Watchful eye monitoring Main Street

Part of the technology brought to Main Street with construction of the new fire station is a surveillance camera. The inconspicuous camera, mounted on the side of the new station, is capable of panning 360-degrees and toggling up and down. It is operated and aimed remotely from Marion Police Department. Dispatchers can watch the constantly-streaming video, which is also archived on a hard drive for a particular amount of time, allowing investigators to go back and search for clues to crimes on the digital video if necessary.

Pond stocking is planned for lake near park

The City of Marion is planning to add some particular breeds of fish to the lake on public property off Old Morganfield Road near Marion-Crittenden County Park. The city consulted the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife, which did a shock survey at the lake to determine what type of fish was needed to give it a vibrant population. City Administrator Mark Bryant said fish and wildlife officials found plenty of game-type fish in the waters. Grass carp and a few other types of fish will be added, he said.

Bobcats swingin'

The Marion Bobcats, collegiate summer league baseball team, will open its season Friday at Madisonville. The club will play its first home game Sunday 2:05 p.m., against Hopkinsville.

Crittenden graduate is vice chancellor

Combs second in charge at community college campus

STAFF REPORT

Steven Combs admits he wasn't the most studious kid in the school when he roamed the halls of Crittenden County High back in the early 1980s.

Call him a late bloomer. Dr. Combs began his new role as vice chancellor for academic affairs at Ivy Tech Community College

Columbus, Ind., two weeks

Combs spent a good portion of his childhood in Marion where his step-father, Ron Nelson, was supervisor of Crittenden County Farmers Home Administration from eighth grade to graduation in 1983.

A self-described military brat, Combs said he spent more time in Marion than most places. He is often in touch with classmates from here via social media on the Internet, and he fondly recalls a period he spent working as a pressman's assistant at The Crittenden

Among the multiple and broad responsibilities of his new position, Combs will provide vision, leadership, coaching and direction to all academic employees for the delivery of academic programs, the school said in a news release. He will also have responsibility for the inclusion of emerging technologies in program areas and for budgetary planning, partnership initiatives, enrollment management, community service activities and student retention efforts. Combs will also participate in the strategic planning process of the campus and will provide direction for accreditations and for dual credit, transfer and articulation programs with area secondary schools, col-

Station dedicated Saturday

The City of Marion dedicated its new fire station with a ribbon cutting ceremony Saturday. Marion Mayor Mickey Alexander said it was a day the entire community had looked forward to for many years.

"It's a terrific day for the City of Marion because we have wanted a new fire station for 20plus years. These firemen are dedicated. They love the community. They are deserving of this new station," Mayor Alexander said.

Marion Fire Chief Red Howton said the new station will offer many benefits.

"I never thought I would see a fire department like this in the city of Marion. We are all extremely, extremely proud of it," Howton said "We've got a place to train now. We've got a place big enough to work on our trucks. It's just going to make a world of difference in what we are able to do."

Howton said another benefit is having control of the signal lights at Main and Bellville streets when responding to an emergency call.

The ceremony also included the unveiling of the building's cornerstone which was donated and installed by Bill Fox and Billy Fox, owners of Henry & Henry Monuments, Inc. The stone was officially dedicated by local Masons.

Drought worsens, emergency burn ban issued

Severe drought may be on the horizon for Crittenden County and other parts of western Kentucky.

Because of dry conditions, County Judge-Executive Perry Newcom has issued an emergency burn ban.

The ban means there is to be no open burning at any time for any reason.

The county is more than 13 inches behind on rainfall this year and needs an estimated 10 inches to emerge from drought conditions, according to the University of Kentucky Weather Service.

"The ban is for day and night," said Marion Fire Chief Red Howton. "We need two inches of rain in one day for the ban to be lifted.'

The drought is also taking its toll on crops and livestock

The short-term forecast doesn't appear too favorable for a respite to the hot, dry conditions, which is prompting farmers to consider their options, says Charlie Hunt, owner of Marion Feed Mill.

"We've heard from people who are ready to sell their cattle herds because water is critical. You can buy feed and hay, but hauling water to cattle is almost impossi-

Hunt says farmers are also considering replanting corn that has emerged poorly because of conditions. Some may follow their early wheat harvest with corn planting instead of the more customary soybeans, he said. The good thing is it's still May, Hunt added, so there is still a window of opportunity.

What are our best suffering, dying for?

When Pearl Harbor was bombed we heard about it via an old 12-volt radio that was up every once in a while. We would hear that thousands of our young men were lining up all over America to enlist in the armed forces to protect our nation.

Then we would hear about thousands dying - and yet young men were still lining up to go to a far country they had never heard of in many cases. Later, as our young men's bodies were coming home draped in the American flag, more would still sign up.

It was 1941 and I was 12 years old when it started. I remember so vividly standing out in the front yard overlooking the Ohio River, looking up to Heaven and asking why in the world were men willing go to a foreign land and die for me whom they did not know? Why shouldn't I go and die for myself instead of sending someone else?

We began to hear of our own falling in battle. Mapleview is testament to our great loss. I did not get my answer until I was 32 years old, two years after I was born again and went around world. The abject poverty, paganism, heathenism, sin and degradation I saw in most of the countries I visited shocked my soul. I went first-class and many times food was scarce, and some so putrid I could not eat it.

