been working in ministry since getting into trouble.

She appeared to have some sympathy for the man, saying he was one of most pleasant people she ever had to consider sending to prison. However, she added that because of his past record, Hayden would qualify for a lesser penalty.

Co-worker thinks Guill best choice

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter to show my support to Melissa Guill for Crittenden County Circuit Clerk. I feel as though Melissa is the best qualified for this very important position. Having worked with Melissa in the circuit clerk's office for the past seven years, I can tell you that Melissa has a great working relationship with our judges, is very knowledgeable in all aspects of the day-to-day procedures of the courts and would make the transition to circuit clerk a very easy one.

Melissa has held the position of chief deputy for the past 10 years. Melissa is a dedicated, hard working and intelligent woman with strong morals. I believe that she will strive to make our office friendly and helpful to the public.

Having said this, there are now two things that you need to do. First, use your freedom to vote and go to the polls on Tuesday, May 22. Second, ask yourself would you rather have someone that is just qualified for the job or have someone that is not only qualified but qualified with 10 years of experience. I hope that you decide that the latter of the two makes the most sense and you vote for Melissa Guill on election day.

Lisa Beard

Experience key to Guill's qualifications

To the Editor:

In the upcoming circuit court clerk election, the choice is very clear – experience, experience, experience. Melissa Guill has the experience, in-depth knowledge of the job, commitment and high standards. Please realize what is best for the county and vote Melissa Guill on May 22.

Distinguished recognized at Friday ceremony

Commander made his mark in Iraq

BY CHRIS EVANS
PRESS EDITOR

By his own admission, Col. Scott Campbell was a slow starter.

His race through life and career has been run like a thoroughbred rather than a quarter horse. Out of the chute he stumbled a bit, yet down the stretch, he's been among the country's finest.

On Friday, he will be one of two Crittenden County High School graduates recognized as a distinguished alumnus.

Col. Campbell celebrated his 52nd birthday yesterday, tomorrow he celebrates his selection as one of the most successful graduates from the high school's 55-year history.

During his military career, Col. Campbell has been involved in some important operations, but receiving accolades from his original peer group ranks among his greatest thrills.

His latest military mission was perhaps his greatest, however – turning out the lights, so to speak, on U.S. military operations in Iraq last winter. Campbell was in command of the forces that completed the military pullout in December of forces at Victory Base Complex at the Baghdad International Airport. Victory Base was the last major military installation in Iraq. It had served as the headquarters for the Multi-National Corps and later headquarters of U.S. Forces in Iraq.

"It was surreal when we drove out of that camp," Col. Campbell said. "It was significant because we were withdrawing with honor, but leaving with our tails between our legs and looking over shoulder at a city burning."

Under Col. Campbell's command, 2,600 guardsmen from a dozen outposts across the commonwealth became formally known as Kentucky's 149th Maneuver Enhancement Brigade. The unit's completion of its mission on the prescribed timetable impressed military brass. Col. Campbell said.

Col. Scott Campbell

"A lot of senior leaders were amazed that a bunch of good old boys from Kentucky could transition the largest camp in Iraq on time," he said. "It's now in the hands of the Iraqi Army."

That camp was the first established when the U.S. entered Iraq in 2003 and the last to close in 2011.

Although the impact of that mission made international news, Col. Campbell says other more modest assignments have been just as rewarding from a personal sense. Campbell, who received his commission in 1984 after attending officer candidate school, earned his full-colonel eagle insignia in 2008 and he's earned two Bronze Stars and a couple dozen other medals and commendations. However, among the memories that matter most are the relationships he built with soldiers along the way.

The colonel, who has been a commander in Bosnia and twice in Iraq, travels back in time to one of his first leadership roles when he starts to discuss his greatest missions.

"The most rewarding was when I was commander in Hopkinsville," he says. "I had about 100 soldiers and got to know every one of them. At that level, I felt like I could really make a difference by exercising my leadership skills to pull together a functioning team."

The Hopkinsville unit was rebuilt from the ground up under Campbell's leadership and in 1990 it was selected as the best tank company east of the Mississippi River.

Although Campbell has a couple of shingles on the wall of his office – a bachelor's degree from Murray

State and a master's degree from the Army War College – there was a time when his life was not so squared away. He recognizes the military for changing that.

"At 19, I had quit college, was living at home, my car was not running, I had neither a girlfriend nor a job. At that point, I recognize that I needed something to give my life some direction. I needed something to jump start me and get me going."

That's when high school buddy Jeff Holloman, an ROTC student at Murray State, convinced him to join the national guard.

"It was exactly what I was looking for," Col. Campbell recalls.

Since then, Campbell has completed work on two degrees and his career has blossomed. In addition to his military work, Campbell has a civilian job as a military expert for Northrop Grumman Corporation. Between his duties with the Kentucky National Guard, working as a military consultant in the private sector and family obligations, Col. Campbell stays busy and focused.

"I attribute that to discipline learned in the military. It got me on track in most facets of my life," said the colonel.

Campbell says his wife, Linda, is the real trooper. Over the past 10 years, the army officer says he's probably been gone the equivalent of five years or more through active duty and travel with his civilian job. The couple has two children, one still at home and another in the military studying as a Korean linguist.

"I've missed a whole lot of birthdays and Christmases. Linda has practically been a single parent much of the last 10 years," he said.

Campbell has deep roots in the community. The 1978 graduate's family traces its beginnings here back to the 1840s, and many family relatives remain in Crittenden County. In high school, he played football and participated with the track and field team. He was raised in the Frances area and recalls fondly several teachers, including High Highfil, Dale Kirk, Eric LaRue, Pat Sobolewski and the late Sherry McDaniel and the late Roy Cherry.

There will be a formal luncheon at Rocket Arena Friday for the distinguished alumni. This is the second year the school system has honored graduates in this manner. Last year, Dr. Ken Winters and Dr. Michael Crider were selected as distinguished alumni. The following were recognized posthumously: Forrest Pogue, Julius Fohs and Ollie James.

Romance writer always blessed with strong will

BY JERRITT HOVEY-BROWN
PRESS REPORTER

As author of 14 romance and young adult novels, Trish Milburn has always known that writing was something she wanted to do. For her, it just came naturally.

