Clarke will be presented the Knight of the Legion of Honor medal, which is awarded through the French government to pay tribute to those who fought to liberate France and western Europe during the war. "It's a real surprise and honor," Clarke said.

Rifle season brings dozens of outside deer hunters to area

STAFF REPORT

The Month of Orange has arrived and brightly-clad sportsmen are showing up by the truckload.

Crittenden County is one of the most desirable destinations for whitetail deer hunters. The rifle season opens Saturday and runs through Nov. 23.

Compared to other sporting activities, big game hunting in the commonwealth is still relatively new. It bounced back in the 1970s thanks to restoration projects by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources (KDFWR) and is one of the greatest tourist draws to Crittenden County, according to Marion Tourism Director Michele Edwards.

Randy Conway, the conservation officer for Crittenden County, estimates that about 80 percent or more of the hunters will be non-residents this weekend.

By non-residents, he means hunters who come to Crittenden County from outside of the county. The game warden says the vast majority of his contacts during the deer season are with out-of-town-ers.

"They are mostly from places like Florida, Georgia, Indiana and now we're starting to see some a few from Louisiana," Conway said.

Although hunters are importing by the dozens, there hasn't been a deer added to Kentucky since 1999. Still, the state's herd continues to grow, and so does the throng of armed humans chasing them. The restocking project officially ended 15 years ago and there are now about 1 million deer in the commonwealth. Last year, Kentucky sold fewer than 230,000 deer tags, the permit needed to shoot a whitetail.

Crittenden was the No. 3 harvest county in the state last year behind only Owen and Pendleton counties, both of which are in the north-cen-

CRITTENDEN COUNTY JAILER

Voters choose Kirk over Kemper

By DARYL K. TABOR
PRESS EDITOR

By a slim margin, Republican Robbie Kirk won Tuesday's county jailer's contest, nudging out Democrat Daniel Kemper by 71 votes with 51 percent of the electorate.

Though Kirk's term will not officially start until January of next year, Crittenden County Judge-Executive Perry Newcom is looking to appoint Kirk to fill the position vacated this week by Jailer Phil Parker.

Parker, appointed in August of 2013 to fill the unexpired term of the late Rickey Riley, who at the time cited health reasons for giving up his elected post more than a year early, ended his appointment Wednesday. Parker's decision has left a vacancy at the jail which will be filled by Kirk once election results are certified by Crittenden County Clerk Carolyn Byford later this week. In the interim, the re-

MARION CITY COUNCIL

City ballots keep mayor, shake up council

By CHRIS EVANS

Pretty close to one-third of all the residents living in Marion today have never known another mayor.

By the time he's done, Mayor Mickey Alexander will have served 30 years in that office, the longest period of any mayor in western Kentucky.

According to U.S. Census figures, better than three out of 10 Marion citizens are below the age of 28. Alexander is completing his 26th year as mayor.

On Tuesday, the 65-year-old financial advisor was re-elected to a seventh term, which will take him to what he calls "retirement age."

Alexander turned back challenger Ken Floyd, 65, a retired retail manager who formerly managed Five Star Food Mart in Marion.

Alexander received 56 percent of the 852 votes cast. That was a greater margin of victory than the last time the mayor was challenged back in 2006. Current councilman Mike Byford opposed the mayor eight years ago, losing by 3 percentage points.

Over the years, the mayor has had only two other challengers. Ronald "Red" Howton, who is the current fire chief, ran unsuccessfully against Alexander the first time the mayor ran for office. In the early 1990s, the late Vonelle Sturgeon, a councilwoman, ran against the mayor, but was de-

CRITTENDEN FISCAL COURT

2 new faces added to court, 1 incumbent holds seat

By DARYL K. TABOR

Crittenden Fiscal Court will see a pair of new faces beginning January, following the results of Tuesday's general election; but voters also chose to keep a familiar face on the court for another four years.

In District 5, Magistrate Donnetta Travis, a Democrat, fended off a challenge by Republican Wayne Winters by a tally of 375-289.

In District 1, the only other contested race, Democrat Danny Fowler edged out GOP incumbent Jeff Ellis by five votes to become one of the two fresh names on the new fiscal court that seats next year. The final vote was 265-260 in favor of Fowler.

In campaigning, Fowler said the condition of county roadways in his district was the No. 1 concern of the electorate.

"Roads were a major issue," he said at Crittenden County Courthouse following the election.

Four years ago, Fowler lost the general election to Ellis by 17 votes.

Meantime, another new face on the court will be retired coal miner Mark Holloman, who was unopposed Tuesday. The 55-year-old Democrat will replace Percy Cook on the fiscal court.

Cook, also a Democrat, has been a magistrate since 1993 and opted to not seek reelection for a sixth term. He will turn 84 shortly after leaving office.

Holloman said upon leaving the mines after 36 years, his family encouraged him to seek election to the fiscal court.

Local attorney Brandi Hagan Rogers made history Tuesday night, becoming the first Crittenden Countian to win an elected judgeship in the 5th Judicial Circuit, which includes Union and Webster counties, too.

Surrounded by dozens of supporters at Main Street Italian Grill, the post-election headquarters for Rogers, Rep. Lynn Bechler and a few other local GOP candidates, the judge-elect said her message resonated with voters in the three counties that make up the circuit.

"I just tried to be honest. I know what it's like to stand before family court and not know what's going to happen," said the 33-year-old wife and mother of one.

As a child, Rogers felt firsthand the emotions of being in front of a judge, watching adults battle over

Having rescue squad invaluable

A couple of weeks ago, I had the pleasure of tearing up a car.

No, it wasn't in my usual manner that involves a ditch, a deer, a parked vehicle or other object at the mercy of my less-than-perfect driving skills. In fact, it was quite intentional.

During a routine training exercise, Crittenden County Rescue Squad Chief Donnie Arflack and fellow member Billy Arflack coerced me into ripping the door off a sacrificial sedan. They were on the verge of forcing me, as I typically resist the temptation to potentially harm others or myself.

After watching others on the team practice various means of getting into cars in the most unconventional of ways, I felt even less prepared to step up to bat.

But once I was handed those powerful pneumatic cutting and spreading tools used in actual victim extractions from vehicles, there was no looking back. With some guidance and a little help from Assistant Chief and President Mike Crabtree, the passenger side front door lay on the ground after just a few minutes of work.

I'd never really felt quite so powerful.

Yet I also realized something. The job that our all-volunteer rescue squad does is quite serious and an invaluable asset to the community.

When speaking of the rescue squad, it's important to realize it is volunteer – no pay, no obligations – and its operation (equipment, bills, etc.) is largely dependent upon donations and its annual fundraiser, though the fiscal court does kick in money for insurance.

There are ongoing training hours like those on that recent Saturday morning and early afternoon ripping parts off cars. There are less-than-exciting meetings to attend. And most importantly, there's a responsibility to drop everything at a moment's notice to head into a situation where a victim's life is in your hands.

In that case, you'd better know what you're doing, unlike a rookie tearing off his first car door.

With thousands of pounds of cutting and spreading force housed in the rescue equipment, you can do a lot of damage to a car...or a victim if you don't carefully size up the situation on scene.

Not only is the equipment powerful, it's heavy, making handling of the devices even more difficult. If you don't place it just so, you can waste valuable, life-saving time popping off a door, ripping open a roof or cutting through a windshield to extract a victim needing serious medical attention.