We visited many of the memorials to our fallen men and women whose names were on marble walls in crater bowls and massive fields of small white crosses representing each of those who died in their particular field of battle.

Many were the tears I shed when I saw the poverty, suffering and starving children. There were lines of beggars in all sorts of physical condition and families stoking fires on the burning ghats at the riverbank in India where they were cremating loved ones. The scene caused me to cry out the word "barbaric. I covered my nose and got away from the gory

But my tears fell profusely at all the scenes of the little white crosses that seeemingly went on forever on the horizon. Some in our group would look for the names of their fallen loved ones and stand and sob when they were found. Again, I would say: "Why in the world would these men want to come over here and die in these Godforsaken places for a country they would never see again?"

We were gone for two months and two weeks, and when we were going to the airport in Rome on our way home, I was sitting behind the driver. He explained we were at that moment passing the ruins of old Rome buried 15 feet in the dirt.

It was at that moment God answered the question I had asked Him at 12 years old. Just as clearly as if a man was standing by me and said it, I heard these words, "The young men were willing to go and die in all this you have witnessed, so their love ones would never have to have these people make America like what you've seen."

Now, we have leaders, using anarchist - unlearned idiots – to help them turn America into a nation like the ones our brightest have been dying and wounded for

If they see the election is not going their way some terrible things will take place to win, wars in our streets, election canceled and Marshal law enforced. There are too many in this country who hate America and want to control all the rest of us and will do all it takes to win.

My stand is, an America that has 51 percent of its people supporting same-sex marriage is not worth any more of our young dying for. I'm for all our service people coming home and let us all fight and die for ourselves.

If God does not answer many of His people's prayers and convict and save a bunch of people soon, His wrath will fall. Remember Sodom and Gomorrah! He put a death sentence on that evil, and one on all who sup-

Then we will understand the vision and prophesy of Rev. 6:16 which says, "And will say to the mountains and rocks fall on us, and hide us from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb: For the great day of His wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?

Christ's love will have saved all that would, and then His wrath will be spent on those who refused His redemption. That will be a shock to those who say Jesus is only love and could never show wrath. Remember the Flood? Also, remember this in Jesus' words: "Depart from me, you cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels" Matt. 25:41.

Park's track will be fixed with grant

STAFF REPORT

Local leaders are moving forward with a plan to resurface the oval track at Marion-Crittenden County Park.

The city has secured a matching $15,000 grant, but City Administrator Mark Bryant says that amount isn't even enough to resurface the track, much less repair waterways and stripe it.

The city will provide some in-kind work to help match the grant, but Bryant said cash will also be needed. Estimates to repair cracks and resurface the one-quartermile oval is about $27,000.

Bryant told the city council last week resurfacing the track would likely not be a long-term solution.

"It really needs to be ripped up and completely redone," Bryant said.

Mayor Mickey Alexander members council showed no inclination to spend more money on repairing the track. Estimates from several years ago indicated that replacement of the oval could cost $100,000 or more.

The track, once used for high school meets, has been relegated to casual walkers over the last few years. Cracks and failing asphalt make it too dangerous for hosting competitive meets.

Sentry gets bid for 11 remote sirens

STAFF REPORT

Crittenden County has awarded a bid for its new early-warning system.

The countywide warning system for disasters and bad weather will include 11 sirens positioned at strategic locations around the county.

Sentry Siren of Evansville won the competitive bid process although its price was not the lowest. Magistrates at their May fiscal court meeting determined. however, that Sentry's bid was best. Only $312.60 separated the two bids.

Cost will be $178,000. The county has received a grant that will pay for the sirens and installation. However, the county will have to provide electricity and maintenance.

Two of the sirens will be in Marion. The rest will be in rural areas. All will be operated remotely from central dispatching. The system will be installed this summer.

City considering litigation against WiFi provider

STAFF REPORT

Marion Free WiFi has never worked properly, say city leaders, who are considering legal action against the group that installed the wireless Internet service about three years ago.

The city paid a Paducah firm $19,000 to install the equipment that was supposed to provide free WiFi to a section along Main Street. The original notion was to make sure it was available at restaurants in the downtown district.

City Administrator Mark Bryant told city council members during their regular monthly meeting last week he has been unsuccessful in communicating with the individuals who installed the service. A spinoff company from the original installer made an attempt to repair the service a time or two, but Bryant said it has never operated as billed.

The city stopped last month subscribing to an Internet service provider for the WiFi signal.

"The equipment is bad. It never worked right," Mayor Mickey Alexander said.

Bryant said the city's only recourse at this point appears to be litigation.

Bugs can ruin summer's backyard entertainment

BY JASON TRAVIS PRESS REPORTER

Many of us have spent the spring sprucing up our backyards, decks and patios only to be annoyed by the unwelcome appearance of those uninvited summertime guests - mosquitos and other biting insects. Crittenden County Cooperative Extension Agent Nancy Hunt says there are ways to keep the bugs at bay.

One thing to consider is your landscape plants. Choose carefully when adding trees and shrubs around the borders of your home.