Even at a young age, she often wrote stories based on favorite television shows. In the sixth grade, she recalls writing her first book – a cardboard and paper book titled "Land of the Misty Gems." To this day, Milburn has her cardboard book which tells the story of romance between a prince and princess.

"I guess you could say romance writing was in my future even before I knew it," Milburn said. "I've always loved stories with a happy ending."

Milburn will be among two graduates honored Friday during a distinguished alumnus luncheon at Crittenden County High School.

Graduating from Crittenden County High School in 1989 with honors, Milburn was known to friends and classmates as Patty Cash. She continued her education at Murray State University where she majored in print journalism. There, she was a staff member of the Murray State News and graduated magna cum laude in 1993. She landed a reporting job for the Tribune-Courier newspaper in Benton, working there until 1995 when she and her husband, Shane, moved to Nashville. Milburn worked in the marketing department of an insurance company until she found another journalism job a few years later at The Tennessee Magazine. Starting out as a staff writer, Milburn was the managing editor by the time she left in 2005, taking a break to focus on her fiction writing.

Milburn actually started working on her first manuscript in college, but set it aside after a time. It would be years before she would get serious about writing. The impetus came when she got involved with the local chapter of Romance Writers of America (RWA) in Nashville. Milburn was a charter member of Music City Romance Writers group, serving on the board of directors and several officer positions, including president for four years.

"This eventually led me to

serve on the national board of directors for Romance Writers of America, serving on the board for five years until I termed out at the end of October 2011," Milburn said.

In her first year with the national organization, Milburn was the PRO Liaison, helping writers who hadn't sold their manuscripts.

Still an active member of RWA, Milburn serves on the Leadership Development Committee, as well as her local chapter and other writers' groups.

Since becoming a member of RWA 11 years ago, Milburn has submitted various books to different publishers. Milburn has always dreamed of being an author. Despite a few rejection letters, she kept at it, continually submitted her manuscripts until two of her books finally sold in July of 2007.

"After a certain point, it comes down to perseverance," Milburn explained. "You have to hit the right editor at the right time with the right project."

The two books that sold were young adult titles, "Heartbreak River" and "Winter Longing," bought by Razorbill, an imprint of Penguin Young Readers Group. The stories were written under Milburn's now-retired pseudonym Tricia Mills.

Three months after selling the first two books, Milburn sold to Harlequin's American Romance line, contracting her first book, "A Firefighter in the Family." It was published in September 2008. Since contracting with Harlequin, Milburn has released seven novels, including this month's conclusion to the Teagues of Texas trilogy, "The Cowboy Sheriff." In February, Bell Bridge Books released, "White Witch," the first in Milburn's paranormal, young adult Coven trilogy. The second book in the series, "Bane," will be released later this month and the third, "Magick," will be released in September.

Milburn has also sold the first book in what she hopes will be a paranormal vampire series to Harlequin's Nocturne Line.

Milburn has self-published four books. Two are romantic suspense novels, one is a hybrid romantic suspense/adventure and one is women's fiction.

While romance novels seem to be her forte, Milburn enjoys writing a variety of other genres and sub-genres.

"It keeps things interesting and fresh," she added.

Bonita Hatfield, a member of the Distinguished Alumni Selection Committee, said Milburn was selected for recognition because of her drive to succeed.

"She's successful in her field, overcoming a lot, and that's why we felt she was deserving," Hatfield said. "She's a strong, young woman who has always been driven to succeed."

Surprised by her selection, Milburn felt undeserving.

"That's how I felt when I read about the people who have been awarded this honor before and the other honoree this year," Milburn said. "But then, I thought about it, and it was really cool to be included. I might not do something that is life-altering on the outside, but you never know when a book is going to get a reader through a tough day or a rough time in her life."

"It's always a thrill when a reader emails me or sends me a letter telling me how much she enjoyed my stories. When you live with your own stories for so long with only your best friends and family members reading them, it's sort of surreal when total strangers read your words and enjoy them. Surreal and very rewarding."

Because of her recognition as a distinguished alumnus, Milburn hopes that her story is a testament for other students. It's okay to dream big, she says.

"You can go anywhere and be anything if you just work hard enough, persevere and believe deep down that you can do it," Milburn said.

Residing in Nashville with her husband, Milburn is constantly working on new proposals for new trilogies, reviewing final pages, keeping up her blog and website TrishMilburn.com, and exercising.

She is the daughter of Edwinna Cash of Marion and the late John Robert Cash.

Proposal to maintain rural post offices includes reduced hours

STAFF REPORT

The U.S. Postal Service, under pressure from federal lawmakers, is proposing cutting back operating hours at post offices instead of closing them. The move would save more than 200 rural offices; however, it would mean fewer window hours for several in the area, including Crayne, Dycusburg and Fredonia.

The Postal Service projects losses of $14 billion this year and is asking congress for the go-ahead for a comprehensive overhaul law. But while the bill is still being considered on Capitol Hill, the Postal Service wanted to close 3,700 little-used post offices by May 15.

Lawmakers balked, with 43 senators writing the postmaster general asking for a moratorium, which was granted.

The Postal Service offered an alternative plan last Thursday to reduce the hours the post offices are open, from eight hours to six hours a day or as little as two hours a day, thereby saving $500 million.

The USPS thinks its new plan will keep the nation's smallest post offices open for business, while saving money and returning the struggling quasi-government agency to financial stability.

While hours would change for two Crittenden County post offices and others in nearby counties, access to their retail lobbies and to post office boxes would remain unchanged, and the towns' ZIP Codes and community identities would be retained.

"Meeting the needs of postal customers is, and will always be, a top priority. We continue to balance that by better aligning service options with customer demand and reducing the cost to serve," said Postmaster General and CEO Patrick R. Donahoe. "With that said, we've listened to our customers in rural America and we've heard them loud and clear – they want to keep their post office open. We believe this announcement will serve our customers' needs and allow us to achieve real savings to help the Postal Service return to long-term financial stability."

USPS closed Tolu Post Office last year amid other cost-saving measures.

The new strategy would be implemented over a two-year, multi-phased approach and would not be completed until September 2014. Once implementation is completed, the Postal Service estimates savings of a half billion dollars annually.

"The Postal Service is committed to serving America's communities and providing a responsible and fair approach for our employees and customers," said Megan Brennan, Postal Service chief operating officer. "The post offices in rural America will remain open unless a community has a strong preference for one of the other options. We will not close any of these rural post offices without having provided a viable solution."