On top of that, the way a vehicle is crushed on scene, its location down a ravine or it possibly lying upside down in a creek makes the job even more challenging.

Even when you get the technical skills down, there is an emotional aspect that comes into play that is not found at training. That is the toughest part of the job, according to Crabtree.

In practice, there is no victim screaming in pain or panic. There are no crushed limbs, no blood, no unsightly gashes and, most certainly, no lifeless bodies to work around while a survivor is still pinned. There is also no family member who arrives at the scene screaming at you to save their son or daughter. In any such live-action case, you have to be a practiced counselor as well as rescuer.

Making things even more emotionally taxing, in a small community like ours, you are likely to know the victim or their family.

Of course, there are many other functions of the rescue squad aside from cutting apart cars. But my point is this: After stepping into the shoes of and playing rescue squad member for 10 minutes and discussing the rigors of the job with others, it can give you a lot of perspective. It certainly teaches you enough to understand how difficult the job is, how dedicated members are and how lucky we are to have such volunteers in this community.

Not everyone full of Halloween enthusiam

We're a lot like our mothers, whether we like it or not.

At least at some point in all of our lives, we've vowed to not be like our mothers. Who didn't say, "I will not make my kids be home that early!" or "I will not be so picky about what my kids wear," or "I won't grow up and embarrass my kids by wearing my pajamas in the morning school car pool."

One of those statements, or something similar, has come out of all of our mouths.

One way I'm definitely like my mother is a lack of enthusiasm for Halloween. If it weren't for my 7-year-old's persistence, the few Halloween decorations I have would still be in a dusty tote in the attic.

I vaguely remember a pumpkin on the porch each Halloween when I was a child. It wasn't with much fanfare that we got ready for Oct. 31, although we did live in an old house on Elm Street (remember the movie "A Nightmare on Elm Street?")

The biggest memory I have of Halloween is of bags of raked leaves that were stacked close to the house being set on fire in the middle of Moore Street.

Sadly, it sounds like I grew up in an era where there wasn't much pomp and circumstance with Halloween. Well, come to think of it, my first Halloween memories go back more than 35 years.

I remember standing in the kitchen digging seeds and the slimy guts of a fresh pumpkin and plopping it down on old newspapers before watching my dad carve a simple jack-o-lantern with triangle eyes and a mouth with a few teeth.

Sure we did a little trick-or-treating, but I distinctly recall Mom telling us to only go to houses whose front porch lights were on.

But looking back, that's where I'm like my mother. She didn't make a big to-do about Halloween, so maybe it's natural that I don't either. Honestly, we have one pumpkin on our front porch. If not for a child with a fall birthday, we wouldn't have three miniature painted pumpkins on our kitchen counter.

Thank today's festivities on the Internet.

Have you looked online or in magazines at the projects that are out there? Over-the-top is an understatement in some cases.

Step-by-step directions are at our fingertips for Frankenstein fingers made of pretzel rods; spiders made from Oreos; dip served out of a miniature pumpkin; and cinnamon and sugar-baked pumpkin seeds.

It's easier to get on the festive bandwagon these days, but not for me. It will be interesting to see whether my kids follow suit or turn into Martha Stewart at Halloween.

For now, I'll enjoy my pumpkin until it finishes rotting on the front porch and turn my attention to my Thanksgiving merrymaking – as if there is much of that either.

McConnell's legacy lives on at library

To the editor

A library is only as good as its library users.

We have many, but a couple of weeks ago, we lost one of our favorites – Mrs. Rebecca McConnell, at the age of 97.

From the time I began as director in September of 2004, Rebecca was here, checking out stacks of books. How was I to know that she had only had a library card for two years at that time?

Yes, Rebecca opened her first account with the Crittenden County Public Library at the young age of 85, and she didn't waste any time in the 12 years she used the library. From the beginning, she was an avid reader, reading almost every genre of literature we had to offer.

Through illness, moving to an assisted living facility and, finally, to the nursing home, she continued to read. The bookmobile visited her every two weeks, with four or five books each visit. Her niece, Marilyn Hunt, came into the library almost weekly to supplement that number.

Nancy Brock, our bookmobile librarian, had books ready for Rebecca the week she passed away.

Rebecca's daughter, Sarah McConnell, came by to see me and brought a spiral-bound notebook – a simple pad of paper. What I found when I opened the notebook was a list of every book Rebecca had read from the library – 2,860 books. Most were large-print, but in the early days, she read regular print and even paperbacks.

Do you want to keep your mind sharp? Follow Rebecca's example and read voraciously. Talk to people. Care about them. Be interested in the world around you.

That, to me, is Rebecca McConnell's legacy.

Veterans deserve our recognition

Tuesday is set aside to honor all of the American men and women who have served in one of our nation's military uniforms.

Veterans Day is a holiday unlike most others. It comes with little fanfare, it has scant commercial appeal to profiteers and it's not conveniently scheduled to make for an extended weekend. Instead, it is a long-celebrated day set aside specifically to show appreciation to all those having served in the armed forces of the United States, whether having faced combat or not. Veterans Day also honors untold millions who have passed on – either in service to their country or at the hands of Father Time.

Our veterans are special people. Whether volunteer or draftee, each sacrificed chunks of their life in service to their country. That meant leaving home at a young age – many for the first time – and submitting themselves to the rigors and dangers of training, long assignments at far-away duty stations and possible deployments to combat zones. For those who have seen fighting, many still carry with them the horrors they have witnessed.

Wartime or peacetime, full-time or part-time, we owe all veterans our appreciation.

The veteran population in Kentucky as of the end of September, according to the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs, was 330,599. That includes veterans of conflicts from World War II to today's ongoing operations in the Middle East as well as almost 81,000 peacetime soldiers, sailors and airmen. Of the commonwealth's total veteran population, an estimated 700 live in Crittenden County.

While many communities may host large parades and elaborate events, recognition of Veterans Day here has traditionally been a bit more subdued but just as noble. Each year, American Legion Post 111 in Marion hosts a Veterans Day ceremony at Mapleview Cemetery to honor those men and women who have served. This year's event begins at 11 a.m. Tuesday. Additionally, Crittenden County Middle School will be hosting its annual Veterans Day ceremony at 9 a.m. Tuesday in the school's gymnasium.

Veterans and the community at-large are encouraged to participate in both events.

But if you cannot make it to one of the local ceremonies honoring veterans – as most businesses remain open on the holiday or you simply may not know any veterans personally – you can still take pause for a moment on Tuesday to thank God for those willing to lay down their lives for our freedoms. Of course, that's an act relevant on any day.

Veterans are a proud people, and most go on each day without seeking personal recognition for their service to country. But on Tuesday, if you've never worn the uniform, a word of appreciation to a veteran will mean more than you can ever know.

To each and every one, we thank you, veterans.

Gavin retires from Guard after 30-plus years

By DAVID ALTOM
KENTUCKY NATIONAL GUARD PUBLIC AFFAIRS

When Mike Gavin first tried to join the military the recruiters didn't want him. They said that, among other things, he was practically blind.

"I told them, well, I'm a blind surgeon, if that makes a difference," he said.

It did.
More than 30 years later Kentucky Army National Guard State Surgeon Col. Mike Gavin retired after a distinguished and amazing career – despite having to wear glasses.