"The best advice is to select insect-resistant plant varieties before you landscape your yard. Look for plants that have been selected or genetically manipulated to become resistant or less susceptible to pests. This is frequently called host plant resistance (HPR). Read plant and garden catalogs to see what varieties work best in your area and talk to local nursery owners," Hunt said.

For regular, routine care. Hunt says to apply water and fertilizer only when needed and in moderate amounts.

For a pest infestation or disease outbreak, people are now encouraged to use chemicals as a last resort.

First try non-chemical approaches and least toxic pesticides such as insecticidal soaps and horticultural oils. If you have large, slow-moving pests, try picking them off by hand and disposing of the captured insects so they do not return to feed again. Disposal methods include dropping them in soapy water, placing them in the freezer overnight or crushing and putting them in the household trash.

If you use a pesticide, always treat for specific pests, and only the affected plant. Read all product labels carefully and follow them accordingly. The label should indicate if any plants are listed as sensitive to the product. To determine if the product will hurt your plants, apply it to a small portion of a leaf first, and check for leaf burn after one to two days.

Plants require appropriate watering

BY JASON TRAVIS PRESS REPORTER

Springtime is the perfect opportunity to refresh your landscape. This spring, the Crittenden County Cooperative Extension Office refreshed its landscape by adding new shrubs and plantings. The landscaping enhanced the entryway and sidewalks and provides colorful and interesting plantings. County Extension Agent Nancy Hunt says the change was necessary to keep walkways easily negotiable.

"Our new landscaping was needed because our holly tree and shrubs required trimming several times a year to avoid growth over the sidewalk entrance and they were no longer attractive when pruned," Hunt said. "We hated to lose the shade the tree provided, but so far we have not noticed a temperature difference inside."

The new landscape involved a plan to help deter pests and use materials from a local business.

'Our landscaper, Bennett Smith, recommended we get rid of our wood mulch to avoid the possibility of termites. To help save money he used decorative rock from a local business and it should stay attractive for vears.

Hunt says it is vital that transplanted trees and shrubs in any landscape receive an adequate amount of

"Watering is the single most important thing you can do for a newly transplanted tree or plant," she

Trees and shrubs not receiving one inch to two inches of rainfall per week will need supplementary watering during the first year after transplanting. Hunt says you may need to continue watering trees and shrubs for three years because it may take that long to become fully established in the landscape.

watering and allow the soil to dry between waterings. A good practice is to thoroughly soak the soil every seven to 10 days during dry periods. Avoid frequent light waterings since this encourages root growth near the soil surface.

Watering should also be timed to meet the plants' biological needs. Watering slowly and deeply helps develop deep roots; in the long run, your plants will need less frequent watering. Plants can absorb only so much water, and most plants can tolerate at least short dry periods.

Ultimately, Hunt says overwatering wastes water and can injure certain plants.

"Weeds seem to benefit most from shallow watering and you don't want them, she added.

Hunt says early-morning is the best time to irrigate because less water is lost to evaporation, and there is less chance of mold or fungal diseases developing in your lawn. Drip irrigation systems and soaker hoses can deliver water efficiently.

School district cuts save enough to provide 1-percent salary hike

BY JASON TRAVIS PRESS REPORTER

Crittenden County Board of Education last week approved a tentative working budget for the 2012-13 school year which includes a one-percent pay increase for both classified and certified employees.

This is the first pay increase in two years for school teachers and staff.

"I would applaud the efforts of everybody in the district for being efficient. We have restructured positions so that folks are wearing more than one hat," said Superintendent Dr. Rachel Yarbrough said. "We have tried to be the best stewards of all the resources flowing into the district.

14 people die in holiday accidents

Preliminary statistics indicate that 14 people died in 11 separate crashes on Kentucky's roadways during the official Memorial Day holiday period, which was Friday through Monday.

Four single-fatality crashes involved motor vehicles and three of the victims were not wearing seat belts. These crashes occurred in Barren, Harrison, Perry and Russell counties

Three double-fatality crashes occurred in Harrison, Scott and Wayne counties. Crashes in Harrison and Ohio counties involved motor vehicles and none of the victims were wearing seat belts. The crash in Wayne County involved a motorcycle and neither victim was wearing a helmet. The suspected use of alcohol was a factor in all three of these double fatality crashes.

Four single-fatality crashes involved motorcycles. Crashes occurred in Boone, Breathitt, Lewis and Scott counties. Two of the victims were not wearing helmets. Through Monday, 285 people have lost their lives on Kentucky roadways during 2012. This is 39 more than reported for the same time period in 2011.

Crippled barge will settle to river bottom

Transportation officials and contractors were waiting Tuesday for a crippled barge to settle on the bottom of the Tennessee River in Livingston County near the site of the new bridge at Ledbetter.

The barge, which was supporting a 280-foot crane that did work on the bridge, started listing over the weekend. Maham Contracting, the company building the bridge, and other agencies have been working to minimize potential for an environmental issue such as leaking fluids.

Engineers are optimistic the crane mounted on the deck will remain above the waterline once the barge settles on the bottom. Booms were placed around the area to prevent oil from seeping into the river should the barge settle lower than expected.