The Postal Service will provide an opportunity for the Postal Regulatory Commission (PRC) to review this plan prior to making any changes. The Postal Service intends to file a request for an advisory opinion on the plan with the PRC later this month. Community meetings would then be conducted to review options in greater detail. Communities will be notified by mail of the date, time and location of these meetings.

This new option complements existing alternatives, which include:

- Providing mail delivery service to residents and businesses in the affected community by either rural carrier or highway contract route;

- Contracting with a local business to create a village post office; and
- Offering service from a nearby Post Office.

A voluntary early retirement incentive for the nation's more than 21,000 non-executive postmasters was also announced.

Survey research conducted by the respected Opinion Research Corporation (ORC) in February, showed 54 percent of rural customers would prefer the new solution to maintain a local post office. Forty-six percent prefer one of the previously announced solutions – 20 percent prefer village post office, 15 percent prefer providing services at a nearby Post Office, 11 percent prefer expanded rural delivery. This strategy would enable a town to possibly have a post office with modified hours, as well as a village post office.

The Postal Service has implemented a voluntary moratorium on all postal facility closings through May 15. No closings or changes to post office operations will occur until after that time.

New state motorcycle skills can be studied on YouTube

The Kentucky State Police Driver Testing Branch has posted a three-minute video demonstrating Kentucky's new motorcycle operator's license skill test on YouTube.

It can be accessed at Youtube.com/watch?v=k4jF-FJQcfs or by visiting the KSP Driver Testing Branch webpage at Kentuckystatepolice.org.

Developed by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation (MSF), the new test was implemented on May 1, and is designed to better determine if operators possess sufficient safety skills for riding motorcycles in traffic.

The new test expands Kentucky's current motorcycle skill test from two to four exercises, which must be completed on a closed course and evaluated by a KSP driver's license examiner.

The changes apply to both two-wheel and three-wheel motorcycles tests.

HALF TAX

thing in one place.”

More than 70 people attended the public hearing Monday at the Marion Ed-Tech Center regarding the proposed county occupational and net profits tax. About 20 people spoke out during the two-and-one-half-hour forum. All except one was against the new tax.

Of the people attending, about 50 were not affiliated with local government or the hospital, which stands to benefit from a tax through a subsidy for the ambulance service.

Many of those at the public meeting were small business owners. Marion's two largest manufacturers were represented. Joe McDaniel, chairman of the board at Par 4 Plastics; Jeff Waldrop, Invensys plant manager; and Jason Brown, Invensys human resources director, each spoke against the tax. They said it would be bad for their companies and their employees. Each made overtures about taking their companies or any further expansion out of the county.

Several said the payroll and net profits tax is unfair to the working class and asked magistrates to come up with another plan to raise revenue, something that would spread the burden over a broader group.

In the end, that's what will likely happen. Even though magistrates agreed to take a smaller amount from the new payroll and net profits tax, they made a formal commitment, voting unanimously, to raise property taxes when that option becomes available in August. The county's 2011 ad valorem property tax rate was 12 cents per $100 of assessed value. If magistrates keep their word, in three months they will bump that rate to somewhere around 12.3 cents per $100 of value. For most property owners, the increase will be minimal.

Judge-Executive Perry Newcom says it will likely take more revenue to balance the budget. In fact, Newcom will have to go back with his eraser and rework the county's FY 2012-13 budget, which had included receipts from a one-percent payroll and net profits tax. He had presented the budget to magistrates last month, when it appeared the county was on the cusp of approving the new tax at the one-percent rate.

According to estimates from county leaders, the one-percent tax would have generated about $488,000. Now, after passing a rate of 0.5 percent, receipts are projected at around $244,000. By upping the property tax, which will begin providing receipts this fall, the county should generate close to another $10,000 in new money. Together, all new revenue will be about $230,000 less than Newcom anticipated when he drew up the county's spending plan for the new fiscal year, which starts July 1.

What remains unclear is just how much of the new tax money will go to the ambulance service, whose financial woes were the primary impetus for raising revenue. Crittenden Health Systems' leaders have said their EMS shortfall is well over $200,000. However, some have indicated privately that $200,000 would likely be enough to keep the ambulances running for at least another year.

Newcom's new budget had included $150,000 for the ambulance service, and now, based on the 0.5-percent tax, he will have about half as much money to make sure that happens.

“This has been a hard thing for everybody and I appreciate your hard work,” Newcom told magistrates following their vote this week. “We will need to get with the hospital and make a determination of what level of funding we can support them with. We need to do that as quickly as possible. Probably by the next court meeting, so be giving that some thought.”

Although magistrates finally found middle ground on Tuesday, there were terse moments when it appeared the entire plan could fall through. It seemed as though the ordinance would fail in any form when magistrates voted 4-3 against a three-quarters of one-percent tax. Voting in favor of the plan were Donnetta Travis, Dan Wood and Newcom. Percy Cook, Glenn Underdown, Buntin and Ellis voted against it.

Even Jim Christensen, the hospital CEO, figured the proposal had collapsed, leaving the ambulance service in limbo. Christensen got up out of his seat and left the fiscal court meeting, saying he'd be back with the keys to the ambulance. Figuring there would be no funding for EMS, he insinuated that the hospital would no longer operate the ambulance service.

Judge Newcom was visibly frustrated, too, telling magistrates they had done a disservice to the community by not approving a tax plan to increase revenue.

A few minutes later, however, Ellis moved that the county consider the 0.5-percent tax, which passed. Ironically, a similar proposal by Magistrate Underdown had failed to gain traction over the past two months. Underdown made motions at the April meeting and again this week for a 0.5-percent tax, but he also included a stipulation that at least $200,000 go to EMS. His plan called for a review of the funding after one year. His motion died each time without a second.

Later in Tuesday's meeting, Buntin renewed discussion of a half-percent-tax, stating that he could support the idea if it didn't commit the county to a particular amount for the ambulance. From there, magistrates were able to reach a settlement they could each agree upon.

The new tax will go into effect July 1. Employers will begin withholding 0.5 percent from all employees' paychecks and making liability payments to the county each quarter. The net profits tax will begin July 1, too. Companies that have fiscal years ending between July 1, 2012 and June 30, 2013, will pay a prorated amount in the first year. They have until Aug. 29 to apply for a county business license.