He was honored Oct. 16 in a ceremony at the Boone National Guard Center in Frankfort.

"I have known him professional and personally for over 20 years, and I can't be more proud of a man who calls Crittenden and Livingston counties his home," Kentucky National Guard Lt. Col. Billy McDaniel of Marion told The Crittenden Press.

Gavin lives in Salem and is a consultant for Tri-Rivers Healthcare clinics in Marion, Salem and Smithland. He is also the medical director for Crittenden County Health Department and a former surgeon at Livingston Hospital and Healthcare Services in Salem.

Gavin served as the battalion surgeon for the old 1st Battalion, 123rd Armor as well as 2nd Battalion, 123rd Armor. He also served as brigade surgeon for the 149th Maneuver Enhanced Brigade.

Col. Mike Abell, G-1 director, remembers the first time he met Gavin.

"I was at my first National Guard drill at the firing range," he said. "There was this tent that had a sign that said 'minor surgery' and I was amazed to find out they were doing actual surgery on drill weekend. I'd just come off active duty as an Army Ranger and we didn't even have that."

"I told (then) Maj. Gavin how I'd just gone through a minor surgery with the Army. He said if I'd seen him during a drill weekend he could have done it, no problem."

Gavin had a reputation for giving above and beyond to soldiers, but his practice wasn't limited to drill weekends and annual training. He also served a tour of duty

Col. Mike Gavin (center) was honored with a Meritorious Service Medal during a ceremony held Oct. 16 at the Boone National Guard Center in Frankfort. in Uzbekistan and two in Iraq, where he saved lives and brought comfort to his fellow service members.

Needless to say, Gavin received numerous accolades and awards for his professional accomplishments.

But that's not what he talked about at his retirement ceremony. Instead, he focused on the teamwork that made his time with the Kentucky Army National Guard so special.

"I remember after I first got in and going on annual training in Texas," he said. "I had this group of NCOs that were trying to teach me how to drive an M113 (armored personnel carrier). I'll never forget it ... they would slap the top of my helmet to get me to go, slap the right side to turn right and the left side to turn left. And to get me to stop they would pound the top of my head repeatedly."

Gavin said throughout his career he relied on soldiers to "slap him on the head" and keep him in line. "It isn't easy for a Spec. 4 to say, 'sir, I really don't think you should do that. It's due to that kind of guidance, that camaraderie and support that I was able to do what I needed to do."

"I'll miss the Guard and working with a great bunch of soldiers," he said. "It's been a privilege and an honor to serve."

Marion, Salem pharmacies change hands, stay local

STAFF REPORT
Glenn's Apothecary in Marion and Glenn's Prescription Center in Salem are now under new ownership. The two pharmacies owned by the Norris Glenn family for almost 60 years were purchased by Hill Pharmaceuticals, a new venture for Tashena Hill of Marion. Hill, who began working for Norris Glenn as a junior in high school stocking vials and delivering medications, finalized the purchase last Thursday. "It was a very surreal day for me," Hill, 31, said. "I am so blessed to have been given this opportunity." She said Glenn had been her mentor since she was 16. But Glenn died in June at the age of 85 and his children decided to put the businesses up for sale. Once

Hill hearing of the family's intent to sell, Hill reached out to Glenn's son, Steve, who lives in Sharpe, about purchasing the business. The details were hashed out over the phone and an agreement was eventually reached. "We've been working on this for several months now," Hill said.

Hill, who lives in Marion with her husband Shane and daughter Sadie, said customers will see little change at the pharmacies. She intends to keep the names of the pharmacies unchanged and maintain services like delivery of medications. "Everything will be pretty much be the same for the company," she said. Mark Wurth, a longtime pharmacist at the Marion store who has been gone for seven years, will soon be returning to Glenn's Apothecary. Debbie Henderson will fill in on his days off. In Salem, Misty Turnero will be the full-time pharmacist, with Hill pinch hitting on Turnero's off days. Hill graduated from Crittenden County High School in 2001 and became a certified pharmaceutical technician in 2002. She continued working for Glenn while pursuing her undergraduate degree from West Kentucky Community and Technical College in Paducah. In 2007, she received her Doctor of Pharmacy degree from Samford University in Birmingham, Ala., continuing to work for Glenn for a period. She also worked at Rite Aid Pharmacy while in college. For the past few years, she has worked at CVS Pharmacy in Marion.

KU expected to seek rate increase for 2015

STAFF REPORT
Kentucky Utilities Co. anticipates submitting a request for a base rate adjustment Nov. 26 with the Kentucky Public Service Commission (PSC), in large part, to recover costs associated with Kentucky's first natural gas combined-cycle generating unit as well as other infrastructure projects to continue to improve reliability. For a residential customer using an average of 1,200 kilowatt (kWh), the proposed increase is expected to be approximately $11 per month, if approved. This increase is 37 cents per day. Any rate adjustment approved by the PSC would, obviously, affect KU's customers in Marion and portions of Crittenden County. Due to environmental mandates issued by the U.S.

Environmental Protection Agency, KU, and its sister company, Louisville Gas and Electric Co., announced in 2011 the retirement of 13 percent of their older coal-fired generation. While the company still depends on coal for much of its current generation, the stricter environmental regulations made building new coal-fired generation uneconomical to pursue. After years of studying extensive supply options, KU and LG&E received approval to build a natural gas combined-cycle unit, which was the least expensive solution. The new unit, which is being constructed at an existing facility, will provide energy with less emissions and help cover the loss of generation from the coal units' retirement. KU serves approximately 543,000 customers in 77

Kentucky counties and five counties in Virginia. To meet their energy needs, KU will own 78 percent of the new $563 million unit that is scheduled to be commercially operational in May. KU is also making investments in its transmission and distribution systems to maintain high reliability into the future. While storms and their severity impact reliability, overall electric reliability across the service territory has improved since the winter of 2009. KU continues to have some of the lowest energy costs in the nation. Currently, the national residential average cost per kWh is $12.43 while KU's cost per kWh is $8.99. If approved, that average cost per kWh would be $10.50. KU is requesting a $153 million revenue increase, or 9.6 percent, from the PSC.

"We understand the financial impact these increases have on our customers," said Victor A. Staffieri, chairman, CEO and president of LG&E and KU Energy. "We've worked hard to minimize the consequences of federal environmental mandates. We continue to demonstrate fiscal restraint to ensure our customers continue to receive some of the lowest cost, most reliable energy in the country." If approved by the PSC, the rate adjustments will take effect in July 2015.

years, and I want to be a good magistrate," he said. "I'm not ready to sit down. As a matter of fact, I've been a little bored since retirement." His top priority once he begins serving on the next fiscal court is the roads in his district, of which many are in terrible condition, he added. "We gotta get our roads back up in shape first," he said. But the magistrate-elect knows he, like Cook, will be working with limited funds to make any fixes. In fact, Holloman talked to Cook, who lives about a mile down Hebron Church Road from Holloman, before pursuing the position. The two spent a few hours discussing the challenges that lie ahead for the county.

