Tuesday Election Day in Kentucky

Polls will be open from 6 a.m., to 6 p.m., Tuesday in Crittenden County. Voters will head to the polls to elect a new governor and five other statewide officers. Absentee voting will take place on the machine in the clerk's office at the courthouse until the close of business Monday.

Also on the ballot will be the position of county surveyor. No one has filed for the local office, which went unfilled in last year's countywide election. The position has specific requirements and is on the ballot as a write-in.

County Clerk Carolyn Byford expects a low voter turnout, perhaps lower than 20 percent.

Holiday parade in Marion Dec. 3

Groups interested in participating in the 31st annual Marion Christmas Parade should contact the Crittenden County Chamber of Commerce or event chairman Jeff Ellis.

The parade will be held at 2 p.m., Dec. 3. The theme is "Old-Fashioned Christmas."

Clocks fall back Sunday morning

Daylight saving time officially ends at 2 a.m., Sunday with clocks falling back an hour. Standard time has begun the first Sunday of November since President Bush extended the length of daylight saving time by four weeks in 2005. Next week, the sun will begin to set before most people leave work at 5 p.m.

Nationwide alert will be first ever

A nationwide test of the Emergency Alert System will be conducted at 1 p.m., next Wednesday. This will be the first time that a national Emergency Alert test will be conducted. TV and radio will broadcast a test warning message for two to three minutes.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency and Federal Communications Commission are coordinating this test with broadcasters throughout the United States.

NOAA weather alert radios will not broadcast the alert.

Union County man killed in early Monday collision

STAFF REPORT

A Morganfield man died Monday as a result of injuries sustained in a two-vehicle accident on U.S. 60 East earlier that morning. It was the first traffic fatality in Crittenden County this year.

Dan Fowler, 39, was extricated from the semi truck he was driving by Crittenden County Rescue Squad personnel. He was pronounced dead at Crittenden Health Systems (CHS) a short time later after being transported to the hospital by Crittenden Emergency Medical Service.

The accident occurred at 8:12 a.m., on a straight stretch of highway near Blackford Church Road.

The report from Crittenden County Sheriff Wayne Agent's office says Fowler's rig collided with a dump truck driven by Mike Ellis, 44, of Crofton, which was eastbound. The dump truck was loaded with 20 to 30 tons of asphalt, according to Keith Todd, spokesman for the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet.

The report says Fowler was west-bound in his semi, pulling a lowboy trailer loaded with a large piece of excavation equipment. Ellis reportedly lost control of his dump truck, and it rolled onto its side, sliding along the highway into the path of Fowler's vehicle.

There were no passengers involved in the accident. Both drivers were transported to CHS.

The highway was closed for almost nine hours while the accident was reconstructed by a Kentucky State Police specialist. Traffic was detoured

Don Herrin is not necessarily opposed to paying more in taxes to keep a quality ambulance service in the county, he just believes the burden should be spread a little more evenly among its residents.

Last Thursday, Herrin was among a couple dozen people to attend a public meeting hosted by Crittenden Health Systems (CHS) in order to provide more information about the ambulance service it runs. The session at the Ed-Tech Center in Marion was the first of three over the coming weeks to better illustrate to residents and elected officials the hospital's position on its request to the county's fiscal court for financial assistance. CHS officials claim they need help to offset annual losses tied to the emergency medical service (EMS).

At the meeting, EMS Director Kevin Hilkey offered details on the service's duties, its personnel and expenses, including a $229,000 operational loss in 2011.

"Bringing the ER to the patient is expensive," he said of the hospital's cost

Judgeship Stout's career pinnacle

With his hand on a pair of family Bibles held by his wife Doris, Alan Stout takes an oath to the federal bench as a bankruptcy judge Oct. 25 at the U.S. District Courthouse in downtown Paducah. Friends and family members packed the courtroom where the Crittenden County native was sworn to what he called the only judgeship to which he has aspired in a 30-plus year career in law.

His voice cracking with rare public emotion, newly conferred federal judge Alan C. Stout of Marion looked at his older brother, Keith, and asked what he thought their father would think about this.

Testament to his strong family and community ties, Stout thought first of his late father, Howard, then spoke about his late mother, Imogene, before acknowledging a number of individuals among the standing-room-only crowd gathered last week at the U.S. District Courthouse on Broadway Avenue in Paducah for a swearing in ceremony. The Oct. 25 ritual involving Chief U.S. District Judge Thomas B. Russell and Magistrate-Judge David King drew dozens of family, friends and colleagues from across western Kentucky.

Standing in front of the crowd, Stout, freshly draped with a black judge's robe, immediately began to reminisce about family and friends who'd helped him on the path of his professional career as a lawyer. His practice had often led him to the federal courthouse in Paducah where he said he wanted the swearing in to take place so that those who had been instrumental in his life could attend. A more formal investiture will take place in Louisville on Nov. 18.

Stout has practiced law in Marion for more than 30 years. His offices in Marion and Paducah served western Kentucky and southern Illinois. He estimates having been involved in some 15,000 cases over the years, many of them in the area of bankruptcy. It was that experience and other accomplishments that led the U.S. Sixth Circuit Court to choose Stout from among almost two dozen finalists to become one of three U.S. bankruptcy judges in the western district of Kentucky, which includes the area between Louisville and the Mississippi River.

"It's the only judgeship to which I ever aspired," Stout said.

Stout was sworn to office by Judge Russell. As he took the oath, Stout held his hand on a pair of fam-

3rd man from winter armed robbery at park sentenced

STAFF REPORT

The third of five individuals charged in the armed robbery that happened last winter at Marion-Crittenden County Park has now been sentenced to prison.

David R. Catallo, 33, of Grand Rapids, Mich., pleaded guilty last week in Crittenden Circuit Court to amended charges of second-degree assault by complicity and second-degree robbery by complicity for his involvement in the incident that left a cooperating witness injured. Catallo was sentenced to 15 years in prison. He was originally indicted on charges of first-degree robbery by complicity and first-degree assault by complicity. Local police and Detective Robbie Kirk of the Pennyrite Area Narcotics Task Force had arranged to secretly observe the purchase of a large amount of marijuana at the park on a snowy, February day. They were hiding nearby when Catallo and three teenagers from Eddyville showed up in a borrowed car. Catallo and the teens tried to rob the buyer, who was working with police and had cash to complete the drug deal. The assailants were armed with a black powder rifle, but it was used as a club rather than a firearm.

When police converged on the robbery, some of the suspects tried to run or leave the scene by vehicle. Warning shots were fired by police, and eventually, five suspects were taken into custody.

Circuit Judge René Williams sentenced Catallo to five years on the robbery charge and the maximum of 10 years on the assault charge. The sentences are to run consecutively.

Aaron Cannon, 18, Chase A. Bull

18, and Anthony G. Williams, 19, have each pleaded guilty to their involvement in the incident. Cannon was sentenced to five years in prison and Bull seven years. Williams has not been formally sentenced yet, but Commonwealth Attorney Zac Greenwell has recommended five years in prison.

A fifth suspect, Dillon R. Phelps, who was 17 at the time, was certified as an adult. He is expected to be sentenced later.

Greenwell said Catallo has also been convicted of a felony in another state and was on probation when this incident occurred.

Rogers appointed to replace Stout

Marion attorney Brandi Rogers has been appointed Master Commissioner for Crittenden Circuit Court. She replaces Alan Stout as the master commissioner. Stout recently received a federal judge appointment.

Rogers

Rogers had previously served as Special Master Commissioner for the entire judicial circuit. She is a lawyer at the firm of Frazer, Rogers and Peek in Marion.