Students may face more fees when school resumes

BY JERRITT HOVEY-BROWN
PRESS REPORTER

Crittenden County High School students may face new elective class fees starting next fall. The fees would range from $5 to $30 depending on the class.

The board of education has been considering the plan since it was proposed in March by Principal Rhonda Callaway. A final decision will be made on the matter when the board meets in regular session at 6 p.m., Tuesday at Rocket Arena.

During school board work sessions, details of the plan have been discussed. The board was initially asked to consider student fees in almost every class. Fees, according to Callaway, would be spent on supplies and learning tools used primarily inside the classrooms.

When Callaway first proposed class fees, courses included both elective and core content classes, but before a board work session last week, she had amended the proposal to only elective classes.

Some of the classes on the list include life skills, advanced art and agriculture construction.

Callaway has suggested a payment plan so parents wouldn't have to pay all at once. Some students could owe fees for several classes.

Twelve-year board member Bill Asbridge says he's having trouble supporting the idea.

“To ask that it be mandatory is something I don't agree with at all,” Asbridge said at last Tuesday's meeting. “I don't want a fee for a class to be a stumbling block to a child's education.”

Asbridge says burdening parents with further school fees is an issue, but so is dealing with issues that arise from non-payment of fees.

“Are we going to tell those kids they can't take that class if they don't pay?” Asbridge asked. “I just don't agree with turning a student away from a class because they don't pay.”

Superintendent Dr. Rachel Yarbrough agreed with Asbridge, assuring him and other board members that students wouldn't be excluded from classes, even if they couldn't pay.

“This is about seeing how we can help the high school recover some of the costs for the material and still supplying a quality education for our students,” Yarbrough said. “We would never exclude students because they can't or don't pay.”

Board members requested information about how schools in other districts handle school fees. Livingston Central charges a flat $60 student fee. That covers textbooks and materials. Caldwell County charges fees for classes, lockers and parking. In Union County, fees include $48 for textbooks, a $20 tech fee, $25 lab fee for advanced classes and $20 for parking. Webster County also charges a variety of class fees. Some are mandatory and others are not.

In some cases, schools waive fees if a student qualifies for free or reduced lunches. But some do not.

Kim Collyer, who has a child in high school, doesn't have a big problem with fees for elective courses. Collyer said she wouldn't mind paying a fee for a class like advanced art. In many cases, students have to provide materials for classes anyway.

“It kind of levels the playing field,” Collyer said. “If the teacher orders all of the supplies from the same place, then all of the students will have the same supplies.”

Collyer said fees for classes such as the life skills course would provide groceries for cooking assignments.

“I didn't feel like my daughter cooked nearly enough in that class,” Collyer said. “Being hands on in a classroom is how you learn and if I'm asked to donate class fees, I'm 95 percent okay with it. I just want teachers to be reasonable in their fees and be considerate of parents.”

STAFF REPORT

Crittenden Health Systems is seeking to strengthen its position as a health care provider by developing an Accountable Care Organization (ACO).

Through an ACO, the hospital would build relationships or partnerships between other hospitals and physicians in order to coordinate and deliver more efficient care, thus improving service and slowing the growth of health care costs.

Hospital CEO Jim Christensen characterized it as a plan to create partnerships with other providers. He told magistrates during their monthly meeting Tuesday that he is currently discussing a relationship with Western Baptist Hospital.

“Exactly what we're trying to accomplish is to see what player is the best fit for CHS,” Christensen told the fiscal court.

He also updated magistrates on issues regarding the operating room expansion. The project was supposed to have been completed months ago, but the contractor was fired for failing to meet contractual obligations. Now, there is a federal lawsuit as CHS tries to recover its losses. Additionally, the surety company for the contractor failed, complicating the situation. Christensen said the hospital's primary focus is protecting equity in the work that has been done to this point. Financing has proven elusive as the hospital has tried to move forward with the project. Now, the CEO says the plan is to “build a shell” over the work that is completed, in order to protect what's been done to this point. The building would not be functional as an operating room, however.

Christensen said financing for that is the first objective.

•In other fiscal court business, magistrates approved a plan to buy three new motion-sensitive cameras. The cameras – like hunters use on animal trails – will be employed at strategic locations across the county where road signs are being stolen and illegal dumping is prevalent. Cost is about $100 per camera.

•Judge-Executive Perry Newcom said the county has selected four roads for improvement through the county flex fund. The state has allocated $222,000 for the work.

Irma-White, Sugar Grove Church, Blackford Church and Rudolph Chandler roads have been identified as those in need of immediate repair. Newcom said Brown School Road is also in bad shape, but there likely will not be enough money to repair it this time.

Summer academic programs provide opportunities for students

BY JERRITT HOVEY-BROWN
PRESS REPORTER

Two Crittenden County High School juniors have been accepted into the Kentucky Governor's Scholar program this summer.

Devin Clark, son of Vince and Alicia Clark, and Bobby Knox, son of Dennis and Donna Knox, will spend five weeks on a college campus getting to know other Kentucky high school juniors while balancing a busy academic schedule with co-curricular activities.

To be eligible for the program, a student must have taken the ACT, PSAT or SAT in the ninth, 10th or 11th grade and be a Kentucky resident.

Inspired by friend Madison Travis who was accepted into the program last year, Clark became interested in applying to the program, receiving encouragement from both his parents and high school teachers.

"Everyone was extremely helpful, encouraging me every step of the way," Clark said. "I really want to thank my teachers Greg Hollamon, Kim Vince, Deonna McCord, Howard Suggs and our guidance counselor, Stefanie Hardin, for not only writing letters of recommendations for me, but also being very supportive."

For Knox, his inspiration came from his older sister, Casey, adding a little fuel to the sibling rivalry.

"I wanted to try to one up her," Knox said. "But in all seriousness, it's a good scholarship opportunity to be able to be involved in something like Governor's Scholar."

Clark

Both Clark and Knox are active not only in the classroom, but also outside of school. Both juniors play starting varsity positions for the Rocket football and basketball teams. While trying to balance coursework and practices, Clark said it wouldn't be possible without the help of teachers and coaches who encourage and promote putting forth an effort in school.