Marion woman hurt in accident Friday

A Crittenden County woman was injured in a single-vehicle accident in the county Friday morning. Kentucky State Police investigated the collision that occurred at 10:40 a.m. on U.S. 60 2 miles east of Marion. The preliminary investigation by Trooper First Class Darron Holliman revealed that Phelicity Yesh, 20, of Marion was operating a 2006 Dodge Charger eastbound on U.S. 60 when the vehicle exited the right shoulder of the roadway. The vehicle traveled down an embankment and overturned, coming to a rest upright. Yesh, who was not wearing a seatbelt, was transported via Crittenden County EMS to Crittenden Health Systems for treatment. There were no passengers involved. Crittenden County Sheriff's Department assisted at the scene.

Fredonia heritage group earns award

The Fredonia Valley Heritage Society will on Friday will receive a Kentucky History Award for its publication, "In Pursuit of Art: The Talent of John F. Rice," at the Kentucky Historical Society (KHS) annual meeting and awards presentation. The publication is a unique hardback book full of more than 335 wonderful pieces of art in full color with historical descriptions. John Rice was born in the Fredonia Valley in 1882 and lived there until his death in 1960. As a young man, he made several trips to France to study art. His artwork reflects his love for the Fredonia Valley and its people and includes art from his time in France and other locations. KHS history awards honor consistent efforts to promote the preservation and appreciation of state and local history. A committee each year selects recipients from nominations statewide.

can expect to pay about 4.58 percent more this November than a year ago, based on consumption of 10,000 cubic feet of natural gas. It says the average total bill for 10,000 cubic feet – including base rates – is projected to be about $86.66 for Atmos Energy customers. That's up $6.19 over last November, but down more than $64 since November 2008 when the average Kentucky natural gas bill was $150.78. The lower cost of natural gas has more than offset increases in base rates over that time. COURT

"Percy is a wealth of knowledge to draw from," Holloman said. Magistrate Dan Wood, a Democrat who faced no opposition in Tuesday's election, said roads are a major issue and can be what gets magistrates in rural counties either elected or unelected. Magistrates Curt Buntin and Glenn Underdown were also re-elected without opposition Tuesday. The new fiscal court will be heavily stacked with Democrats. Underdown is the only GOP magistrate, joining fellow Republican Judge-Executive Perry Newcom on the body. Politics and party loyalties, however, do not seem to be a concern of those on the new fiscal court. "We simply have people concerned with getting things done and getting things done the right way," Holloman said.

tral section of the state. That area, like all of western Kentucky, has the most liberal bag limits for shooting deer. Populations of whitetails are the greatest in those areas of Kentucky. Oddly, in south-east Kentucky, there are very few deer. Hunters in what are known as Zone 1 counties, like Crittenden and Livingston, can harvest one buck, but an unlimited number of antlerless deer. Biologists are trying to figure out ways to make shooting more female deer attractive to hunters. "One thing that I definitely want to open up is a dialogue with our hunters. We need to have some discussions about ways to better manage our doe herd in Zone 1 counties, and how we can get hunters to be better managers of our resources in those counties," KDFWR deer program coordinator Gabe Jenkins recently said. "The population needs to come down a little bit. We're planning to go on the road and talk with our hunters about ways to deal with deer numbers in Zone 1 counties. "We're going to meet with the public and run some surveys," Jenkins added. "We hope to take what we learn from our discussions and come up with a new strategy to harvest more deer in Zone 1, specifically female deer." Part of that strategy has already been implemented. The Kentucky Hunters for the Hungry Program has stepped up with more financial resources to cover to the cost of processing deer. The hunter pays nothing if he or she gives the venison to the needy. Fred Brown is in charge of Crittenden County Food Bank which oversees Hunters for the Hungry, too. "We're already picking up venison that has been given to Hunters for the Hungry," he said. "This year, we will take as many deer as we can get." Family Butcher Shop on Rooster Lane off of Ky. 654 North in the Amish community is the designated Hunters for the Hungry processing station. Brown said donations of deer to the food bank are greatly appreciated, and so are financial contributions. Philip Sharp, a KDFWR biologist in Crittenden County, encourages local hunters to harvest more antlerless deer. Doing so, he says, improves hunting quality and safety. "This could be a huge victory for population stabilization and/or reduction for our deer herd in Crittenden County," Sharp said about the Hunters for the Hungry program. Automobile insurance companies are also behind the push to take more deer off roadways. Last year, 2,985 vehicle-deer collisions were reported in Kentucky, accounting for almost 3 percent of all vehicle collisions statewide. According to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, deer-vehicle collisions cause about 200 fatalities annually in the U.S. The average claim for deer-vehicle in 2012 was $3,305.

Proposed water regs threaten farmers

As the end of the legislative year – with regard to the interim committee meetings winds down – I want to provide another update on one of the issues that has been discussed during the Agriculture Committee meetings.

In an earlier column, I reported on a regulation proposed by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in conjunction with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers that could drastically redefine what is commonly known as “Waters of the United States” as it relates to the country’s navigable waterways.

These two overzealous and out-of-control agencies are pursuing the change as a way to extend their authority under the Clean Water Act. This is not the first time the EPA has tried to expand the Clean Water Act in order to gain oversight to waters currently under state control, but this latest attempt could drastically impact Kentucky’s farmers.

The proposed regulations would require farmers to seek what are known as 404 Permits from the EPA. (Section 404 of the Clean Water Act establishes a program to regulate the discharge of dredged and fill material

Rep. Lynn
Bechler

into waters of the United States, including wetlands.)

Given the EPA’s catastrophic impact on Kentucky’s coal industry by delaying and denying 404 Permits for proposed mining operations, it is easy to see how this proposal would harm our agricultural industry by requiring permits for simple farming activities like fertilizing crops, plants or using pesticides.

The proposal fails to define what would be considered “normal farming operations,” thus leaving Kentucky farmers open to frivolous lawsuits by environmental activists who want to limit agriculture production and potentially placing our agricultural industry in the same dire straits as Kentucky coal.

Worse yet, the proposed rule change would place isolated ponds on farms, small landscape pools and even standing puddles of water under provisions of the Clean Water Act. That would allow the EPA along with the Corps of Engineers the “right” to test water in puddles on farmland if that water didn’t meet their yet-to-be-defined standards. That could cost our small farmers thousands of dollars in fines or thousands of dollars to purchase chemicals the EPA deems necessary to meet the regulations.

Kentucky has about 92,000 miles of streams and a majority of them cut across what is currently considered navigable waterway. If the proposal takes effect, the EPA and the Corps of Engineers would be able to write their own rules, allowing the federal government to reach into areas currently managed by the Kentucky Division of Water, once again usurping Kentucky’s authority and our rights.

We simply cannot allow these new rules to go into place.

At my urging, the members of the Interim Joint Committee on Agriculture sent a letter Gina McCarthy, the administrator of the EPA, urging the rule either be withdrawn or amended to protect Kentucky farmers. The letter is part of more than 200,000 comments sent to the EPA opposing the new rule.

If you are concerned about the future of agriculture in Kentucky and what the EPA and Army Corps of Engineers are proposing, I encourage you to submit your comments. You may do so in several ways.

- Visit the Internet at www.reguations.gov.
- Email ow-docket@epa.gov and include “EPA-HQ-OW-2011-0880” in the subject line.
- Mail a letter of your comments, including three copies, to: Water Docket, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Mail Code 2822T, 1200 Pennsylvania Ave. NW, Washington, DC 20460, Attention: Docket ID EPA-HQ-OW-2011-0880.