State jobless rate is down to 8.3%, lowest since '08

Kentucky's seasonally adjusted preliminary unemployment rate fell to 8.3 percent in April from a revised 8.6 percent in March 2012, making it the lowest unemployment rate in the state since November 2008, according to the Office of Employment and Training (OET), an agency of the Kentucky Education and Workforce Development Cabinet.

The preliminary April jobless rate was 1.3 percentage points below the 9.6 percent rate recorded for the state in April 2011.

The U.S. seasonally adjusted jobless rate fell to 8.1 percent in April 2012 from 8.2 percent in March 2012, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

Labor force statistics, including the unemployment rate, are based on estimates and are compiled to measure trends rather than actually to count people working.

In April 2012, Kentucky's civilian labor force was 2,062,900, a decrease of 2,667 individuals compared to the previous month. "Some assume that the reason for the slight decline in the labor force is discouraged worker syndrome, but that doesn't appear to be the case," said economist Manoj Shanker of the OET. "Demographic evidence shows that the number of Baby Boomers retiring is higher than the number of young workers entering the labor force. The diminished inflow of net new workers lowers the labor force.

Kentucky's seasonally adjusted nonfarm employment increased by 1,900 jobs in April 2012 from the month before, and by 32,700 positions since April 2011. Nonfarm data is provided by the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Current Employment Statistics program. Six of Kentucky's 11 major nonfarm job sectors registered job gains.

who can't afford basic phone service or is thinking about cutting the cord to save money? Help is available through Lifeline and Tribal Link-Up. Local phone companies, including TDS Telecommunications Corp. (TDS®), offer these programs to ensure that everyone has access to basic phone serv-

The Lifeline program provides discounts on monthly phone service for qualified telephone subscribers. The Tribal Link-Up program offers reduced charges for basic landline telephone installation and provides additional discounts off the monthly service. Tribal Link-Up is available to people living on land that meets the Bureau of Indian Affairs definition of "reservation." Qualifications for both programs vary by state; howprogram ever, most participants typically receive federal or state assistance.

According to the Census Bureau, there were 46.2 million Americans living below the poverty level in 2010 the highest number in 52 years. While most American households have local telephone service, there are millions who simply cannot afford a telephone in their home. Lifeline and Tribal Link-Up can help.

"At a time when more Americans are living below the poverty line than ever before, they should not have to choose between a phone line and food," says Kevin Hess, senior vice president of Government and Regulatory Affairs for TDS. "By offering our customers the Lifeline and Tribal Link-up programs, they don't have to choose between feeding their family and providing a phone number on a job application. They can do both. If you know someone who's struggling, encourage them to contact their local phone company for information." TDS supports these programs using funds from the Universal Service Fund program. More information is available at www.usac.org/li or 1-888-641-8722. TDS customers should call 888-CALL-TDS to check eligibiland request application.

Adsmore Museum to highlight wedding

STAFF REPORT

Adsmore Museum & Gardens in Princeton is highlighting "Selina's Wedding to Gov. John Osborne," through July 2.

A high-noon wedding breakfast is complete with lavish gifts of monogrammed silver, linens and crystal displayed in the library, and upstairs finishing touches are being applied to the wedding dress and bridal trousseau.

Adsmore, an 1857 Greek Revival house, is listed on the National Register of Historic Homes and has been restored to its late Victorian grandeur furnished with the family's personal belongings. Master volunteer in clothing construction recruitment ongoing

Thanks to shows like "Project Runway," and "Fashion Star," sewing is enjoying newfound popularity. If you have a basic knowledge of garment construction, want to perfect your craft and help others learn to sew, you may find the Master Volunteer in Clothing Construction Program enjoyable and fulfilling. Recruitment for the next class of Master Clothing Volunteers is ongoing through the middle of June.

The University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service Master Clothing program began nearly 22 years ago when many Kentucky schools began to remove classes in sewing and garment construction from their curriculum. Extension saw it as a way to keep sewing alive in the communities. Recruits for the Master Volunteers in Clothing Construction Program should have a basic knowledge of sewing and garment construction. A master volunteer is an individual who takes the traditional volunteer role a step further. They are interested in receiving in-depth training and are dedicated to helping others learn their art.

The program is highly selective with only two individuals selected from each of the state's 14 extension areas. Interested individuals should apply to the program through their local extension office. A local committee will screen applicants and will notify them by mail about whether their application advanced to the area screening. An area committee will then make the final selections based on an interview and the individual's sewing and communication skills.

Those selected to participate must attend a statewide training Oct. 9-13 at the Lake Cumberland 4-H Educational Center in Jabez to begin the certification process. During this process, candidates will receive training on the subject matter, record keeping, teaching and communication skills. Master Clothing Volunteers will also make a written commitment to give back 100 service hours to Extension and the community within two years by leading educational programs in clothing construction and basic sewing. Once volunteer requirements are met, you will become a Certified Master Volunteer recognized by the Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service and known as a trained professional aide in this

Cindy Davidson currently is serving as a Master Clothing Volunteer in Crittenden County assisting both 4-H and adults with sewing. Former MCV include Jerrell James and Margie Belt. Stories relived by Crittenden native soldiers recalls crippling of USS Jenkins and the sad story of another young soldier, William L. Peek of Dycusburg.