The master commissioner is in charge of liquidating property when owners default on their mortgage and a mortgage company files foreclosure action against the owner in Circuit Court. The Court then orders that the case be referred to the master commissioner and the property is sold at the courthouse door.

Owen named KANS 'Student of the Year'

The Kentucky Association of Nursing Students (KANS) is a statewide pre-professional organization for pre-nursing and nursing students enrolled in Kentucky accredited diploma, associate, and bachelor degree programs. Mariah Owen, a current officer in KANS and graduate of Livingston Central High School, was recently recognized by the organization as Student of the Year.

Owen

Owen, a junior nursing student at Murray State University, serves as promotions director for the group. She is also the president of Murray State's KANS chapter. She was recognized with the award at this year's KANS state convention on Oct. 21-22 at The Center for Courageous Kids in Scottsville, Ky. Owen also received a $200 cash reward for being named Student of the Year.

In addition to KANS, Owen is involved in Alpha Omicron Pi, National Student Nurses' Association, Gamma Beta Phi Honors Society and several other campus organizations. She has also been a volunteer at the Center for Courageous Kids and a student mentor.

Owen will graduate from Murray State University in December of 2012. She hopes to pursue a career in nursing while also furthering her education.

Bunnell elected as chairman of CCEDC

Crittenden County Economic Development Corporation (CCEDC) has a new chairman.

Terry Bunnell, president of The Peoples Bank in Marion, was elected last week as the fourth chairman to serve the group since its inception in 1996.

Bunnell has been president of The Peoples Bank since 2007 and has served on the economic development corporation's board for most of that time. He has for the past three years served as the group's treasurer. Bunnell succeeds Gareth Hardin as chairman of the CCEDC. Hardin is chairman of the board of directors at Farmers Bank of Marion. He had chaired the economic development effort since 2004. Other chairmen have been Gordon Guess, former president of The Peoples Bank from 1996-2001 and Greg Moore, former hospital CEO, from 2001 to 2004.

Jim Christensen, CEO of Crittenden Health Systems, was elected vice-chairman and independent insurance agent Terry L. Ford was selected as treasurer of the group. Both Mary Rohrer, a native of Princeton, was sworn in as Assistant Crittenden County Attorney last Thursday by Circuit Judge René Williams in the county courthouse. She will serve under Rebecca J. Johnson service, who was re-elected as county attorney last year.

New assistant county attorney takes oath

STAFF REPORT

Mary Rohrer became Crittenden County's new assistant county attorney last Thursday after being sworn into the position by Circuit Judge René Williams. Rohrer, 25, is a May 2011 graduate of the University of Kentucky College of Law and was recently admitted to the Kentucky bar at a formal swearing-in ceremony at the Supreme Court Capitol Building in Frankfort.

A native of Princeton, Rohrer began working in the office of County Attorney Rebecca J. Johnson a month ago, replacing Marion native Natalie White who resigned as assistant county attorney to focus on her private practice in Eddyville, where she resides. White also now serves as assistant county attorney in Lyon and Trigg counties.

Before coming to Marion, Rohrer worked as a law clerk at the firm of Fowler, Measle & Bell PLLC in Lexington. She also worked as a judicial intern with Kentucky Supreme Court Justice Bill Cunningham of Lyon County and a summer clerk for James S. "Bridge" Miller, Caldwell County Attorney.

Currently living in Princeton, she plans to move to Crittenden County as soon as possible. She explained that while she was open to practicing anywhere in the commonwealth, she preferred to remain in western Kentucky.

"It seemed like a good fit," Rohrer said of her pursuit of a law degree. "I was always interested in politics in college and am interested in justice."

The broad scope of practicing law in a small town appeals to the 2008 graduate of Asbury College in Wilmore, Ky.

"The experience is a lot more hands-on than in a larger town," she said. "I've already learned a lot."

Rohrer graduated magna cum laude from Asbury, where she received a bachelor of arts in English. She was also valedictorian of her Caldwell County High School Class of 2004.

Serving under Johnson, Rohrer will handle the juvenile docket in Crittenden County as well as petitions and other areas served by the office of county attorney.

"She's good at it," Johnson said of Rohrer's work.

Rohrer, single with no children, is the daughter of Phyllis Rohrer and the late Dr. James Rohrer of Princeton. Her roots, however, extend to Crittenden County. She is the granddaughter of the late Nolan and Mary Rohrer of Marion.

have been serving on the group's board of directors for a few years.

Officers are elected for one-year terms.

The CCEDC is a joint effort of private investors and public funding. Its mission is to recruit and retain industrial jobs and to promote the economic well-being of the community.

Leaders of the group say private investment is waning as the local economy continues to be sluggish. Members are conducting a membership drive and asking current shareholders to up their contributions.

County unemployment up in September

STAFF REPORT

Crittenden County's jobless rate for September 2011 rose slightly from the previous month but remained below the statewide average. Meantime, neighboring Caldwell and Webster counties posted the commonwealth's third lowest percent of unemployed.

According to the Kentucky Office of Employment and Training (OET), Crittenden County's unemployment rate last month was 9 percent, up 0.2 percent from August 2011 and representing 368 civilian laborers looking for work. But like 71 other Kentucky counties, the latest figure was lower than a year ago. In September 2010, the jobless rate in the county was 9.4 percent.

"The year-over-year employment gains are predominantly attributed to health care and social assistance companies. General population growth and a longer life expectancy are the main causes of the continued expansion of health care employment. In addition, institutions of higher learning often see an increase in enrollment during economic downturns as individuals return to school or choose to continue their education," said Jones.

For September 2011, Livingston County's unemployment jumped almost to points to 9.4 percent, as compared to 7.5 percent in August 2011. Of counties bordering Crittenden County, the highest percentage of unemployed workers was 10.7 in Lyon County. In fact, last month's jobless rates in Crittenden and all surrounding counties jumped from the month before.

"The decline in the civilian labor force in September 2011 was not enough to counterbalance the job losses causing the unemployment rate to increase," said Ashley Jones, OET labor market analyst, of the higher rates across Kentucky from the month before.

Woodford County recorded the lowest jobless rate in the commonwealth at 7.2 percent, while Fulton County recorded the highest unemployment rate — 17.3 percent.

Statewide, the unemployment rate was 9.6 percent last month. The comparable U.S. rate was 8.8 percent.

Caldwell, Webster jobless rates low

Listed below are the jobless rates for select counties listed from the state's lowest in September 2011 to the highest with area counties of interest listed between. Caldwell and Webster counties had the lowest September 2011 rate in far western Kentucky.

Whitetail Tip of the Week

It's on! Deer hunters are moving into the most important period of the entire hunting season – the rut. Bucks have completed their pre-rut rituals of staking claim to turf, marking it and establishing dominance. Now, it's time for hunters to take advantage of the aggressive daytime movements of mature bucks. Big bucks seldom travel or feed during daylight hours. Now, they are forced from the cover of darkness by a natural urge to breed. This puts them in a vulnerable situation. Here are some tips for the coming days: Stay clean, reduce human scent, avoid touching vegetation while going and coming from stands. Avoid getting too close to buck sign. If you see a scrape or rub, admire it from a distance, then move away. Do not walk near or touch either. Pay attention to rub and scrape lines. Several tree rubs or ground scrapes on a particular trail is good indication that a buck will be returning to that area. Keep your grunt tube handy. This is the time of year to challenge mature bucks by mimicking their sounds. It doesn't always work, but when it does it's like magic. Good luck during rifle season and remember, always be certain of your target before you pull the trigger.