With requirements to submit comments so convoluted, one can only imagine how confusing the regulations themselves will be. The deadline to submit comments is Nov. 14.

Once again, thank you for your attention to my columns and for providing me the input I need to properly represent you in the Kentucky House of Representatives. It is a privilege, and I am humbled and honored that you have given me this opportunity.

I hope the remainder of 2014 treats you well.

sponsibility of the jail falls on the shoulders of Crittenden County Sheriff Wayne Agent.

Newcom expects Kirk to be in the jailer’s post by the end of the week.

Kirk, a former Kentucky State Trooper, private detective and Marion business owner, leaned on that experience while campaigning for jailer.

“I see the jail as a continuation of my life’s work as a public servant,” Kirk, 51, said earlier in his response to a campaign questionnaire from The Crittenden Press. “I have dedicated more than 25 years to the field of law enforcement and have been able to serve my community in that capacity.”

As election results were read off Tuesday evening in the lobby of the courthouse, it became clear that the jailer’s race – the only contested countywide race on the ballot – would be a close one. In fact, Kirk took half of the county’s 12 precincts as well as absentee votes. He and Kemper also tied with 57 votes each in one of the Frances precincts.

Kemper, 42, who lives in Tolu, ran very strong in taking his home precinct and the nearby Sheridan precinct, but it wasn’t enough to overcome Kirk’s margin of victory in the precincts he won.

After the results became apparent, Kirk, who was tabulating votes with his family and supporters in the courthouse, was visibly relieved to come out on top of a close race.

School board

Elsewhere in the county, there was a contested seat for the board of education between incumbent Barrett Belt and former board member Eric LaRue. LaRue earned back the seat Belt took from him in the 2010 election by a 328-281 margin. Belt had defeated LaRue four years ago by only 17 votes.

In September, perhaps hurting his re-election bid, Belt voted for a property tax increase for the school district. The measure to up tax rates by 1.7 cents per $100 of assessed property value passed by a 3-2 margin.

Constables

In two contested constable races, Republican Paul Beard defeated incumbent Democrat Roy Todd 225-184 in District 3. In District 1, Republican Barry Brown beat write-in opponent Russ Eaton 332-27.

Also, write-in candidate C.L. McDaniel was unopposed in the District 4 Constable race. He gathered six votes on his way to re-election.

Federal races

En route to a promotion to Senate Majority Leader by beating back Democratic challenger Alison Lundergan Grimes and Libertarian David Patterson, Mitch McConnell also swept Crittenden County. He won all 12 precincts in the county and absentee votes for a 2,283-953-127 margin over his two primary opponents. There were also four write-ins competing in the Senate race, none of whom received votes locally

McConnell trounced his competition statewide with 56 percent of the vote compared to Grimes’ 41 percent and Patterson’s 3 percent.

With the victory, McConnell won a sixth term as a U.S. Senator for Kentucky. With the GOP having taken at least 52 seats in the 100-seat Senate at press time, McConnell’s advancement from minority to majority leader was assured.

Also capitalizing big Tuesday was Republican Ed Whitfield, who has represented western Kentucky’s 1st Congressional District since 1994.

Rep. Whitfield, of Hopkinsville, ran away with the victory by collecting 73 percent of the vote to Democratic challenger Charles Kendall Hatchett’s 27 percent.

At press time early Wednesday morning, the GOP looked to maintain control of the U.S. House of Representatives, giving Republicans sway in both chambers of Congress.

Voter turnout

Voter turnout in Crittenden County was 52.2 percent, just shy of County Clerk Byford’s prediction of 55 percent. Statewide, turnout was lower at only 45.7 percent.

No election problems were reported locally, said Byford, who along with all other countywide candidates but jailer was unopposed and re-elected.

feated soundly.

Alexander has clearly been the city’s choice for the better part of three decades, and he says it’s reassuring to have that type of support.

“I am grateful for those who have voted for me and support me,” the mayor said. “But honestly, I couldn’t do this without the good people around me.”

Alexander said the city’s administration, police department and staff have been crucial to keeping Marion safe and on solid footing.

“We have remained strong financially and held the line on taxes,” he said. “We will continue to do that, to be frugal.”

Most of the mayor’s council was also re-elected. Five of the six current councilmen will return. The only newcomer is, ironically, quite familiar to local government. Junior Martin, 66, a pastor and former hospital department manager, has previously served on the council and was a county magistrate for nine years. He won the final seat on the six-member council with 443 votes, edging out incumbent Frank Pierce by 22 ballots.

Banker Jared Byford was the top vote-getter with 595 followed by Donnie Arflack, Dwight Sherer, Darrin Tabor and Mike Byford, respectively.

God interested in a temple not made by human hands

By FELTY YODER
GUEST COLUMNIST

We can learn from the temple structures of old, how they typify the temple “not made with hands,” for the temple not made with hands is the only temple that God is really concerned about.

We have to remind God’s people over and over that God’s name has now been called upon by people on the Earth, destined to come forth in His image and likeness that they might become a Habitation of God through the Spirit. That is the only habitation that is compatible with the heart of God, and when God finds His abiding place there, He desires no other temple.

Solomon’s temple faced the East, like the tabernacle of old, for God wants us to be anticipating the dawn of the new day and the rising of the Sun of Righteousness with healing in its wings.

The other three sides of the temple had chambers attached to the temple walls, with a system of galleries. These chambers were in three stories, with a winding stairway going down from one floor to the next.

Jesus said in John 14:21, “In my Father’s house are many mansions,” (which literally means abiding places). He goes on to explain to his disciples that when they believe and love Him, they will keep His commandment, “and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.”

One of the disciples, in John 14:23, queried as to how this was to come about. “Jesus answered and said unto him, “If a man loves me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.”

The word here used for “abode” is the very same Greek word used for “mansion” in Verse 2. This is the real mansion that Christ has gone to prepare for His own.

I know we like to imagine and talk about our mansion in heaven and of walking on streets of gold. But even gold is corruptible.

Besides, if we’d be walking on it in heaven, it would be under our feet. In our finite and limited understanding, these natural and earthly things are used to describe our heavenly heritage, because that is the only language that we can understand. But in reality, the glorious realm of the Spirit far transcends and outshines any earthly glory.

Some of these things may sound fantastic to many Christians. But if so, it is because God’s people in this modern age are so earthly minded that they cannot appreciate or understand the realities of the Spirit.

“Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light,” reads Ephesians 5:14.

Heritage Society to hold Thanksgiving potluck meal this Thursday

STAFF REPORT

Fredonia Valley Heritage Society will meet at 6 p.m., today (Thursday) at the Fredonia Lions Club building for its annual Thanksgiving Potluck Meal. Following the meal, the characters and guides from the recent “Walk through Fredonia’s Past” will present an encore performance.

The Fredonia Valley Heritage Society welcomes anyone interested in learning more about the heritage and history of the Fredonia Valley and for those who want to see the history of the community preserved for future generations.

The society is embarking upon a new book project. This book will contain the stories of veterans from the Fredonia Valley. If you or a member of your family served in any branch of the military in wartime or in times of peace at any point in history and is connected to the Fredonia Valley, the society is looking to include those individuals in the book.

To be included, all that is needed is to provide a photo, if one is available, and a biography of the veteran.

Scan days will be scheduled where individuals may bring their photographs to be electronically scanned into a computer. Individuals will not have to leave their photos. Watch the newspaper for announcements of the scan days.