"Our teachers here in Crittenden are really good and they make sure that we as students work hard," Clark said. "It isn't easy to have a busy schedule but it's something that you have to work at to make sure you stay on top of everything."

"Our teachers do an amazing job at pushing us to do well, as do our coaches," Knox added.

Although both students often can find balancing school, sports and a job difficult, they still rise to the occasion. Although neither one know which campus they will be heading to this summer, it will be the first time either has been away from home for a long period of time.

"It's nerve-wracking but exciting," Knox said. "I can't wait to meet new friends."

Also accepted into a summer program was Ellen Merrick. She will be going to Transylvania University for three weeks, participating in the Governor's School for the Arts. Unlike Governor's Scholar, the School for the Arts is strictly focused on all forms of art including drama, music, theater and creative writing. Out of 1,700 students that apply, only 224 are accepted, and Merrick was among the lucky few.

Since she was young, Merrick knew that she wanted to do something that involved acting.

"I enjoy the audience reaction to a character," Merrick said. "I love to get in front of people and become this whole other person. It's fun to transform."

Merrick has been involved in many theatrical plays, including being involved in the Purchase Player's Oklahoma! and a few Market House productions in Paducah. Earlier in the school year, Merrick even tried her hand at directing the high school's play, The Princess and the Pea.

"I think it's good to be involved in all aspects of putting on a play," Merrick said. "I enjoyed directing."

Knox

The three-week program is what Merrick refers to as a sort of bootcamp.

"It's really intense and you're always busy doing something," Merrick said. "I'm excited to be a part of this."

Merrick

As school ends and summer is officially welcomed, Clark, Knox and Merrick will be busy preparing for their busy summers. Excited to not only have the opportunity to be involved in the summer programs, all three are anxious to meet new friends and learn more about themselves.

Volunteers needed for Caldwell cemetery work day

STAFF REPORT

A cemetery work day has been scheduled for Saturday, by the Caldwell County Cemetery Board at the Dollar Cemetery located on Ky., 902 East about three miles east of Fredonia. The location is within one mile of the Crittenden County line.

The board, formed in 2004, is tasked with identifying, restoring and preserving the county's abandoned and neglected cemeteries. Many known cemeteries in Caldwell, Crittenden and surrounding counties lack the perpetual care funds necessary for proper maintenance. Volunteers are sought to help preserve these cemeteries for future generations.

The Dollar Cemetery is located on the farm of Wayne Allen Prowled. It is believed that the cemetery was started by members of the DeBoe family in the early 1800s. According to cemetery record books, there are approximately 70 marked graves, at least 25 sandstones and several unmarked graves. The first documented burial is that of Martha Ann Riley, the two-year-old daughter of Stephen and Mary "Polly" Riley. She died Oct. 15, 1841. Other early burials are Sarah Felker with a death date of Dec. 28, 1843, and Jasper Dollar with a death date of July 4, 1850. The last known burial is that of Robert Logan Shinall in 1945. Surnames of families buried there include Crayne, DeBoe, Dollar, Guess, McCaslin, McChesney, Riley and Shinall. The majority of these families have descendants still living in Caldwell and Crittenden counties.

Persons interested in joining Saturday's cleanup effort can meet at 8 a.m., Saturday at the intersection of Ky., 902 East, Dollar Road, and Echo Valley Road east of Fredonia.

Well-known men of Crittenden County in 1894

In August of 1894, a special edition of The Crittenden Press was published and in it were many interesting articles. One section was pictures and information about some of the well-known businessmen in the county. Here are some of the men and the information that was featured in that section.

Hon. F. M. Clement
Francis Marion Clement was born on a farm in Crittenden County, Sept. 21, 1828. His father, Isham Clement, came from Prince Edward County, Va., in 1818, and settled on the Kentucky river. In the year 1819 he moved to what is now Crittenden, settling near the vicinity of where Fred J. Clement now lives. Hewing out of the forest a home for himself, he endured the many hardships incident to pioneer life.

Before leaving Virginia he had married Miss Sallie Clark Rudd. To them 12 children were born, the youngest of whom is the subject of this sketch.

F.M. Clement had very little school advantages, attending only the very primitive country schools. He worked on the farm all his life, making a regular, hard working hard, during all the younger years of his life. After reaching his majority, he began life for himself on a farm. Later he speculated in tobacco and at one time made considerable money; reverses came as they do to trades, and he lost all, but with the courage and willpower that makes the indomitable man, he soon retrieved his lost fortune and has been a successful farmer and trader ever since.

He now owns one of the best farms in the county, raises grain and stock extensively, and his splendid country home, seven miles from Marion, is one of the most hospitable in the county.

Years ago, the people among who Mr. Clement was reared, realized his sterling qualities and great worth as a citizen and a patriot and in 1882 prevailed upon him to become a candidate for the State Senate. He won the nomination easily, and in the final election defeated J.W. Orr by over 1,000 majority. Last year when a strong candidate was needed to overcome the combined opposition, he was nominated over several gentlemen and easily defeated Mr. Isaac Linley of Livingston County.

In public life Mr. Clement is a tireless worker, and uncompromising in his devotion to what he thinks is right; no constituency ever had a more faithful servant. He is a strong Democrat. As a private citizen he has all the good qualities that enter into the good man, and faithful friend.

His obituary reads: Feb. 18, 1909. Frances Marion Clement, one of the county's best known and most prominent citizens died Tuesday morning, Feb. 16, 1909, in his 81st year. Mr. Clement is the last survivor of a family of 12 children, all his brothers and sisters having preceeded him to the grave. Mr. Clement's wife who was Jordena Kirkpatrick has been dead over 30 years. Mr. Clement had always taken great interest in public affairs and no enterprise which looked to the up-building of the community in which he lived failed to receive his help.

Mr Clement had never offered for public office but few times. He was elected to the state Senate in the 80's and represented this district with distinction to himself and credit to his constituency. (Francis Marion Clement is buried with his wife, Jordena Clement in the Hill Cemetery, near Fredonia in Caldwell County.)

Thomas J. Yandell, Jr.

One of the best known men in the county is Thomas J. Yandell, Jr. He was born in this county in 1859, and was reared on the farm. He is a son of Mr. John A. Yandell one of the pioneer citizens of the county. His mother was Margaret Crouch Yandell.