GOP candidates visit Marion

Republican gubernatorial candidate David L. Williams and a portion of the GOP slate of statewide candidates visited Marion last Wednesday. Williams, who has served as president of the Kentucky Senate since 2000, told the crowd gathered at Main Street Italian Grill that his "real plan for real jobs" focuses on job creation in the private sector. "Government doesn't really create jobs. Government's responsibility is to foster job growth in the private sector. The only job (Gov. Steve Beshear) created was to hire someone in government," Williams said of his Democratic opponent. Williams supports a strict conservative agenda, defending the coal industry and opposing President Barack Obama and Environmental Protection Agency regulations that could harm the coal industry in the commonwealth. Williams was joined in his fourth campaign stop of the day before noon by his running mate for lieutenant governor Richie Farmer; Bill Johnson, seeking to become secretary of state; and John Kemper, running for the position of auditor of public accounts. Pictured above are Williams in the foreground, Farmer (left) and campaign chairman Donald Storm, Kentucky's former adjutant general. The stop was Williams' third to the county since campaigning for governor. Beshear has yet to visit Crittenden County during his re-election campaign.

Fed's low-income heating program to offer less aid

STAFF REPORT

After two years of offering extra funding to families in need, the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program, or LIHEAP, is expected to offer far less aid to help those in need during the coming winter.

Officials with Kenergy, which provides electricity to rural customers throughout Crittenden County, said low-income families should not expect the $400 in federal aid they have received the last couple years.

"This will have a huge impact on our members who rely on federal assistance to pay their utility bills during the 2011-12 winter season," said Renee Beasley Jones, communications manager for the electric cooperative.

During 2010, Kentucky received $57.7 million in LIHEAP aid. Last year, that number grew to $58 million. However, state officials expect the commonwealth to receive less than half that amount for the 2012 season. The anticipated $26.6 million will translate to about $250 of assistance per family.

The amount of assistance is not determined by individual states. Instead, officials within each state administer the annual federal block grant, which has been reduced this year due in large part to the poor economy.

"Heating assistance funds are limited and the need for that assistance is great," Kentucky Public Service Commission (PSC) spokesman Andrew Melnykovich said. "The PSC is concerned that funding might prove very tight this winter and therefore is urging customers to prepare now by planning their budgets and taking steps to reduce energy consumption."

To help manage the cost of winter heating bills, Jones suggests residents consider starting a budget billing plan at their utility companies. Residents should practice sound energy conservation methods, such as caulking windows, installing door seals to cut down on drafts and opting for programmable thermostats.

Kenergy participates in the statewide WinterCare Energy Fund to provide its customers with a voluntary means of assisting those in need in paying their electric bills. A space is provided on your bill to indicate the amount you wish to contribute. Those in need of WinterCare assistance should contact Pennyrile Allied Community Services by calling 965-4763 or by visiting the office at 402 N. Walker St., in Marion

Also, the co-op offers an employee-funded assistance program titled The Good Neighbor Fund. Low-income members can apply for up to $100 two times a year.

Last week, 43 detention center work release inmates put in 1,828 hours of community service, saving taxpayers approximately $13,253.

Fights add 14 years to inmate's sentence

STAFF REPORT

An inmate at the Crittenden County Detention Center has added another 14 years of prison time to his sentence because of his behavior while behind bars.

Matthew E. Young, 27, of Louisville was sentenced Friday in Crittenden Circuit Court for separate cases involving altercations inside the jail – one with another inmate and another with a deputy jailer.

Young, a state inmate, has pending felony charges in Louisville. He was originally being held for a probation violation on a 2007 conviction of tampering with physical evidence and fleeing and evading police.

Young pleaded guilty to two counts of assault and was sentenced to 10 years on one count and four years on the other. With the prison time he is currently serving and that which he received last week in Crittenden Circuit Court, Young will be in prison for the next 19 years, said Commonwealth Attorney Zac Greenwell.

Young assaulted a deputy jailer on Oct. 17, 2010 and on June 26 of this year, he got into a fight in his cell with inmate Scott McAllister after a dispute over the television channel. McAllister's leg was broken in several places.

Fredonia Valley history group hosts potluck dinner tonight

STAFF REPORT

The Fredonia Valley Heritage Society will meet today (Thursday) at 6 p.m. at the Fredonia Lions Club Building on Shelby Street in Fredonia for their annual potluck Thanksgiving meal. Following the meal, the characters from the recent "Walk Through Fredonia's Past" will give an indoor encore presentation of that event.

There are very few copies of the society's publication, "The History of the Fredonia Valley," from a third reprint. The cost is $50. The hard-back book is 552 pages, has 1,750 photographs and more than 200 family histories and includes historical accounts of the Fredonia Valley from the 1780s through 2010. It also includes an area within a six-mile radius around Fredonia, including parts of Crittenden County.

Anyone who would like a copy can e-mail Pam Faughn at pamfaughn@att.net or call her at 545-3215.

Anyone interested in becoming a member of the Fredonia Valley Heritage Society is encouraged to attend the potluck meal and meeting.

Ky. 139 bridges open this week

STAFF REPORT
The three bridges across Donaldson Creek on Ky. 139 in Caldwell County should re-open Friday or Saturday, re-ports Keith Todd, Kentucky Transportation Cabinet spokesman, reconnecting eastern Crittenden County with Princeton. The roadway has been closed to traffic since August 2010 so that the bridges could be replaced.

Veterans to be honored with two ceremonies

STAFF REPORT
Two programs will give residents in Crittenden County an opportunity to honor military personnel on Veterans Day.
The first will begin at 8:30 a.m., at Rocket Arena and is being hosted by Crittenden County Middle School. In conjunction with the school, members of American Legion Post 111 and Veterans of For-eign Wars Post 12022 and its auxiliary will be helping with the roughly hour-long event. The county's 4H and Boy Scout Troop 30 will also be involved.
This is the second year for the service.
Sarah Ford, one of the organizers of the event, said the purpose is to help make chil-dren aware of what Veterans Day means.
"I think it's something kids need to know," said middle school principal Teresa Mar-shall, whose grandfather lost a leg in World War II after landing at Normandy, France during the D-Day invasion.
Judge-Executive Perry Newcom, an Air Force vet-eran, will be the emcee. Vet-erans and the community are invited to attend, and refresh-ments will be served.
Following the CCMS cere-mony, the local American Le-gion post will also host its usual public ceremony at Mapleview Cemetery, which be there for several days.

Mattoon Volunteer Fire Department also responded to the scene.
The man killed was a con-struction worker. He is sur-vived by his wife, Donna, and a daughter, Taner, who is a sophomore softball player at the University of Louisville.

is set to begin at the tradi-tional 11 a.m., commemorat-ing the signing of the armistice that ended World War I in 1918 on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month.
Boy Scout Troop 30 and the post's auxiliary will assist post commander J.T. Travis and other members of the American Legion carry out the ceremony.

Community Christmas ready for sponsors

STAFF REPORT
Fewer people have signed up for Community Christmas in Crittenden County this year than at any other time in the event's 37-year-history but according to Nancy Hunt, the small numbers could be a blessing, meaning more families and individuals can be sponsored. This year, there are 282 children and 244 adults registered.
"This is a few less than last year which is good since the economy will probably not allow some people to sponsor and others may not be able to spend or donate as much," Hunt said.
The program is designed to assist families and individuals who meet income eligibility guidelines with food and gifts for children. The program is a project of the Crittenden County Inter-Agency Council.

Beginning Monday, members of the community can begin fulfilling the Christmas dreams of young children by selecting their gift wish list from one of two Angel Trees made available at Marion businesses on Monday. The trees will be located at Farmers Bank & Trust Company's main office and Pamida. The Community Christmas planning committee suggests sponsors spend $35 to $100 per child, but any amount will be appreciated.
Sponsors will be asked to fill out contact information for each angel. This information will be used only to contact sponsors in case there is a change on the child's information or if the sponsors' items have not arrived on set-up day.