Photographs and biographies may also be emailed to PamFaughn@att.net.

Individuals with any questions can email Faughn or contact any other member of the book committee, including Nancy Paris, Marsha Green or Maggie Gammon.

“This book will be one you will want for your library, and you will definitely want yourself or your loved ones included,” said Faughn. “This will be a big project and will take several months to a year to complete. But the sooner your information is received, the sooner we will get the book to the printer.”

Anyone interested in becoming a member of the Fredonia Valley Heritage Society is encouraged to attend today’s meeting.

State, fed agency heads visit Marion

Kentucky Department of Local Government (DLG) Commissioner Tony Wilder (left) joined Delta Regional Authority (DRA) Federal Co-Chairman Chris Masingill (center) on a visit last Wednesday to the Ben E. Clement Mineral Museum in Marion. Above, Tina Walker, museum director, takes both Wilder and Masingill on a tour through the museum. DLG and DRA representatives, as well as representatives from the Pennyriple Allied Development District (PADD), were in western Kentucky to announce more than $1.1 million in grants for nine new projects in communities throughout western Kentucky. Though none of the projects awarded money this year were in Crittenden County, Masingill visited with representatives of Crittenden Health Systems at the museum in relation to the addition of a surgical C-arm system funded through a $105,000 DRA grant last year. The system, when installed and operational at CHS, will allow the hospital to produce images with high quality and resolution while reducing patient and operator radiation dosage. After leaving Marion, the group from DLG, DRA and PADD then visited Livingston Hospital and Healthcare Services in Salem to see a digital mammography unit funded through a 2012 DRA grant. While at the mineral museum, DLG officials were able to view the desperate need for a new roof at the facility, which frequently leaks during precipitation events, threatening the mineral collection and museum displays. The county has applied through PADD for a $500,000 grant from DLG for a new roof on the museum. A final decision on the grant is not expected until early next year.

Board asked to discipline pupil on bus

STAFF REPORT

Two mothers have asked the Crittenden County Board of Education to take immediate disciplinary action against a male student who they say is terrorizing others on Bus 0923.

The women will not be named in the newspaper out of fairness, because the child inciting the alleged problems cannot be named by law either.

One woman did most of the talking, but the other corroborated the stories.

School officials are not allowed to discuss disciplinary issues due to student privacy laws. However, Superintendent of Schools Vince Clark told the two that he appreciated the way they had handled the situation in reporting to the school district earlier, then attending the school board's regularly-scheduled meeting on Oct. 28.

Clark said during the meeting that some of the incidents mentioned by the women happened over a two-year period. He said the school district intervened in the situation when it was reported last week and disciplinary and corrective measures were being taken. He told the women that the school district would continue an open dialogue with them regarding the situation.

The woman who did most of the talking said a boy had shown his genitalia to a second-grade girl on the bus. She said the boy had also allegedly brought a knife and pellet gun onto the bus.

"I ask you what other signs do we need?" she told board members in a prepared statement. "How many more instances does it take? One that is irreversible? Children should not be terrified and their parents should not be terrified to send them to school."

School Board Chairman Chris Cook explained why individual discipline actions couldn't be discussed at the board meeting, but he assured them that their concerns were being heard.

Board member Phyllis Orr asked whether a bus monitor was currently scheduled to be riding that particular bus. Wayne Winters, a transportation official for the school system, said there was no monitor in the morning commute to school, but a student monitor was on then bus in the afternoons. He said the student monitor is generally responsible for assisting pre-schoolers, the youngest riders on the bus.

The women said students cannot be asked to intervene when something like these alleged actions are taking place on the bus. The women asked for the board to take immediate action.

"Please hear these parents' cries and remove this threat from our bus," the woman said. "That's the only option that seems acceptable to these parents. Our children's lives are in your hands. And at the end of the day, we want them back in our arms."

Board member Bill Asbridge said a student can be barred from riding a bus, but explained that "concrete facts and documentation" are needed in order to take such action. He added that an investigation continues.

Board members said the safety of students is their first priority whether at school or on a bus.

First Color Run encourages fitness among youth

STAFF REPORT

Rain couldn't stop the first-ever Crittenden County High School Color Run; it could only postpone it. But participants were rewarded with sunshine and perfect weather for running – or walking – during last Thursday's event at the Marion-Crittenden County Park.

More than 300 students signed up to participate in the run. CCHS staff and faculty also participated. The color run was part of the school district's commitment to better living during its focus on health and wellness last week. Elementary and middle school students also participated in their own Color Run events.

Crittenden County Schools Community Educator Holly White said good health is tied to learning.

"Students' overall health impacts their ability to learn. We want our students to be healthy and happy. My hope is that exposing them to these runs and allowing them to have fun will spark an interest in them to work on becoming more healthy," White said. "It has been a great week of promoting health and wellness in our district. I hope that we can grow and improve the runs for next year."

CCES, CCMS participate in own runs

It wasn't only Crittenden County High School that participated in a Color Run last week to promote fitness among youth. Crittenden County Elementary and Middle school each had their own Color Run last Thursday. Above, Jordan Hutchison, Gage Russell and Logan White get off to a great start at the CCES Color Run, which saw students race around the school three times for a 1-mile run. At left, Crittenden County High School runners Sean Zahrtre, Cassidy Moss, Kayla Davis, Tyson Steele and Ryan Belt get off to a good start at last week's Color Run at Marion-Crittenden County Park.

Properly preserve venison at home during hunting season

Venison adds variety to your table. It can be eaten fresh now, or preserved for your family's enjoyment throughout the year. It can be frozen as steaks, roasts or sausage, or preserved by canning or drying.

However you plan to enjoy your venison, be sure you use care when field-dressing the deer to avoid contaminating the carcass. Cool the carcass to 35 to 40 degrees F as quickly as possible. If desired, the meat can be aged for several days at 40 degrees F or less to allow enzymes to tenderize the meat. It is not advised to age venison in warm weather, since bacteria can grow quickly to unsafe levels. Store fresh venison in the refrigerator at 40 degrees F or lower and use roasts or steaks within three to five days, ground venison within one to two days.

Before freezing venison, trim off fat and clean the cuts so that they are ready for end use. Fat will go rancid sooner and often has a gamey flavor. Use bags or wrap designed for freezing and push out as much air as possible from the package before sealing. Seal, label and date each package and freeze quickly at 0 degrees F or below. For best quality, use roasts and steaks within 6 to 9 months, ground venison within 3 months. When ready to use, thaw meat in the refrigerator or microwave oven, never at room temperature.

To safely can venison, you must use a pressure canner and follow research-based recipes and processing times. There are no safe options for processing venison in a boiling water bath canner. Trim meat of gristle, bruised spots and fat before canning. Fat left on the meat will melt during processing and may interfere with jar sealing. For more information on safely canning venison and other meats, contact your local Extension Service or visit the National Center for Home Food Preservation website at <http://nchfp.uga.edu/>.

Venison can be made into jerky, a lightweight dried meat product that requires no refrigeration. Drying removes the moisture that bacteria need to grow, but to ensure safe, good-tasting homemade jerky, research-based recommendations must be followed. The meat should be frozen at 0 degrees F or below for at least 30 days before drying, to kill parasites. If desired, the meat can be marinated to increase flavor and tenderness. To kill bacteria and reduce the risk of food poisoning, the jerky should be heated to 160 degrees F either before or after drying. For more information on making jerky safely at home, contact your local Extension Service or visit the National Center for Home Food Preservation at <http://nchfp.uga.edu/how/dry/jerky.html>.