I recall the happy day when temporary repairs were finished and we left Subic Bay for home. Thanks again to Bob Rinde, my shipmate from North Dakota, I still have a small portion of the homeward bound pennant. I also recall such heavy seas we encountered as we were leaving the Philippines. Here we were a seriously damaged ship now in a serious sea condition. One night we were rolling and pitching so much I couldn't stay in my bunk. Finally I just strapped myself in and went to sleep and woke up the next morning to a much more friendly sea. The repairs at Subic must have been good.

We were happy to see Pearl Harbor. We spent the night there and left for the mainland the next morning with one of our crew missing at muster. Somehow during the night one of our shipmates had exited the Jenkins and drowned. That brought a somber note to the crew in view of what we had just been through.

Since we had no refrigeration we ate spam every day I do believe. I cannot recall the number of days from Subic to Long Beach, Calif., but it seemed forever. One thing I do remember is when we tied up at the pier in Long Beach several men jumped off the Jenkins and kissed the ground.

At my first reunion in 1982 in Marietta, Ga., I found out that Pat Weir was one of the men trying to get the hatch closed. Pat told me a mattress cover had lodged in it. He also told me the man helping him was named Jones. From all my conversations with some of the men in the mess hall (it was reported to be 70) no one but me witnessed this heroic deed. A number of my shipmates know we tried for years to get these men the rewards they so richly deserved. Finally, after the Navy brass continued to say too many years have passed, Pat Weir did receive a letter of commendation from the Navy but nothing remotely near to what he deserved. By this time our shipmate Jones had passed away. Pat Weir will always be my hero.

Finally, do I want to go on a cruise ship to some exotic port? Never. Do I want to watch some of the recent popular movies about ships sinking? They are still too painful. When I was first approached about coming to a Jenkins reunion in the 1980s I was most reluctant because of the Barneo experience I have just described. Now, however, I am so glad some of our crew, and especially Bob Rinde, kept after me to attend. The reunions have been such great ones with such a wonderful crew. I wish they could go on forever.

The people at the Nimitz museum in Fredericksburg, Texas where our beautiful plaque is located, told me many times that I served on a famous and highly decorated ship. What a crew. So to those of you I sailed with I salute each and every one in a special way. To the men of the Korean, Vietnam wars and in peace, who came behind us, and also served their country aboard the Jenkins, we give you the same salute. We know you will keep the Jenkins name forever afloat long after those of us in World War II are gone. (Paul E. Mahan, TM 3/c, Box 264, Sheridan, MI 48884)

[Added Note: The U.S.S. Jenkins, Destroyer of the Fletcher class, was repaired and put back to sea after the 1945 damage by the mine. She ended her dignified career on July 2, 1969, and was sold for scrap in February 1971.]

Mr. Mahan has recently donated to the Crittenden County Historical Museum, a book titled "Men of the Jenkins, their Stories, 1942-1969." His story, plus many more, are included in the historical World War II book. Also he has shared many great pictures of the crew and the famous ship Jenkins during and after the damage to her on that day in 1945. The book and pictures are on display at the museum, plus other military items from our local heroes.

Remembering William L. Peek, Killed in Action, Feb. 21, 1945

A sad heart -breaking story of another Crittenden Countain that didn't have a happy ending is shared with us by Bill Peek of the Dycusburg area. It is the story of two brothers, one returning home safe, and the other several years later in a military casket. Bill's father, Hubert Peek, enlisted in the Army in November 1942, and was soon sent overseas to fight in World War II. A couple years later in June 1944 Hurbert's brother, William L. "Bill" Peek, was called to duty and he also was sent overseas.

In December Bill wrote his brother a short letter sharing with him some of the things that were important to him. Here is the letter: Dec. 27, 1944

Dear Brother, I will try and write you a few lines tonite, how are you by now, as myself I am fine. Well Hubert I am somewhere in France that is all I can tell you. How do you like France, just like me, I guess, not worth a dam.

Well Hubert I seen that boy of yours when I was home on furlough, Pearl and I and Mother went out there to see Dee and the baby, they were both O.K.

Well Hubert I hope we all are back in the states by next Xmas. I wrote Richard a letter tonight and I wrote Pearl and Mother one last nite. Well Hurbert I will close for now and write you again when I get a chance, I sure wish I was with you. Your Brother Bill

Hurbert writes back to Bill in Jan. 1945, somewhere in Belgium

Received your letter today and was good to hear from you. Glad you made the trip overseas alright. Well, I am just fine. I knew that you were over here someplace. Mother said in her letter that you were on your way over. Bill, what is your job? Write and tell me. How do you like the Army for now, like all the boys, I guess. Yes, I wish you were with me to. Bill you write me often so I will know where you are at. Well I will close for now.

Love your brother Hubert.

A couple of months later, Hurbert still hasn't heard back from his last letter and his brother is very much on his mind. In March he writes another letter, possibly even then fearing the worse.

March 11, 1945, somewhere in Germany Dear Brother, While thinking of you will drop you a few lines, for myself I am just fine. Bill I sure worry a lot about you. I have only heard from you one time since you have been over here. Please answer this as soon as you get it. What kind of work do you do, tell me. I heard from Dee's mother and Richard last night. They all were fine. Dee said the baby sure was growing fast. I sure would like to see him. I am still driving a truck, I see Donald every now and then. We could be close together and never know it. Well please answer soon. I will close for now and go to bed. Bill be careful and watch out for yourself and maybe we all can get back home. I sure hope so. As ever your brother Hubert. Bye now.