Angels selected from the trees will include information on where and when to return gifts.
Set-up day for Community Christmas is Dec. 15, beginning at 9 a.m., at the National Guard Armory in Marion. Distribution will be held at the armory and Marion Baptist Church Family Life Center on Dec. 16 based on appointment times given at sign-ups.
Parents of 12- to 17-year-old children or the teens themselves, will be able to select where they want to shop by utilizing a gift voucher with an amount based on the funds donated for Community Christmas.

Community groups and businesses are helping to raise funds and collect new toys and canned food items. Contact Bro. Mike Jones at Marion Baptist concerning food donations. Judy Binkley with Head Start is the toy contact.
For more about Community Christmas, contact Hunt at 965-5236 or Mona Manley at 965- 5229. In addition, the other Inter-Agency officers for planning Community Christmas are Lynda Dennis and Paja Crider.

Court upholds ‘Almighty God’ reference in law

ASSOCIATED PRESS
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) – In Kentucky, Almighty God may legally be credited with the state's homeland security.
A split Kentucky Court of Appeals recently upheld the reference to God in the law creating the state's Office of Homeland Security, saying no prior case bars a statutory reference to God.
Judge Laurance B. VanMeter, in an opinion joined by Judge Thomas Wine, noted that there's no requirement that the Homeland Security director believe in an "Almighty God" or for people to read the plaque at the entrance to the agency's emergency operations center. VanMeter also noted that the preambles to 44 states, including Kentucky, have references to "a Supreme Being," while three others have establishment clauses that "refer explicitly" to God or "speak approvingly of religion."

Kentucky's law establishing the state Office of Homeland Security requires its executive director to publicize a "dependence on Almighty God" in training and educational materials and through a plaque at the entrance to its emergency operations center.

The appeals court decision overturns Franklin Circuit Judge Thomas Wingate's ruling in 2009 that the phrase violates the U.S. and Kentucky constitutions of state-established religion. The law requires the Homeland Security director to post a plaque with the reference in the department's headquarters.
The controversy arose because of two related laws passed in the wake of the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks. A 2002 "legislative finding" says the "safety and security of the commonwealth cannot be achieved apart from reliance upon Almighty God."

And a 2006 act creating the state's Office of Homeland Security requires its executive director to publicize this "dependence on Almighty God" in agency training and educational materials and through a plaque at the entrance to its emergency operations center. Language in the 2006 legislation was inserted by state Rep. Tom Riner, D-Louisville, a pastor of Christ is King Baptist Church in Louisville.
A group of 10 Kentucky residents filed suit to challenge the legislation in 2008.

Church notes

- Main Street Missionary Baptist Church located at 718 S. Main St., will have a benefit chili supper at 4 p.m., Saturday. All proceeds will be donated to the WPSD telethon.

Salons offer free makeovers

STAFF REPORT

Shear Illusions, Inc., Styles & Profiles and Expressions have joined together in hosting the first Beauty Makeover modeled after a national Chairs of Change campaign. Chairs of Change is a movement to encourage stylists to make an impact on their communities.

Four people will be chosen for the Beauty Makeover to be held Dec. 3. There is no cost to enter, but entries must be received by close of business Nov. 25. Participants will be selected based on their expressed desire for a makeover.

Casey Winstead, one of the organizers, cites Romans 13:8, which says, "Fulfilling the law through love, owe no one anything except to love each other, for the one who loves another has fulfilled the law." She and a handful of local stylists recently learned of the Chairs of Change campaign and decided to put their professional touch on four deserving people.

"Sometimes a makeover is just the pick-me-up people need," she said. "We want them to know there are good people in the world who just want to make them feel better about themselves."

Entries must include a photo and a story explaining why they or their nominee should be selected. Participants must be willing to comply with the stylists' decisions in the makeover process and authorize before and after photos to be made public through local advertisements.

Public voting will determine the Most Amazing Makeover, with the winner receiving a gift basket from participating salons.

To enter, submit photo and written explanation to Shear Illusions, 127 First St., Marion, KY 42064 or email shear965@yahoo.com.

Livingston Central makes low-achieving list

STAFF REPORT

Missing 26 days of class due in large part to spring flooding is never good for a school district, and while it wasn't directly related to Livingston Central High School (LCHS) being named as a low-achieving school, it surely didn't help.

Designated by the Kentucky Department of Education as one of 19 schools in the commonwealth consistently low-achieving, LCHS made the list after failing to meet all required benchmarks through the No Child Left Behind (NCLB) Act. Though LCHS did meet some of its goals, it failed to meet Adequate Yearly Progress, the minimum improvement required of each school over the course of a year. To be named to the list as a persistent low-achiever, schools like Livingston Central must be in the lowest five percent of all schools to meet achievement targets for at least three consecutive years.

For Livingston County Superintendent of Schools Darryl Chittenden, learning that the high school was named to the list was upsetting, but he said excuses aren't being made. Instead, district administrators are rolling up their sleeves and focusing on what needs to be done in order to be taken off the list in the future.

"We are disappointed to see one of our schools on the list, and we're taking the steps necessary to see that our stay on the list is short," Chittenden said in a press release. "Initiatives will be implemented across the district to give our schools the support they need to ensure gains will be made by our students in the current school year."

Some of the improvements LCHS has already undergone is the recent purchase of an assessment program that is being utilized not just by the high school but by all grade levels. District Supervisor of Instruction Sheri Henson said the program will help to identify specific areas where a student may be struggling and allows teachers to provide more individualized instruction.

"Teachers are implementing the new Kentucky Core Academic Standards in reading and math and using strategies like setting learning targets and formatively assessing students to determine needs and guide instruction," Henson said. "The district is also participating in statewide network meetings to gather information on initiatives stemming from Senate Bill 1 and taking that information back to the schools. High school teachers, who are teaching end-of-course assessment classes, are being trained through ACT workshops to ensure students are well prepared. Days have also been added into the school calendar for teachers to analyze data, develop school improvement plans and assess progress that will enable students to be college- and career-ready."

Because LCHS was named to the low-achieving list, the school is eligible for federal School Improvement Grant funding for the 2012-13 school year. However, before funding can be made available, all of the schools on the list will undergo leadership assessments determining the capacity of the school's principal and council and district leadership. According to Chittenden, Livingston's assessment will be during the week of Jan. 22, 2012.

"The district is committed to improving and we have a dedicated group of teachers and administrators who are committed to seeing our students succeed," the superintendent said.

Rockets Marooned 49-0

Crittenden goes to Hancock for playoffs

STAFF REPORT

Outmatched for the second week in a row, Crittenden County was helpless against the superior strength and speed of ninth-ranked Madisonville from Class 4A. The Maroons beat the Rockets 49-0, ending Crittenden's regular season at 3-7.

The Rockets will play at Hancock County Friday for the Class 2A playoffs. Crittenden is a No. 3 seed for post-season First Region play and the Hornets are No. 2.

Crittenden has not played Hancock in five years. The teams were in the same district from 1999 to 2006. During that time, Hancock won five of eight meetings with the Rockets.

"They're a typical Hancock team like we used to know," said Rocket coach Al Starnes. "They're very physical and execute very well."

The Hornets lost in overtime to third-ranked Owensboro Catholic to finish second in the Second District.

"They run the Wing T and they run it very well," Starnes said. "They have three very good running backs."

Crittenden should get some help in the backfield with the return of senior tailback Dustin Hernandez, who completes a four-game suspension.