Local students encouraged to enter Trash Sculpture Contest

STAFF REPORT

There's nothing like the challenge of turning trash into treasure. Now local students get the opportunity to do just that by participating in the Trash Sculpture Contest.

Trash Sculpture Contest information is now available for all students kindergarten through 12th grade. This annual contest is coordinated by the Crittenden County Extension Service and is sponsored by the Regional Recycling Corporation.

The local contest will be held Nov. 21 at local schools. Home school students who wish to participate need to bring their entries to the Crittenden County Extension Service by Nov. 20.

Entry forms are available at the Extension Service and the brochure includes a complete list of rules.

The purpose of the contest is for students to become aware of items their household is throwing in the trash and to construct a sculpture of something they would like to keep.

All materials except adhesive must be items one would recycle or reuse. If the sculpture is painted, it must be from leftover paint from a home project.

Cash prizes will be awarded to school, county, and regional winners. Each age category will award three cash awards.

Marion boy finds treasure at September church picnic

STAFF REPORT

Each day millions of people receive different kinds of messages. But most usually don't receive them inside a bottle. But finding a note in a bottle is just what happened to Crittenden County resident Caden DeBoe. In September, during a church picnic at Dam 50, Caden found a note and money floating inside a bottle near the bank.

According to Caden's mother, Tiffany DeBoe, Caden and his older brother, Trey, went down to the water to fish when they made the discovery. Inside the bottle they found a business card and a rolled up $1 bill. On one side of the card was printed:

Dan's Sharpening Service
High Quality Sharpening for Chefs and Restaurants
Sharpening done at your location

Printed on the other side of the card was the name Damien Hughes from Poseyville, Ind.

DeBoe said Google searches on the business and name indicated multiple matches and they don't have any idea which individual is responsible for the note. They aren't even sure how long ago the card and money were placed in the bottle. But the excitement of finding a treasure, albeit a small one, made for an interesting discovery.

"It also made for some interesting discussion at the church picnic as to how that bottle got there," DeBoe said, adding Caden has kept the card and money in a special place and hopes one day to learn more about the mystery to the note in the bottle.

Civil War Dinner to be held Saturday in Smithland

By JASON TRAVIS
STAFF WRITER

Recalling local sites within a county rich in history, Livingston County Historical and Genealogical Society invite the public to its third annual Civil War Dinner at 6:30 p.m., Saturday at the Livingston Central High School cafeteria.

Tickets for the event are $12. Children age 6 and under will be admitted free. Tickets can be reserved in advance by calling (270) 928-4656. They can also be purchased at the Log Cabin located at 117 State St. in Smithland. Tickets will also be sold at the door the evening of the event.

Barbra Riley, vice president of the Livingston County Historical and Genealogical Society, said the dinner provides the opportunity for the historical society to fundraise for other events. Riley said one goal of the historical society is to purchase shelving and display cases for historical items pertaining to Livingston County. The display cases will be placed in the old courthouse building in Smithland.

"History is important because if we don't know where we've been we can't know where we're going," Riley said.

Livingston County is home to a number of historic landmarks including Mantel Rock near Joy and Fort Smith in Smithland, where Union Armies occupied the town during the Civil War.

At the Civil War Dinner, native Kentuckian Gayle Frye will serve as the Mistress of Ceremonies. Frye earned a bachelor's degree from Morehead State University and a master's degree from Murray State University and has attended the Paducah School of Art in sculpting and metalsmithing. She has served as the Director of Paducah Parks and Leisure Services and participated in productions of the Oak Grove Cemetery. In addition, she has spoken at national and state seminars on how to preserve local history through drama.

A program by Spencer and Linda Brewer will follow the dinner. The Brewers are members of the Kentucky Humanities Council Speakers Bureau. They will present a program on Kentucky flags and discuss some of the more famous flags of the state. They will also discuss the flags of the Civil War used in Kentucky.

The evening will also include music and lyrics from the Civil War song book presented by local musicians. An auction will follow. All proceeds from this event will go toward the purchase of equipment to facilitate the development of the old courthouse into a cultural center for the county.

In addition to displays, officials hope to present programs and many other activities that will enhance the culture and history of Livingston County.

It was an opportunity to show families the importance of staying fit and healthy. Crittenden County Schools hosted a district-wide health and wellness fair Oct. 30 at the Crittenden County Middle School gym. Yoga, zumba and obstacle courses were some of the many activities available as the school district celebrated Health and Wellness Week.

Stephanie Mundy and Kristee Shoulders, both APRNs from Tri-Rivers Healthcare, spoke about prevention and the importance of individuals having their blood pressure, blood sugar and cholesterol levels checked. They cited statistics indicating that at one time Crittenden County had some of the highest occurrences of heart disease in the state.

They also stressed preventative measures such as exercise, a proper diet and getting enough sleep at night in most cases can help boost metabolism while lowering blood pressure.

Big Rivers WMA hunt

Hunters on the Big Rivers Wildlife Management Area in Crittenden and Union counties bagged 48 deer during last weekend’s 100-tag quota hunt. Only 86 of the 100 drawn hunters showed up and they took 28 bucks. WMA manager John Zimmer said about five of the bucks were in the 140 class or above. One 10-pointer was a 160-class buck, he estimated. There were 31 deer taken in the Crittenden portion and 17 in Union County.

Avoid hunt violations

Crittenden County Conservation Officer Randy Conway says hunters can avoid violations by carefully reading the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources Hunting Guide. It includes all of the regulations hunters will face when rifle deer season opens this weekend.

Conway said the most common game violations are trespassing, illegal carcass dumping and failure to properly complete the hunter log that is part of your hunting license.

The game warden reminds hunters that only resident landowners and their spouse or dependents are allowed to use the landowner exemption when it comes to deer permits. Out-of-state landowners must have a non-resident deer tag and hunting license.

Rockets overcome early fumbles

STAFF REPORT

It was a frightening first half of Halloween football at Fulton Friday, but the Rockets managed to turn some tenuous play into a Week 10 treat, beating the Bulldogs 36-14.

Almost to a man, the offensive backfield was guilty of first-half blunders. The backs left the ball on the ground five times and the Bulldogs scooped up the loose pigskins like holiday candy. It allowed Fulton to take a 14-14 tie into intermission. Crittenden had fumbled four times in the red zone.

Rocket coach Al Starnes said those miscues allowed the Bulldogs to stay close and gain some momentum, something he’d warned his team about prior to the game.

“We could have had four more scores in the first half, but instead it was really frustrating because we had talked all week about sending a message,” the coach said. “I think we played physical and hard and did send a message, but it wasn’t quite as firm a message as we wanted.”

When the score was tied at the half, the Rocket skipper wore the frustration on his face.

It was a terrifying thought... losing at Fulton to end the season after starting the year with a hefty win over the Bulldogs. More importantly, this opponent will be a district foe next season and sending a resounding message was important to the fragile Rocket psyche.

In the halftime huddle, coach Starnes had a simple message: “Take care of the football.”

The Rockets turned the tide in the last two periods, taking the ball away from Fulton three times on turnovers and capitalizing twice with touchdowns.