At the age of 20, Thomas Yandell left the farm and began teaching in the public schools. In 1886, he was elected assessor on the Republican ticket defeating a popular man by a handsome majority. In 1890, he made the race for county clerk, but was defeated by a very small majority. In 1890 he sold his farm and embarked in mercantile pursuits. On May 10, 1892, he accepted the position of assistant cashier in the Marion Bank which position he still holds.

On Jan. 19, 1887, he was married to Miss Katie Franklin. Mr. Yandell's acquaintance extends over the county, and the people not only appreciate his business qualities but hold him in high esteem as a citizen. As a teacher, as a county official and as a bank officer he has endeared himself to the public and he is readily classed as one of the leading young men of this section.

The people of Marion are pleased that he has purchased a home here and invested in the bank as a stock holder. Such men increase the substantial, material standing of a community, and it is a good day for the town when they decide to cast their lot with it.

(Thomas J. Yandell died Sept. 8, 1934 and he and his wife are buried in the Mapleview Cemetery. His obituary reads: T.J. Yandell died at his home on East Bellville St., Sept. 8, 1934, after an illness of short duration. He was 75 years of age. Mr. Yandell's knowledge of banking and financial affairs caused his judgment to be followed and adhered to by all who consulted with him for advice. He was a leader in all civic and community enterprises and movements, giving unselfish support to any program in which would be of benefit to this community.)

Green B. Crawford

He is the present Democratic nominee for sheriff of Crittenden County. He was born in Livingston County, in 1847, and was raised on a farm. He attended the public schools, getting a fair common school education.

In 1870 he went into a store as clerk and there attained experience in a business way. Later he married and settled on a farm, and since that time he has devoted himself exclusively to farming, and in that line he has been successful, gathering around those comforts and conveniences that come to the energetic, careful farmer.

He owns a farm in the Tolu vicinity; there where he has lived and labored so long, he has the respect and esteem of all, and warm friendship of many. As a good citizen he has few superiors.

This year he was prevailed upon to accept the democratic nomination for sheriff, his party knowing his superb qualification for the office and his high standing as a citizen. He stands as a representative of the best citizenship of the county, honest, industrious, capable and appreciative of the obligation to duty. Green B. Crawford as a citizen does honor to the county.

(Mr. Crawford died March 20, 1922 and is buried in the Mapleview Cemetery. His obituary reads: Green Berry Crawford was 74 years old, and the son of the late William Crawford. On April 4, 1870 he was married to Fannie M. Croft, daughter of Thomas S. and Almira Croft of Tolu. To the deceased and his good wife, who survives him, was born three children, William and Blanch who are dead, and Clara, the surviving child who has been spared to comfort her aged mother in this hour of bereavement.)

Green B. Crawford

J.F. Flanary

J.F. Flanary was born on a farm in Crittenden County Oct. 14, 1855. He is a son of James M. Flanary, who died some 20 years ago, leaving a wife and nine children, the care of which fell chiefly to the subject of this sketch. With these responsibilities upon him he has been a hard worker, toiling on the farm to support those thus left of his cares. All who know him know that he was faithful to this trust.

In 1882, he was the Republican nominee for corner, and elected by a handsome majority. In 1886 he was re-elected. Four years ago he was a candidate for the Republican nomination for assessor, and was defeated, but he has assisted in listing the property of the county every year since then. This year he won the nomination and is now asking the people of the county to elect him. He is an honest man, an industrious, good citizen, and if elected will make a capable officer.

(Mr. Flanary died May 18, 1909 and is buried at Mapleview Cemetery. His obituary reads: James Fidella Flanary, familiarly known as "Dellar" died May 18, at his residence on West Salem St. after an illness extending over three months. He was stricken with typhoid fever and afterward dropsy and cirrhosis of the liver. Mr. Flanary was born in this county where he lived all his life. He was married on the 14 day of last October to Miss Olive McConnell who survives him.)

Was Humphrey Marshall the ‘resigningest’ Rebel general?

Submitted by Berry Craig

Rebel Gen. Humphrey Marshall of Kentucky was a legend in his own mind.

On this date in 1862, he figured his recent victory over the Yankees at the little battle of Princeton, Va., now West Virginia, was big enough to earn him a big command.

The Rebel brass kept him in southwestern Virginia. So he threatened to quit.

He followed through in June 1862. But Marshall changed his mind, returned to the army and resigned for good in June 1863. He wound up the war back in politics, as a Confederate congressman in Richmond, Va., the Rebel captain.

Marshall's ego was as big as his belly. He was one of the portliest generals in the Civil War. Born in Frankfort in 1812, Marshall also stepped to his own drummer, like his famous grandfather, Kentucky pioneer Humphrey Marshall Sr.

Early Kentucky was staunchly Jeffersonian. But Marshall Sr. was a rock-ribbed Federalist. He was also an avowed atheist who fought a duel with Henry Clay, Kentucky's most popular politician ever.

Marshall Jr. was a Whig and "Know Nothing" congressman before the war and was also U.S. minister to China. But he supported proslavery Southern Democrat John C. Breckinridge of Kentucky for president in 1860.

Though Kentucky refused to join the Confederacy, Marshall (and Breckinridge) did.

A West Point graduate and Mexican-American War veteran, Marshall became a Confederate general in 1861. So did Breckinridge, whose military career was considerably more illustrious than Marshall's.

Gen. Humphrey Marshall

Marshall could be persuasive. He recruited several Rebel soldiers in devoutly Unionist eastern Kentucky yet was less successful as a battle captain. Brigadier General James A. Garfield, a future president, beat him at the Battle of Middle Creek, in Floyd County, Ky., on Jan. 10, 1862. Marshall had to retreat into southwestern Virginia.

Marshall's loss and the Confederate defeat at the Jan. 19, 1862 Battle of Mill Springs, in Pulaski County, Ky., enabled the Union army to win eastern Kentucky and subsequently drive into Tennessee.

Marshall was back in uniform in time for him to join General Braxton Bragg's ultimately unsuccessful invasion of Kentucky in the summer and fall of 1862. After Bragg lost at Perryville on Oct. 8, 1862, and left the state, Marshall saw no more significant service.