As last week's final regular-season game, the Maroons scored on their first play when Jawan Combs went 60 yards for a touchdown. They tacked on two more rushing TDs of 64 yards and one of 57 yards. Tray Carr, a player area OVC colleges are courting, threw two touchdown passes, both to Dean Summers. Carr also ran for a touchdown.

At one point early in the game, Madisonville had run just four offensive plays from scrimmage and had amassed three touchdowns. Through three quarters, Madisonville had run 21 plays and scored seven touchdowns – making a full one-third of their snaps worth six points.

Crittenden's best chance to score turned into six points for the visiting Maroons. The Rockets used a fumble recovery to help them get deep into Madisonville territory. When the drive stalled, Rocket placekicker Micah Hollamon tried a 30-yard field goal which was blocked. Combs scooped it up and went the other way 89 yards for a touchdown.

Rocket running back Grant Gardner led all rushers with 97 yards on 22 carries.

It was the third shutout for the Rockets this season; however, the teams that have kept them scoreless have all been ranked among the Top 10 in Class 2A, 3A and 4A – Murray, Tilghman and Madisonville.

CCMS boys' teams off to good starts

BY DEREK MCCREE

PRESS SPORTS WRITER

Crittenden County Middle School's eighth-grade basketball team is off to a good start, winning its first three games and carrying a 2-0 Fifth district record into tonight's (Thursday) match-up at home against Caldwell County.

Rocket skipper Bryce Winders is glad to be undefeated, but keeping his team motivated and playing together is a challenge.

"There are times when you can be at 3-0 and have played down to your competition," Winders said. "You can easily be 1-2 and have played some great games, but missed just a few shots, which makes all the difference."

Winders expects his players to step up their level of play against district foes Caldwell and Trigg counties.

Team captains Dakota Watson and Dylan Hicks have led the way for Crittenden so far. They have accounted for nearly 70-percent of the Rockets' points through three games. Watson stands tall above his peers at 6-foot-1. As the Rockets' starting center, he averages 14 points per contest.

"Dakota has worked extremely hard on his own personal skill set," Winders said. "He is now making good, solid post moves with a defender on him and developing a mid-range game."

Hicks is the starting point guard and has scored in double digits twice. Winders said the team will go as far as his two captains can carry it.

Starting forwards Dylan Hollis and Nick Castiller have been integral parts in the team's ability to run its 1-3-1 zone and press the tempo against the opponents. Last season as a seventh grader Castiller played more in the post at the power forward position and is now being asked to run the floor as a small forward, handling some offensive sets.

"Castiller is able to step up and knock down shots," Winders said. "His shooting is night and day from where it was last season."

Winders hopes to play a faster pace this season, pushing the ball down the court. He is still looking for players on the bench to step up so that can happen.

Crittenden's seventh grade Rockets (1-2) picked up their first win of the season last week at home, defeating Livingston County 21-15. Coach Blair Winders made an adjustment at the point guard position which he credits as one of the reasons the Rockets overcame the Cardinals.

Maeson Myers had started at center for the team in the first two games, but was switched to run the team's offense at guard.

"(Maeson) started at the point guard because he is more physical and can dribble through the pressure," said Winders.

Myers made several passes in key moments against the Cardinals to bigman Shelby Robinson, who led the team with 12 points.

"We have five players who have stepped up and are helping to lead the team," Winders said. "Bobby Glen Stephens, Paxton Riley, Maeson, Will Tolley and Jared Lundy played for a traveling team last summer and it was really their first year of basketball competition outside of little league."

Winders said he is trying to get his players to have better court vision this season and that it is a learning process, requiring a great deal of correction and patience.

Crittenden County youth soccer hosted a Pumpkin Kickin-It Soccer Tournament Saturday at Marion-Crittenden County Park. More than 270 players and spectators were in attendance with seven teams from area counties participating. Sebree's 11-under team defeated the Mas-sac County Orange Crush in the championship game. The tournament was sponsored by numerous businesses in Marion. Pictured are members of the Crittenden County squad (front from left) Ashley Wheeler, Falicity Millikan, Elizabeth Corley, Gabby Venson, Lydia Burdon, (back) Coach Casey Stallins, Lindsey Cochran, Emmalea Barnes, Lauryn Faulkner, Hannah Cooksey, Ryan Belt, Bailey Priest and Coach Hannah Peek. AGRICULTURE NEWS AND NOTES

FSA county ballots are mailed Friday

The Farm Service Agency will be mailing ballots for the 2011 FSA county committee elections Friday to eligible voters. The deadline to return ballots to the local FSA office is Dec. 5.

"The FSA county committee allows producers to make important decisions concerning the local administration of federal farm programs," said John W. McCauley, FSA State Executive Director. "I urge all eligible farmers and ranchers, especially minorities and women, to get involved in their communities by voting in this year's elections."

To be an eligible voter, farmers and ranchers must participate or cooperate in FSA programs. A person who is not of legal voting age, but supervises and conducts the farming operations of an entire farm, can also vote. Agricultural producers in each county submitted candidate names during the nomination period held last summer.

Eligible voters who do not receive a ballot can obtain one at the local USDA Service Center in Salem. Ballots returned by mail must be postmarked no later than Dec. 5.

SURE program deadline Nov. 14

The USDA's Farm Service Agency Supplemental Revenue Assistance Payments (SURE) program enrollment for 2010 crop year losses begins Nov. 14.

"Producers across the state experienced several natural disasters during the 2010 crop year that caused hardship and financial losses to many agricultural operations," said John W. McCauley, FSA State Executive Director.

"The SURE program provides assistance to producers when disaster strikes, so I strongly encourage producers with 2010 crop losses to contact their local FSA office to learn more about the program," he said.

To qualify for a SURE payment, the producer's operation must be located in a county that was declared a disaster, either as a primary or contiguous county, for 2010 and have at least a 10 percent production loss that affects one crop of economic significance. Both Crittenden and Livingston counties are among those that qualified. Producers with agricultural operations located outside a disaster county are eligible for SURE benefits if they had a production loss greater or equal to 50 percent of the normal production on the farm.

To meet program eligibility requirements, producers must have obtained a policy or plan of insurance for all insurable crops through the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation and obtained Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP) coverage on non-insurable crops, if available, from FSA. Eligible farmers and ranchers who meet the definition of a socially disadvantaged, limited resource or beginning farmer or rancher do not have to meet this requirement. Forage crops intended for grazing are not eligible for SURE benefits.

For more information on SURE program eligibility requirements contact the local County FSA office in Salem at 928-2180.

Uncle Mo back at Churchill for race

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Uncle Mo is back at Churchill Downs as the early 5-2 favorite in a field of 13 for the $5 million Breeders' Cup Classic nearly six months after he was knocked out of the Kentucky Derby on the eve of the race with what was later diagnosed as a liver disease.

He was the second favorite for the Derby. Now all eyes are back on Uncle Mo to see if he can complete his comeback with a season-ending victory in North America's richest race.

"Uncle Mo has never looked better, has never trained better," said owner Mike Repole.

Uncle Mo lost 200 pounds while he was sidelined with the illness that initially puzzled veterinarians and trainer Todd Pletcher alike. He returned to the races in August and lost the King's Bishop by a nose before winning the Kelso Handicap by three lengths in October.

Uncle Mo and John Velazquez will break from the No. 12 post in Saturday's 1¼-mile race.

Crittenden Junior Pro Football

5th, 6th graders lose 46-6

Crittenden County's fifth- and-sixth grade Junior Pro Rockets (3-3) lost 46-6 to Morganfield Saturday at Rocket Stadium in the final regular-season game.