That same month, Hubert gets a letter from home with the sad news.

March 13, 1945

Fredonia Dear Hubert, I hate to write this for I know what it means, but Aunt Babe asked me to write you. Pearlene, (Bill's wife) got a telegram that Bill was missing in action since Feb. 21. That is all she has got so far. She got it March the 12. I know this will be awful hard

The family doesn't have the report that tells of the circumstances or place of Bill's death. He enlisted on June 30, 1944, was sent overseas that same year, and was reported missing in action on Feb. 21, 1945. At this time, history tells us that one of the greatest battles of WWII, The Battle of the Bulge was being fought and it was located in Luxembourg. American troops liberated Luxembourg in September 1944, but in December the German troops came back and the Battle of the Bulge began. The northern part of the country was laid down in flames and severe battles raged until February 1945. Since Bill's body was buried in the US Military Cemetery in Hamm Luxembourg, Germany, alongside many, many more Americans and also General George Patton, that had given the ultimate sacrifice for their country, it is likely that it was at this terrible battle that Bill lost his life.

Bill's nephew, and also namesake, Bill told me that a couple of years later his family requested the remains of PFC William L. Peek be brought back home and reburied in the Dycusburg Cemetery. A military funeral was held at the family home and his remains were laid to rest where the family had a memorial marker placed for him.

Thanks to Bill and Ann Peek for sharing this memorial story and pictures with us. Let us never forget those who gave the ultimate sacri-

Wisdom in its totality can never be comprehended by man, therefore it must be divided into many commandment. These holy commandments bear within themselves the spirit of wisdom. By keeping the holy commandment you will become wise. Wisdom is the greates glory God can give us.

What is wisdom? Wisdom is to be merciful, for they shall receive mercy. It is to forgive their transgressions, because then our heavenly Father will forgive us. It is to seek God's kingdom first, because then everything else have an obedient faithful love relationship with Jesus, because the the Father and the Son will dwell in us. It is way and the truth to cast all our cares on Him, because then He will care for us. It is to rejoice in the Lord, for the joy of the Lord is our strength.

This originated in Proverbs 8, where Solomon writes about wisdom of his way. "I was set up from everlasting, before the earth was. Singletons inducted into 50-Year Horse Society

Brothers part of long family legacy

PRESS REPORTER

The American quarter horse is one of the most recognized breeds in the equine industry, and Crittenden County brothers Jarrod and Jason Singleton are among the best known in the busi-

The siblings were recently inducted into the 50-Year Horse Society, an honor bestowed upon visionary men and women who have made lasting contributions to the equine industry over a 50year period.

Although neither of the Singletons are old enough to have done it alone, together with their father, the late Bud Singleton, their family has dedicated most of their lives to preserving and promoting the benefits of riding and caring for horses.

Bud Singleton started the family horse business in the 1950s. It has now become well-known worldwide.

community, Jarrod and Jason own and operate J&J Farms. Specializing in the buying and selling of cutting and reining horses, the brothers have bought and sold numerous AQHA world champions. APHA world champions and NHRA champions.

Not only do the horses take top honors, Jason serves as a ring man under many well-known auctioneers such as Don Green and Harold Brown. He also works for Boyd Sale Company owned by Wayne and Diane Boyd of Princeton. In his position, Jason has earned trips to the NRHA Futurity, All-American Quarter Horse Congress Super Sale in Columbus, Ohio, and the Dixie Nationals in Jackson, Miss.

Meantime, Jarrod holds his own in the riding ring against heavyweight competitors, winning the Great American Trail Horse Competition in Lexington, Va., more than five times. Along

The brothers continue to show their horses and are considered strong competitors in an upcoming ranch horse competition in Lufkin, Tex., next weekend.

As members of the American Quarter Horse Association and now the 50-Year Horse Society, the brothers say its an honor to have their names alongside such exceptional men and women who have dedicated their entire lives to the horse indus-

With around 2,000 head of horses cycling through their barns each year, exportations to Venezuela, Argentina, Canada, Mexico and the Dominican Republic, as well as traveling nearly every weekend to places such as New York, Oklahoma, Texas, Ohio, Alabama, Florida, Wisconsin and Virginia, the Singleton family has made its mark on the horse industry.

Be mindful of heat on livestock pared. One of the most im-creatures that suffer from the heat of summer. Farm animals feel the heat, too. With summer temperatures already upon us, it's time to think about ways to know when your livestock may be in danger from the heat and what to do to reduce their plight.

The University of Kentucky Agricultural Weather Center provides warnings of the potential danger to livestock. Livestock become uncomfortable when the heat index reaches about 90 degrees. The heat index is a combination of air temperature and humidity and is used to describe how it feels outside

The Agricultural Weather Center regularly monitors heat indices across the state and provides an index of its own - the Livestock Heat Stress Index - to help producers know when heat stress could create a problem for their animals. The county-by-county index indicates three levels of heat stress: no stress, danger stress and emergency stress.