He was evidently a more effective politician, though he represented a state that never seceded. Created in Nov. 1861, Kentucky's Confederate "government" had no legal standing and represented the minority viewpoint in every region of the Bluegrass State except the far western Jackson Purchase, dubbed "Kentucky's South Carolina" for its deep Confederate sympathies.

In the Confederate House, Marshall "distinguished himself...as a debater and an orator, equaling similar honors achieved by him previously in the Congress at Washington City," according to William B. Allen's 1872 History of Kentucky. "He belonged to a family which has added luster to our state and country – in the senate, upon the bench, at the bar, and before popular assemblies." He was distantly related to John Marshall, perhaps the most famous chief justice of the Supreme Court.

Marshall was one of many politicians turned generals on both sides in the Civil War. Most of them didn't do especially well on the battlefield. Breckinridge and Union Gen. John A. Logan, a Murphysboro, Ill. native, are among the exceptions. (Breckinridge was also a Confederate secretary of war.)

On April 28, the congregation and guests celebrated the 200th anniversary of Piney Fork Cumberland Presbyterian Church, the oldest known Cumberland Presbyterian church within the boundaries of the Synod of the Midwest, consisting of five states. Members and distinguished guests of the Synod held their yearly business meeting during the morning hours. The worship and communion service was led by the General Assembly Moderator, Bro. Don Tabor. A historical presentation of the Cumberland Presbyterian church was given by author Matthew Gore. In the afternoon, county historian Brenda Underdown presented a PowerPoint of the 200-year history of the Piney Fork Church. Sidney Milton, in heritage dress, shared little known facts of the history of the domination. The booklet, "History of the Piney Fork Cumberland Presbyterian Church 1812-2012," was available. These booklets can be purchased at the Historical Museum at 124 East Bellville St., open from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m., Wednesday through Saturday. County cracking down on illegal dumping on Loop

STAFF REPORT

County leaders say they're going to start prosecuting illegal dumpers who are leaving household refuse and other large items at the community debris dump on Bridwell Loop.

The dump is for natural wood debris, said Crittenden County Judge-Executive Perry Newcom.

Over the past several days, Newcom said someone has left garbage and other large items such as a fiberglass boat and television frame. He's asked the sheriff to track the source of the illegal dumping through serial numbers or other identifying marks on the items and to charge those responsible.

Sheriff Wayne Agent said he's been asked by county officials to keep a close eye on illegal dumping there. Those caught will be prosecuted to the fullest extent, he said.

Conservation District offers stewardship cost-share funds

The Crittenden County Conservation District will be accepting requests for cost-share funding under the Kentucky Soil Erosion and Water Quality Cost Share and Environmental Stewardship Program. Deadline to apply is June 15.

The Kentucky Soil Erosion and Water Quality Cost Share Program along with the Environmental Stewardship Program are created to help agricultural operations protect the soil and water resources of Kentucky. These programs were established by the Kentucky General Assembly in the 1994 and 2000 and over the 17 years of these programs approximately $120 million has been approved to plan, design and install much-needed best management practices on approximately 14,200 farms to protect soil resources and water quality.

These annual cost-share funds are administered by conservation districts with priority given to animal waste related problems and agricultural district participants where pollution problems have been identified. Initial funding for the program will be provided by the Kentucky Department of Agriculture and now also utilizes the Tobacco Master Fines for illegal dumping can reach $500, plus court costs.

Newcom said electronic surveillance is one of the options the county is considering to catch those dumping there. The site is located near the entrance of the old county landfill.

The area was opened in 2009 after the ice storm. It has remained open as a convenience for residents, Newcom said.

Only organic, natural material, such as limbs, trees, shrubs or plants, is allowed at the dump, which is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week. There is no charge for that kind of material.

The county has a convenience center for household trash and other items, even recyclables. The convenience center is located on U.S. 60 East just past the livestock market. It is open Monday through Saturday.

Settlement Agreement Funds.

These programs are administered at the state level by the Soil and Water Conservation Commission and the Kentucky Division of Conservation, located in Frankfort. Applications are ranked statewide and approved for funding based on available funds.

June 1 deadline for various FSA programs

Kentucky producers are reminded that June 1 is the deadline for enrolling in the 2012 Direct and Countercyclical Program (DCP), Average Crop Revenue Election (ACRE) Program and the Supplemental Revenue Assistance Program (SURE).

This is a statutory deadline for all participants in these programs.

A significant number of farms eligible for the 2012 DCP/ACRE programs have not enrolled and these producers need to be aware of this deadline, said John W. McCauley, executive director of USDA's Kentucky Farm Service Agency.

All signatures of producers receiving a share in DCP/ACRE payments are required by the deadline. The election for ACRE for 2012 can be made any time before June 1. If a farm has an ACRE election from a prior year, the farm remains in the ACRE, however producers must still complete the annual enrollment process by the deadline.

"It is important producers contact their local office to set up appointments well before this deadline to ensure all required signatures and documents have been obtained for DCP/ACRE, as well as for the SURE program," McCauley said.

The Supplemental Revenue Assistance Program (SURE) which provides benefits for farm revenue losses also has a June 1 deadline. Losses due to natural disasters that occurred during the 2010 crop year may be eligible for this sign up. SURE is available to eligible producers on:

The description provided herein was provided by the parties and is contained in the Judgment and Order of Sale.

1. The Master Commissioner will sell same at public auction to the highest and best bidder at the Courthouse door for cash in full or a cash deposit of 10% of the purchase price with the balance on credit for thirty (30) days, except that said deposit be waived if the Plaintiff is the successful bidder. Said deposit shall be applied to any expenses occasioned by default of the purchaser. The purchaser(s) shall have the privilege of paying all the balance of the purchase price prior to the expiration of the thirty (30) day period. The successful bidder shall be required to give a bond with good surety for the unpaid purchase price with said bond bearing interest at 12% per annum from the date of the sale until paid and shall have the same force and effect as a Judgment and shall remain and be a lien on the property until paid. In the event Plaintiff is the successful purchaser, Plaintiff shall be entitled to a credit upon the Default Judgment without making the cash deposit or executing the sale bond as described above and shall only be obligated to pay the Court costs, fees and costs of the Master Commissioner and any delinquent real estate taxes payable pursuant to the Order of Sale.

2. If the purchaser shall cause default of the deposit or posting of bond, the Master Commissioner shall immediately resell the property upon the same terms and conditions set out herein.