Two-way starter Gavin Dickerson was injured during the game and was limited to playing offense only for the Rockets. Ethan Dossett filled in for Dickerson on defense, recording two tackles and an interception. Despite the Rocket defense forcing three turnovers, the team was unable to gain traction on offense, totaling just 138 yards.

Ellen Merrick, Dominique LaPlante, (second row) Emily Bruns, Jessica Tinsley, Tucker Frazer and Corey Berry are high school students who represent the vitamin and mineral characters in the featured book for Unite to Read, "Good Enough to Eat," according to Amy Hardin, business teacher and Future Business Leaders of America adviser at Crittenden County High School. "They are just a few of the high school students that will be working with the CCES kids," Hardin said.

CCHS unites to read with CCES

STAFF REPORT

Students from Crittenden County schools as well as parents will Unite to Read today at the high school library.

Unite to Read is a statewide program that promotes literacy and lifelong reading to students in kindergarten through fifth grade. According to Amy Hardin, business teacher and Future Business Leaders of America adviser at the high school, Crittenden County Elementary School students participating in the program will be creating a cookbook, learning how food goes from the farm to the table, participating in a coloring contest and a book walk, crawling through a maze, having pictures made with a farm background, playing educational computer games, creating healthy snacks and listening to stories.

About 25 high school students will be volunteering to help with Unite to Read.

Registration for the event runs from 5 to 5:30 p.m., immediately followed by the program that concludes at 7 p.m.

There will also be a segment for parents that includes sessions on how to make healthy snacks for kids led by Tracie Newcom from the Health Quest Wellness Center; exercises that you can do with children offered by Heather Culvey, personal trainer and owner of New You Fitness at Health Quest; and public library and children's programs led by Regina Merrick, Crittenden County Public Library director.

Marion woman accused of stealing cars

STAFF REPORT

A Marion woman is charged with allegedly stealing two cars on the night of Oct. 24.

Police say Toni Dawn Tramell, 32, abandoned both vehicles, one in town and one at Rosebud Cemetery in rural Crittenden County. Police believe the suspect was high on alcohol or drugs when she allegedly took the vehicles.

Officers George Foster and Jerry Parker are investigating the case, which started after 10 p.m., Oct. 24. The owner of a Ford LTD reported the vehicle had been taken from North Maple Street. The car was found on Adams Street near the city sewer plant later that night where it had apparently broken down.

Police think Tramell abandoned that car in the middle of the street then walked to nearby Sturgis Road where she took a red and white Ford Mustang. That vehicle was not located until the next day when Tramell was summoned by the police department for questioning. Police Chief Ray O'Neal said Tramell told officers where the Mustang could be found.

Tramell was arraigned in Crittenden District Court last week on two counts of automobile theft.

Distinguished alumni sought by committee, school board

STAFF REPORT

Local education leaders are looking for nominees for the 2012 class of Crittenden County Schools Distinguished Alumni. The awards will be presented before graduation in the spring. Both living and posthumous recipients will be noticed.

Nominations may be made beginning today (Thursday) until Dec. 2, and winners will be determined by educational, professional and community service accomplishments. A five-member selection panel will announce the winners before the end of the year.

Anyone can make a nomination, but recipients of the award must have graduated high school from Crittenden County. Applications are available online on the school district's website at www.crittenden.k12.ky.us or on The Press Online at www.the-press.com.

Last year, Kenneth Winters, a Kentucky state senator from Murray, former college professor and president; and Albert Michael Crider, also an educator and ground-breaking scientist now at the University of Southern Illinois at Edwardsville, were honored in the inaugural class of recipients. Posthumous honorees were Forrest Carlisle Pogue, an author; F. Julius Fohs, renowned geologist who gave Marion Fohs Hall; and Ollie M. James, a former U.S. Senator.

New England trip proves exciting for seniors

BY JERRITT HOVEY-BROWN
PRESS REPORTER

It was a good deal, according to both Peggy Easley and Faye Conger. Take a trip with Diamond Tours to New England, visit several historical sites along the way, all for less than a $1,000.

Conger and Easley learned of the trip through the Crittenden County Senior Citizens Center. The tour was offered through Diamond Tours, allowing passengers a site-seeing trip that would wind across eight states on the journey to New England with the majority of the trip spent in Cape Cod. It was the first time either had both been to the East coast, seeing the Atlantic Ocean for the first time.

"There aren't any words to describe it," Conger said. "The water is just so blue. It's amazing."

Along with eight seniors from Crittenden County, Easley and Conger joined the tour that featured other seniors from Princeton, Ky., and some who traveled all the way from out of state just for the nine-day trip.

Leaving Oct. 15, the tour stopped along the way at several historical sites in various states. Some of the sites included the Hershey factory in Hershey, Pa., Heinz History Center in Pittsburgh, as well as Plymouth, Mass., to visit Plymouth Rock, a favorite stop for Conger.

"I couldn't get over how small the rock was and how guarded it was," Conger explained. "It's gated and I had to practically lean in and over to even get a picture of it. But I was just blown away by how small the rock really was. Wasn't any bigger than maybe two feet in diameter."

Once the tour bus arrived in Cape Cod, passengers enjoyed day trips out among the small town and eating at several local wharfs, a first for Easley and Conger who had never eaten a lobster before then. The trip also handed Easley a memorable moment as she waded into the ocean alongside the beach in front of the summer house of John F. Kennedy.

"I was late making it back to the bus because I was gathering sea shells," Easley said with a smile. "That's something I'll always remember, wading into the same water that the Kennedy's had."

The tour also featured a 45-minute ferry ride that took the group to Martha's Vineyard. An interesting fact pointed out by Conger was that the ferry ride was nearly $60 for a round trip.

"Everything was more expensive there," she said. "We couldn't believe the cost of some of the things."

The trip taught several interesting facts that both women said were great to learn. One fact was that the popularity of Martha's Vineyard was boosted only after the film Jaws. Now, it's a favored summer getaway.

Conger and Easley said the trip itself was a lifetime opportunity that they would recommend to anyone. However, both agreed they were excited to be back at home once it was over.

"It's pretty there but it also gives you a deep appreciation of Kentucky," Conger said. "I would go back in a minute, though."

"The trip gives you an appreciation for the beauty that is in our country," Easley added. "The natural beauty that God made. I was just in awe. Cape Cod is a gorgeous place with the blue water and white sand. I would definitely tell someone that if they had the opportunity to take a trip, do it."

Data Day

Last Thursday was a data day for Crittenden County High School juniors where administrators walked students through their CATS and ACT test results from the year before, going over high and low points and how they could improve scores. With the upcoming change from state assessment to end of course assessments, CCHS principal Rhonda Callaway said it is important to talk to the students about the shift in scoring and to see how they can improve in problematic areas. At left, Callaway works with a junior student as she goes through his ACT results.

Herron-Herrin

Donny and Donna Herron of Marion announce the upcoming marriage of their daughter, LaDonna Allen, to Justin Cody Herrin, son of Joe and Sandra Herrin of Marion.

The bride is the granddaughter of Rickey and Barbara Riley of Marion and the late Al and Mary Millikan. She is a 2011 graduate of Crittenden County High School and is attending Madisonville Community College pursuing a bachelor's degree in nursing. She is a member of Barnett Chapel Church and is employed by Jones 88 Dip and is a private home sitter.

The groom is the grandson of Beverly and Pauline Herrin and Gary and Kathy Bozeman, all of Marion. He is a 2003 graduate of Crittenden County High School and is a 2008 graduate of West Kentucky Community and Technical College in Paducah with a degree in applied science of industrial electricity. He is employed by Invensys Rail and is a member of Second Baptist Church.