Periods of heat stress call for livestock producers to be vigilant in making sure their animals are adequately preportant things producers can do is provide cool, clean drinking water. Providing an adequate source of drinking water helps to keep animals' internal body temperatures within normal limits. Aboveground water lines need to be shaded so they do not act as solar water heaters and make the water too hot to

It is also important for animals to have shade and for buildings to be as open possible for adequate ventilation. Sprinkler systems that periodically spray a cool mist on the animals can also be beneficial.

It is best to avoid working animals during periods of stress. Producers should also avoid transporting livestock during high levels of heat stress. When livestock must be transported, haul fewer animals per load. Planning trips so the animals can be loaded immediately before leaving and unloaded quickly upon arrival can likewise help minimize the risk.

Producers who want to keep up-to-date with the livestock heat stress index can access the Agricultural Weather Center's website http://weather.uky.edu.

Homer leaves Rockets Marooned

A fifth-inning home run by Madisonville's catcher opened up a close game on Memorial Day and dampened the hopes of a firstround victory for the Rockets in the Second Region Baseball Tourna-

With the heat index hovering around 104 degrees on the field at Henderson County where the tournament was played Monday afternoon, Crittenden County fell behind and never caught up, losing 6-1 to the Maroons (18-13).

The Rockets (13-22) were trailed by three going into the home half of the fourth, but Bryce Willis walked and scored to trim the Madisonville margin to 3-1.

Because of the hot weather, game officials forced play to halt for 10 minutes after every 30 minutes of play. The cooling off period seemed to help the Maroon lineup. Taylor Crabtree's two-run homer capped a three-run fifth inning that proved the turning point in the game. After that. Crittenden couldn't find the timely hitting it had gotten the past two weeks and finished scoreless down the stretch

"The home run was a difference maker," said Rocket coach Nathan McDowell. "That tooks us from a 3-1 game to a 5-1 game.

The Rockets also committed a couple of costly errors.

Aaron Owen, Brenden Phillips and Taylor Champion each doubled in the game. Noah Dickerson and Wes Evers singled.

Crittenden got just seven runners on base and left six.

The second-year head coach says his club will come back next year with plenty of talent. The Rockets lose Evers and Willis, two of their best offensive threats and both are

Son following dad's footsteps toward archery accuracy

Foster captures third 3-D target national crown

BY JASON TRAVIS PRESS REPORTER

Tony Foster says success in competitive archery is all about eliminating distractions.

A Crittenden County resident, Foster further explains it's about staying focused on the task at hand.

His task just happens to be shooting at a three-dimensional target with a bow and arrow while competing against 2,000 fellow archers at a national competition in Louisville. But he doesn't flinch in the face of fierce competition. After all, Tony is a national champion in archery, having won in both 2010 and 2011. He just received his third national championship this year.

"You have to have discipline both mental and physical. You've got to block out all the distractions, all the people," he said.

That discipline came in handy for his most recent win. The two-day competition allows for 60 shots each day to obtain the best score. He shot a score of 600 out of 600, besting the second-place finisher, who shot a score of 598.

To prepare for an upcoming tournament, Tony practices two hours a day, seven days a week.

Archery has its origins in hunting and warfare. Recognized today as a world-wide competitive sport, archery competitions allow for the shooting of arrows at a stationery target from a determined distance. The sport demands a great amount of skill and concentration to hit the target with accuracy. To advance in the sport, competitors must learn the proper stance, foot spacing and correct placement of the arrow on the bowstring.

Nocking the arrow describes the correct placement of the arrow in its shooting position on the bowstring. Great attention should be made on perfecting the correct form and follow through as the arrow is released. Hands and arms must remain steady even after the release of the arrow.

Archery brings both young and advanced competitors together. It is a sport shared by many family members. Tony's family also shares his dedication to the sport. He and his wife Lee Ellen are celebrating their son's achievements.

Six-year-old Jeremiah Foster recently placed second in the Cub Class for youth under 12 years of age. He has been shooting with a bow and arrow for just one year. He and his father practice shooting targets at the indoor practice facility near their home.

The elder Foster says archery teaches discipline. He encourages anyone interested in the sport to join a local archery club and visit a sporting goods store to learn more about the different types of archery competitions.

Local troop honors 2 new Eagle Scouts

Crittenden County has a new Eagle Scout and the Urbanowski household now has two.

Jake Urbanowski, 18, who graduated last weekend from Crittenden County High School, recently earned his Eagle ranking after nine years in Scouting.

Urbanowski's brother Josh, who is now serving in the military, was also an Eagle Scout, and his mother, Sandy, is a Scout leader.

Starting out in Cub Scouts, Urbanowski said he always looked up to the older boys in the troop. Many of them encouraged him to fulfill the Scout motto and to become a leader himself.

"I've tried to be a leader in the public and in school," he said. "A Scout is thrifty, brave, clean and reverent. The most important word in that motto is 'is' because you have to be that way inside Scouting and outside Scout-Ūrbanowski has about 50 badges from his years in Scouting, but it's not the insignias on his brown Scout uniform that will have a lasting meaning.