3. The Purchaser shall take the real estate free and clear of the claims of the parties to this action, including the additional interest of the Plaintiff in the mortgage recorded on September 29, 2005 in Book 161 at Page 155, and all liens and/or interests arising by virtue of instruments which are recorded in the Crittenden County Clerk's Office, or otherwise arise, after the recording of the Plaintiff's Lis Pendens notice, but the property shall be sold subject to the following, for which the purchaser shall not have a credit against the purchase price:

a. All state, county and city real estate taxes not yet due and owing at the time of sale;

b. Easements, restrictions and stipulations of record;

c. Assessments for public improvements levied against the property; and

d. Any facts which an inspection and accurate survey of the property may disclose.

The purchaser shall be required to assume and pay any ad valorem taxes and all taxes assessed against said property by any City, State, County or any school district which are due and payable at any time during the year 2012 and thereafter. Said property shall be sold with the improvements thereon "as is" and is indivisible and cannot be divided.

4. Pursuant to the aforementioned Default Judgment, the successful bidder, their own expense, carry fire and extended insurance coverage on those insurable improvements included in the real estate described herein from the date of the sale until the purchase price is fully paid, to the extent of the Court appraised value of said improvements or the unpaid balance of the purchase price, whichever is less, as a minimum, with a loss payable clause to the Commissioner of the Crittenden Circuit Court or the Plaintiff herein. Failure of the purchaser to effect such insurance shall not affect the validity of the sale or the purchaser's liability thereunder, but shall entitle, but not require, the Plaintiff to effect said insurance and furnish the policy and the premium thereof or the proper portion thereof shall be charged to the purchaser as Purchaser's costs.

5. The purpose of this sale is the satisfaction of a Default Judgment entered on April 12, 2012 on behalf of the Plaintiff against the Defendant, Stella Mae Holloman, for the following sums as of February 21, 2012:

Inspections:	$135.35
Property Maintenance:	$705.00
BPO/Appraisal:	$250.00
Late Charges:	$23.85
TOTAL:	$32,658.77

6. In afore-mentioned Default Judgment, entered April 12, 2012, the Plaintiff was granted a first mortgage lien against the real estate described above together with all improvements thereon, appurtenances thereto belonging, and the rent, issues and profits thereof. Plaintiff's lien is to be prior and superior to the interests of Stella Mae Holloman and/or the unknown spouse of her in the subject real estate property and the real property shall be sold free and clear of any interest of said Defendants, except any lien for city, county and state ad valorem taxes asserted in this action.

10. Plaintiff may submit a specified bid by facsimile to the office of the Master Commissioner prior to the sale.

11. The proceeds of the sale, or a sufficiency thereof, shall be applied to the following items in the order of priority:

e. The balance of the sale proceeds, if any, shall be held by the Commissioner of this Court until further Orders of this Court.

12. The purchaser of the real estate is entitled to possession of the real estate upon confirmation of the sale by the Court.

13. Upon confirmation the Master Commissioner shall issue a Deed conveying the interests of the Defendants in the subject property to the successful purchaser.

Rockets lose despite playing fairly well

Although Crittenden County (10-19) had lost four of its last five games before the start of this week, the Rockets had played some pretty good baseball. In fact, all of those losses had come against teams with winning records.

Crittenden lost a couple to Hopkinsville and then to Murray in one of the best games of the season.

The Tigers, who came into the game with two straight losses despite being one of the better teams in the First Region, finally won the pitching dual after eight innings.

Murray's John Lollar and Crittenden's Devin Belt both pitched a complete game, but Lollar eked out the win after throwing a two-hitter. Belt surrendered just four hits and struck out seven.

The teams were scoreless through six innings until Murray's Austin Adams scored on a bases-loaded pass when Grant McDonald was hit by a pitch.

Crittenden tied it in the home half of the seventh with Lollar two outs away from a no-hitter. Zac Knight drove in Aaron Owen, who reached on a walk, to knot the game and force extra innings.

In the eighth, Murray (18-11) got the go-ahead run on an error by the Rocket third baseman.

Lollar struck out 11 Rocket batters and only gave up one walk.

Crittenden played Hopkinsville close in two games last week. The Tigers won 4-1 at Hopkinsville Thursday, then beat the Rockets at home 6-3 on Saturday.

Rocket center fielder Wes Evers had two hits in the first meeting and scored the club's only run. Travis Gilbert pitched the entire game and allowed just one earned run on four strikeouts and a walk.

In Saturday's matchup, Crittenden got two hits from Gilbert and singles from Owen, Bryce Willis and Noah Dickerson. Gilbert, Willis and Devin Belt scored the team's only runs.

Against Fort Campbell earlier last week, the Rockets walked 12 times and lead 12-0 before the Falcons came to life and made it close down the stretch. Eli Bebout had two hits and went 3.1 innings for the victory.

The Rockets ended up with the No. 1 seed for next week's district tournament after winning a coin flip to break a tie with Livingston Central.

Relay for Life yields great turnout; meets monetary goal

STAFF REPORT

Relay for Life was held Friday at the Marion-Crittenden County Park, and event coordinator Sue Padget said that she was beyond pleased with the turnout.

Around 13 teams participated in Relay for Life, raising money for the American Cancer Society and celebrating those who have fought the battle of cancer and survived.

The monetary goal for the event was $34,500, according to Padget but as of Monday afternoon, the final total was $38,844.

"We were $4,300 over our goal and that's wonderful," Padget said. "I was very pleased to see everyone who showed up and helped to make this event a success. I think that it was even bigger than last year's and the money raised proves that."

Held from 5 p.m., Friday night until 5 a.m., Saturday, teams and volunteers enjoyed the night by playing games, music and lighting luminaries and sending sky lanterns into the night sky in honor or memory of a loved one.

Clockwise, American Cancer Society Area Director Stephanie Elder and event coordinator Sue Padget honored long-time Relay for Life supporter Frank Blackburn with the Spirit of Hope award. Blackburn shared duties with Padget as coordinator until he began his own battle against cancer ; Vicki Belt and Beverly Sherrell light their sky lantern, waiting for it to fill with hot air before releasing it into the night sky; and Terry Burnell, president of The Peoples Bank, was forced to kiss a frog during Friday's event after participants donated money to see it happen.