Wedding vows will be exchanged at 6 p.m., Nov. 11 at Barnett Chapel Church with a dessert reception to follow. All friends and family are invited.

Rethink your wardrobe in a down economy

As families face a new economic "normal," they are shifting toward a cultural zeitgeist, perhaps permanent, that embraces financial conservatism. At home, this conservative behavior is illustrated by the rise in families who clip coupons, buy store brands, frequent discount stores, and delay purchases. Many family budgets now emphasize essential purchases, reducing debt and increasing savings, and limit treats and luxuries.

Clothing is not exactly a luxury, but it can eat up a large portion of a family budget. To save money, many people are rethinking the items in their closets to come up with creative ways to make clothes last and seem "new." Basic repairs, maintenance and attentive care throughout the lifespan of a garment can extend it by many years.

Here are some tips from Marjorie Baker, UK extension associate for textiles and clothing:

Allow clothing to rest in between wearing, especially shoes. Shoes also benefit from cleaning before they are stored. Using a shoe tree will help maintain shape, which extends life. Store shoes in breathable cotton shoe bags or the cardboard boxes they came in, not plastic, which traps mold and mildew.

Air clothing after wearing it to let moisture evaporate and wrinkles relax. Airing also naturally helps to deodorize clothing. Minimize washing and dry cleaning to extend the lifespan of clothes. Invest in a clothes brush and try airing and brushing your garments to refresh them, particularly woolens. Wrinkled woolens can also be hung in a steamy bathroom, which will refresh them and eliminate any creases.

Properly store clothes, using appropriate hangers. Promptly remove the dry cleaner's plastic bag. Leave closet doors open to promote airflow and leave room in each drawer, rather than stuffing it full. Leaving on a light in the closet can inhibit moths and mildew.

Get the most out of your clothes washer, using proper water temperatures and settings as well as the correct amount of detergent and whitener. Front-load washers are increasingly common, though still pricier than top-load washers. But, if you are in the market for a new one, front-loaders are energy efficient, use less water and help preserve clothes, since there is no agitation.

Remember to wash soiled clothes promptly to avoid letting stained or soiled areas become permanent. If you cannot wash immediately, treat stains promptly to prevent them from setting.

As for drying, consider installing a clothesline. You can use it to dry clean clothing as well as to air out woolens, quilts and rugs. It probably won't take the place of your dryer, but it comes in handy for certain things.

Ironing is a skill, and one that practice makes perfect—or at least, better. Learning to iron can give you a significant savings if you forgo the dry cleaner. Choose "no wrinkle" to shirts and easy care, wash-and-dry clothing. Many of these easy-care items can hang to dry, reducing use of the dryer—which lowers your utility bill.

Learn to mend clothing. Basic repairs and maintenance are quick and easy. Plus, sewing on buttons, snaps, and repairing tears or holes will save money.

Learn to sew. You will be able to reinvent your wardrobe, revamping collars, hems, sleeve lengths, and even turning shirts into skirts. Your imagination is the limit.

The Crittenden County Extension Service is currently offering sewing assistance classes twice a month in the evenings. Call 965-5236 for further information.

Educational programs of the Cooperative Extension Service serve all people regardless of race, color, sex, religion, disability or national origin.

This is one of my articles that I like to put under the title Our Crittenden County Folks. For it's a special story about one of our local people. Most all Crittenden County folks are special, but sometimes an exceptional story is associated with one of them and just needs to be shared.

James Holloman, a Crittenden Countian, always had a love of music. As a young man, he loved to listen to country and gospel music, and he also sang with his family.

Through the years, there have been many talented musicians from Crittenden County. Many of these never had formal training. Instead, they just had a God-given talent and a good musical ear. They were able to learn to play their instruments by just listening to the melody of songs.

These talented folks naturally enjoyed getting together with other musicians for pickin' and singing. Some great local bands have been formed from these get-togethers. Years ago, a favorite place to gather and play – whether for a special occasion or just for the enjoyment of playing and sharing their music with others – was the courthouse lawn.

At these courthouse gatherings is where James Holloman came to listen to country music. One tall, young man who played a guitar was one of his favorites. That man's name was Bill Marvel. At the time, Holloman never thought that Marvel would one day become a special friend and mentor.

Holloman went on to be a husband and father and worked in the coal mines for a living. On Jan. 8, 1969, a terrible accident happened at the mine where he worked and he lost his eyesight. It is something tough for us to imagine, trying and pick up your life and continue it the best you can after losing your sight.

But continue on he did. Holloman raised his two sons; he learned to cook, bake, and do most anything that a person that has sight is able to do. He made breakfasts of eggs and gravy for his children, baked pies, and I hear that he can create one of the best desserts anywhere around. Holloman just smiles and says, "I can make a mean banana pudding."

Even with doing all this, Holloman wanted something else in his life, something he could do for enjoyment. He yearned for something that he could do for himself and others – something that would help him pass the time when the everyday work was done.

During this time, Holloman remembered Bill Marvel from his guitar playing at the courthouse. They had talked a few times over the years, Marvel seemed like a nice person and perhaps he might teach him to learn to pick the guitar. So Holloman called Marvel and asked him if he could help him learn to play.

Marvel wanted to help Holloman with this request, but he worried about it for a while. For he had never taught a blind person how to pick a guitar. If one couldn't see, how could you show them where to place their fingers? How could he learn on which strings and which fret he needed to place his fingers for the songs?

I guess the Lord was with them both – Holloman for wanting to do this seemingly impossible task, and Marvel for wanting to help and share his knowledge of playing the guitar. Soon, Marvel starting visiting Holloman and the music lessons began.

Guitar playing, looks fairly simple, if you watch someone who knows how to play. It's like they just strum away, fingers moving effortlessly, and the beautiful music flows from the instrument. Well, I can tell you it's not simple, for there are certain strings that your fingers have to be on to make a cord. There are different frets where you have to move your fingers to make the right sound for these cords. I could go on, but my mind gets tangled up just trying to remember all that Marvel and Holloman told me about playing the guitar.

Holloman wanted to learn how to "pick out a song." When you play cords, you are playing rhythm, but to pick out a song you have to pick out the notes on the strings. Playing rhythm isn't as hard as picking a tune.

When the lessons began, Marvel wasn't sure what to expect. Here is a sample of how you might start a new beginner:

We'll learn the C major chord (often called a "C chord). Place your third finger on the third fret of the fifth string. Now, put your second finger on the second fret of the fourth string. Finally, put your first finger on the first fret of the second string. When playing a C major chord, you do not want to strum the sixth string. Watch your pick to make sure you only strum the bottom five strings when you are first learning the C major chord.

Since Holloman wasn't able to see the strings and frets, Bill knew he would have to learn by listening to the sounds and feeling the strings. Holloman was fortunate that he had an ear for music. He had that natural God-given talent because he had been around music all of his life.

Marvel helped Holloman first by placing his fingers on the strings to get him started. Then, he would have Holloman move his fingers up and down the neck of the guitar. Marvel would play a cord or note on his guitar and would tell Holloman to listen to how it sounded. They did this through the notes and cords and Holloman would listen until he got it to sound right. If it wasn't in the correct fret, Holloman would know to either move his hand up or down until he found just that right sound.

Some of the first songs Holloman learned to pick were Wildwood Flower, Wheels, Freight Train, Will the Circle be Unbroken, Under The Double Eagle and Steel Guitar Rag.

I got to listen while Marvel and Holloman played several songs. Marvel played lead for a while and Holloman backed him up by playing rhythm. Then they switched and Holloman picked out some toe-tapping Johnny Cash tunes such as Folsom Prison Blues and I Walk the Line. Just for me, the pair played an old-time western favorite, San Antonio Rose. It was wonderful.