"It has taught me self dependence," he said. "After a while Scouting just becomes

Of all his Scouting honors, Urbanowski says the Lifesaving Medal of Honor was his greatest. He and a few other Scouts earned the medal after helping save a woman's life during the 2009 ice storm. Had they not gone to help her, she very well may have been overcome by carbon monoxide poisoning from a generator and gas

His Eagle project was quite interesting, too. Urbanowski and others in Marion Troop 30, which meets at Marion United Methodist Church, learned about history and hard work when he decided to clean up the old Ford Cemetery near Tolu. The cemetery is where the notorious, alleged outlaw James Ford is buried. Several books have been written about Ford's exploits in pioneer Crittenden County.

Now that high school and Scouting are behind him, Urbanowski plans to study in the 2+2 program at Madisonville Community College and possibly Western Kentucky University.

Another Scout from the local troop also received his Eagle recently. Cody Crider, 18, of Hardin County, Ill., earned his decoration after completing a project that including building storage shelves and a building for the sheriff's department in his southern Illinois commu-

Crider has been a Scout for seven years. He came to Troop 30 in 2009. He plans to join the U.S. Army after graduation in 2013. He is currently active in FFA where he will serve next school year as president of the Hardin County High School chapter.

ISP buys area service system

Q Wireless, LLC has announced its acquisition of wireless Internet services from Systems Solutions, Inc. (SSI) in Caldwell, Crittenden, Livingston, Lyon and Marshall counties in Kentucky and Massac County in Illinois, effective Friday.

The acquisition provides for the continuance of services to more than 70 customers in the area

Current customers of SSI wireless services should see no interruptions in their Internet access due to the acquisition. Following a network transition period, Q Wireless plans for new customer additions, which have been suspended by SSI in recent months, to resume this summer.

This will also affect customers of BSC Enterprises in Crittenden and Caldwell counties. Q Wireless, LLC is headquartered in Evansville and provides high-speed wireless Internet services to primarily rural customers in Kentucky, Illinois and Indiana.

Conger spent 4 tours in Vietnam

His service has continued back home

BY JASON TRAVIS PRESS REPORTER

As a young boy, Kenny Conger attended elementary school in a two-room schoolhouse in Crayne.

"The school didn't have a cafeteria," Conger explains. 'We brought our meals in little lunch buckets. We had two teachers. One teacher taught first through sixth grades, the second taught through seventh

Years later, he would be transplanted from that tranquil environment to the explosive conditions on the battlefield in Vietnam.

Conger's adult life has been devoted to service, both to country and community alike. He served four tours in the Vietnam War; served as a police officer in Marion for nearly 17 years; and has worked for the Marion Post Office for almost 19 years.

Drafted in 1966, Conger's first tour in Vietnam was with the 9th Infantry Division from 1967 to 1968. His next tour was with the 1st Aviation Brigade from 1969 to 1970. He spent his last two tours, from 1970 to 1971 and 1971 to 1972, with the 1st Calvary Divi-

"It was up close and personal," Conger explains about his service in the Vietnam War. "We didn't need any scopes on our rifles. They were close enough to

On Oct. 17, 1967, Conger received the Purple Heart after being shot in the leg from an ambush while leading a reconnaissance unit.

He says it is somewhat difficult for him to speak too openly about his service in Vietnam. He recalls the time when Vietnam veterans did not always receive a welcome homecoming.

"Vietnam was a popular war when it started. But the longer it continued opinions changed. It's different today. Veterans now go through debriefing before home. It was hard back then. They just sent us home," he said. "Those veterans coming home today they went through the same stuff we went through. No matter what war you are in, it leaves its mark on you."

After returning home from Vietnam, Conger was a tank commander at Fort Carson, Colo., and was eventually sent to Germany.

Civilian life brought the opportunity to serve again. Conger was a patrol officer for the Marion Police Department from 1977 to 1993. He says technology has improved since he was an officer with advancements in communications and improved protective

Today, Conger keeps busy at the Marion Post Office, a position he's held for nearly

He and his wife Shellye will soon see their daughter Nikki attend the University of Kentucky. She goes in the fall. Nikki received the Paul E. and Nancy Mick Memorial Scholarship sponsored by The Crittenden Press.

Having served his country and witnessed many political changes over the years, Conger firmly believes in keeping the role of government small.

"We need to get big government out of people's lives. There is too much of the government in people's private lives," he said. "It seems they keep taking a little bit more of our rights every day. People don't even notice it most of the time."

Sisco receives medal after 58 years of waiting

BY STACIE HEARELL

After a long battle for an honor he earned more than a half century ago, 81-year-old Charles Sisco has received the Germany Occupation Medal.

Sisco waited 58 years and two months to receive the medal.

At the age of 19, Sisco served in the Korean War for 17 months starting in September 1950 with the 94th MP Battalion. He spent another year in Germany in 1953 with the 91st Antiaircraft Artillery. Serving outside the United States for that amount of time, discharge records showed that Sisco was entitled to the medal, but he was told the records had been burned in St. Louis, Mo. After applying for the medal six times to different veterans' representatives, Ron McClure of Mayfield completed the job.

Receiving the medal adds to a list of decorations he earned, including the National Defense Service Medal, the Japanese Service Medal, the United Nations Service Medal and the Korean Service Medal with six bronze campaign stars awarded by the President of South Korea.

"I am happy to finally receive the award, and I am very proud that I could serve the needs of the country," he said.