As you listen to them play, you couldn't think about Holloman not being about to see, you just heard the music created by his hands and his guitar.

If you've ever really watched a guitar player, his hand on the neck of the instrument just seems to move effortlessly over the strings, fingers dancing faster than you can keep up, without ever a pause.

I asked Marvel, "How can you think that fast to be able to do that?"

He told me, "I really can't answer that, for they just seem to know where to go next."

Holloman agreed with this, and they started on another great old, county tune.

The description provided herein was provided by the parties and is contained in the Judgment and Order of Sale. Address: 4168 U.S. 641 S., Marion, Kentucky 42064

1. The Master Commissioner will sell same at public auction to the highest and best bidder at the Courthouse door for cash or a cash deposit of 10% of the purchase price with the balance on credit for thirty (30) days. The successful bidder shall be required to give a bond with good surety for the unpaid purchase price with said bond bearing interest at 12% per annum from the date of the sale. In the event Plaintiff is the successful purchaser, Plaintiff shall be entitled to a credit of its judgment against the purchase price and shall only be obliged to pay the Court costs, fees and costs of the Master Commissioner and any delinquent real estate taxes payable pursuant to the Order of Sale.

2. The Purchaser shall be required to assume and pay any ad valorem taxes and all taxes assessed against said property by any City, State, County or any school district which are due and payable at any time during the year 2011 or thereafter. Said sale shall be made subject to: all easements, covenants and restrictions of record; assessments for public improvements; and any facts which an inspection and accurate survey may disclose. Said property shall be sold with the improvements thereon "as is".

3. The purpose of this sale is the satisfaction of a Judgment entered on April 14, 2011 on behalf of the Plaintiff against the Defendants, Rick Smith a/k/a Rick L. Smith and the County of Crittenden for the sum of $57,987.27, plus interest at a rate of 7.00000 percent per annum from April 1, 2010, attorney's fees and for court costs expended herein.

to run the ambulance service.

After about an hour of presentation, Hilkey, CHS Chief Executive Officer Jim Christensen and Chief Nursing Officer Robin Curnel fielded questions and comments from the crowd. During that period, an emotional Linda Schumann — one of the few in attendance at the meeting from the county's general population — told the story of a friend in cardiac arrest who survived the heart attack due to EMS response.

"I remember when you were there to save the life of a person having heart attack," she told Hilkey and the CHS administrators.

Burden to save EMS uneven

Christensen said the hospital has been taking money from savings the last few years to offset ambulance losses caused by a poor economy and changes to the health care industry, including a 70 percent drop in Medicare reimbursements over the last 10 years.

"Without help, EMS cannot survive," Christensen said before taking questions from the audience comprised mostly of hospital personnel and board members, elected officials and volunteer emergency personnel.

"The problem is, it falls back to property taxes," Herrin said of offering public assistance to the EMS. "The ones paying a whole lot are hurting."

Herrin is one of those. Every year, a tax bill for the real estate he owns comes to his mailbox, unlike nearly 21 percent of the residents of Crittenden County who own no property outside of an automobile or watercraft.

"I have nothing against renters, don't get me wrong, but the tax burden is just not spread out," said Herrin, one of a half-dozen volunteer firefighters at the meeting.

While neither Judge-Executive Perry Newcom nor magistrates on Crittenden Fiscal Court have pledged any specific support from its coffers to help fund the hospital's struggling ambulance service, virtually any answer to the request for aid would come from tax revenue disproportionately paid in by landowners. Almost 2,000 of the county's 9,300 served by EMS are renters, according to the 2010 U.S. Census.

Newcom said that is part of the problem the fiscal court faces in any decision to help fund additional services in the county — the tax burden is unbalanced.

"That's my whole problem with property tax," he said.

In fact, Newcom said the county is already exempt from federal housing assistance because of its large number of renters.

Though he was unable to attend last Thursday's informational meeting, the judge-executive said Monday that he has heard plenty of feedback from constituents after the meeting. And the phone calls and visits have been the same.

"Everyone is in agreement we need an ambulance service, but no one wants to pay more taxes," said Newcom, who along with several magistrates, was in Louisville late last week for the annual convention of the Kentucky Association of Counties.

Fiscal court weighs options

Jeff Ellis and Donnetta Travis were the only magistrates in attendance at the hospital's informational meeting. Travis, who works as materials manager for CHS, said the session was informative, but she's still not ready to cast a vote on the issue.

Currently, the county has no annual outlays to CHS for operation of the ambulance, though magistrates have in the past offered assistance through acquiring a new ambulance or equipment. Newcom said the fiscal court is not opposed to helping the hospital keep EMS, but the county's means are limited.

"You can't just pull it out of thin air," he said of the requested financial assistance.

Hilkey said there are very few counties in Kentucky whose ambulance service is not supplemented in some way by the fiscal court.

"Even a private company would expect a subsidy," he said, pointing to an image from a slide showing

Logan County Fiscal Court's assistance of $165,000 and the purchase of ambulance service vehicles to the privately-run service there. "We're the only ones not getting anything."

County government in Kentucky has few methods to generate revenue and most are through property taxes. Establishing either an ambulance service or hospital taxing district are options open to magistrates in addition to upping the general property tax rate. Each of the new taxing districts, however, would be limited to levying no more than 10 cents per $100 of assessed property. That maximum rate would generate less than $300,000 annually based on current property value assessments in the county.

Even if the county were to choose such a route, it would be next autumn before revenue from 2012 tax bills could be made available to assist the ambulance service. That amount of time is a luxury Crittenden EMS cannot afford, said Hilkey.

Future meetings scheduled

The hospital has scheduled two more informational meetings on the ambulance service, the first of which is slated for noon on Nov. 14 at the Ed-Tech Center. The final one is tentatively set for 7:30 a.m., Nov. 18 at the same location.

Crittenden Fiscal Court next meets at 8:30 a.m., Nov. 15 in the judge-executive's courthouse office.

STOUT

ily Bibles, which were held by his wife Doris.

Judge Russell called Stout one of the best bankruptcy attorneys in the country. His resume illustrates it, too. Stout has been involved in some major bankruptcy cases as an attorney and trustee and he was once chairman of the National Association of Bankruptcy Trustees.

"Public service is a calling," Judge Russell said, and he predicted that Stout would find his service on the federal bench over the next 14 years to be very rewarding.

The entire ceremony was steeped in participation by family and friends. Wayne Garvey, Stout's pastor at Marion United Methodist Church, gave the invocation, and his son, Logan Stout, a seminary student, offered a prayer of dismissal.

Stout grew up in Marion, studied at local schools, then earned a bachelor's degree from Murray State University and a juris doctorate from Salmon P. Chase School of Law at Northern Kentucky University. His father died when he and brother Keith were young men, but their mother, Imogene, lived to be 90. She passed away in 2009. Stout recalled the early days of his practice, working at his mother's kitchen table.

The Paducah Sun newspaper published a front-page spread the day after the swearing in ceremony and coffee shops and barber shops were abuzz in Marion about the new judge's confirmation.

Betty Sullenger, in her 80s, said her husband, Doug, loaned Stout an old, manual typewriter to prepare one of his first legal documents.

"I wish he'd come get that old typewriter," she said with a laugh while getting her hair done at a local beauty shop.

Zac Greenwell, the commonwealth's attorney for the Fifth Judicial Circuit that includes Crittenden County, said Stout is a role model.

"He is so well liked and has done so much for his community. In many ways, he has shown us all how to be a good community servant. He's an example for all of us," Greenwell said.

Stout has closed his practice in Marion. It has merged with the firm of Frazer, Rogers and Peek of Marion.