Crittenden’s Noah Dickerson (23) carries the ball on an end-around play at Fulton last week. Dickerson is also closing in on the No. 3 spot in career receiving.

One was a rare touchdown by a lineman. Tackle Travis McKinney stripped the ball from Fulton running back Areon Ferrell and bolted 33 yards, posting the Rockets’ final touchdown of the regular season.

Crittenden’s defense was in charge most of the way, allowing Fulton just 19 yards on the ground and not much more through the air. A kickoff return accounted for six of the Bulldog points.

Meanwhile, the Rockets racked up 231 yards on the ground bolstered by running backs Maeson Myers and Lane Wallace, who combined for just over 100 yards and quarterback Nick Castiller who had 64. Dylan Hollis rushed for 31 and a touchdown before leaving the game with an apparent concussion late in the second half. He was taken to a nearby hospital for examination.

Crittenden is now 4-6 on the season – its best finish in four years in Class 2A – and will head to Owensboro Catholic to face the No. 3 Aces in the first round of the playoffs Friday.

Morganfield beat Crittenden County 20-14 in the championship game of fifth- and sixth-grade Junior Pro football jamboree Sunday at Rocket Stadium. It was the Wildcats’ second straight title.

Crittenden fullback and middle linebacker Caden McCalister scored four touchdowns in a game and a half before breaking his arm in the championship bout. His absence was sorely felt by the Rockets as they were narrowly defeated by the Wildcats.

Little league hoops start on Saturday with new format

STAFF REPORT

Rocket varsity basketball coach Denis Hodge has some new ideas for the youth basketball program that will give more youngsters a chance to compete and be part of the action.

“The goal of Rocket Little League Basketball is to provide your child with a friendly, positive and competitive atmosphere,” Hodge said. “Players will learn fundamentals and rules in drill and game situations.”

Hodge said five-on-five games will be only part of this year’s youth lineup. He also plans to have competitive drills as part of the weekly routine. That, he said, will put the basketball into more hands and allow each player to improve his skills.

Cost of the league is just $5 and action will be held every Saturday morning at Rocket Arena. A complete schedule will be available at this week’s first workout and registration. A $2 admission will be charged once games begin.

Evaluations and team placement will be this Saturday and next Saturday. All players need to attend both session if possible. Boys in grades K-2 should arrive for the one-hour session at 10 a.m. Those in grades 3-6 will need to be there at 11 a.m.

Little league girls basketball is also underway each Saturday morning at the old gym.

CRITTENDEN COUNTY DECISION 2014

resents to overcome a strong showing by Jackson in Caldwell County. Bechler took all 12 precincts in Crittenden County.

He ultimately won the district 8,328-6,748.

Bechler and his team of supporters jammed his post-election headquarters in the upstairs of Main Street Italian Grill where they kept close tabs of election returns coming in over the Internet, through phone calls and over the television on KET. It was a couple of hours after the last polls closed in his district before the results were final.

"To have the people's support and confidence is overwhelming to me," he said.

Bechler will head back to Frankfort in January for a 30-day session of the Kentucky General Assembly. He intends to keep the promise he made two years ago to be a fiscal and social conservative voice for the district.

"I've not changed my philosophies or values at all," Bechler said.

Kentucky House Republicans were hoping their conservative message would ring across the state, allowing them to wrest away control from the Democratic majority.

However, according to The Herald Leader newspaper in Lexington, Democrats will keep control of the Kentucky House, turning back a push by the GOP to lead the chamber for the first time since 1921. Democrats kept 54 of the 100 House seats, the same number they had going into the election.

CRITTENDEN COUNTY SURVEYOR

Selph 1st elected county surveyor in 81 years

STAFF REPORT

For the first time in 81 years, a county surveyor has been elected in Crittenden County.

On Tuesday, Jacob Selph, 38, became the first candidate for surveyor to be voted into office since R.A. Lynch defeated Charles B. Reed by a margin of 2,386 to 1,932 in 1933. Since that time, no one has filed for the office, according to election records in Crittenden County Clerk Carolyn Byford's office.

Selph, in his first run for political office, was unopposed.

Selph

The office of surveyor may seem quite obscure, but it is a longstanding office in most states outside of New England.

"My duties as county surveyor would include helping local citizens define boundary lines, preparing property division plats, resolving boundary line disputes and any other surveying services required by the residents of Crittenden County," said Selph, who lives in Dycusburg. "I would also like to become county surveyor in order to continue to help the local governments with boundary line issues, assist in establishing right-of-ways for roads and utilities (as needed) and any other surveying services required."

Compensation for the position is on an as-needed basis. The entity requesting the survey is responsible for payment.

"Right now, this is uncharted territory for me and for Crittenden County," said Selph, who holds a master's in civil engineering from the University of Louisville. "I hope to work with government officials to define what my duties can, and will be, for the city, county and for the local citizens."

He has already worked with the City of Marion on several projects, including the new fire station and a sewer extension to the airport.

Selph has been surveying since he was 6 years old, helping his father, Mike Selph. In 2007, he started Four Rivers Engineering and Surveying in Eddyville. After 32 years of surveying, he still loves his job.

"As a land surveyor, I get to see parts of the countryside that a lot of people don't get to explore," he said. "It's a bit like being a detective...finding clues, gathering evidence, deciphering the old deeds and then presenting all that data (evidence) to the client in the form of a plat or survey."

her own custody. Those stressors were very real to a young girl, and Rogers says she can take that experience to the bench where empathy and understanding are qualities of every good judge.

Smiles and hugs were gushing through her camp's celebration party, but Rogers took a moment to reflect on a campaign that was tough, and at times almost discouraging. She knew her opponent, Webster County attorney Ben Leonard, was outspending her in the race. The Kentucky Secretary of State's website shows Leonard spent just more than $108,000 on the race while Rogers lagged behind at just more than $62,000.

"We gave of ourselves to this campaign," Rogers said. "That's all we had to give."

She praised her family, supporters and friends for their untiring devotion. Husband Grant was one of the many who spent hours knocking on doors across the wide circuit.

"People felt like they knew Brandi," said Mary Beth Gobin, one of the judge-elect's biggest supporters. "She knew it was going to take her being out there one-on-one every day and night of the campaign."

"We were at it from daylight until after dark every day of the campaign," Rogers said. "We did everything from participate in a kayak race to painting faces at the little league football games."

"I knocked on doors sometimes when it was so early I was almost ashamed, but I had to get out there in the mornings before I went to the office."

Rogers said she appreciated the way her opponent ran his campaign, too.

"He is a good man. He never disparaged me, and I appreciate that," she said.

"I just think my story and my dedication resonated with voters," Rogers explained.

She won by just 50 votes in a race where 12,336 ballots were cast. Rogers carried Crittenden and Union counties, but lost in Leonard's home county of Webster by almost 1,500 votes. Her margin of victory in Union was 704 and in Crittenden it was 818.

In Crittenden County, Rogers' opponent carried the Shady Grove precinct, which is on the border of his home county. And Leonard also outpaced Rogers in one of the Frances precincts here. She won overall with 50.2 percent of the vote.

The position of family court judge was created in the 5th Judicial Circuit in 2001 in order to help manage a growing docket of custody and family court matters. Karen Woodall, a practicing attorney in Marion, was appointed to the bench.

William Mitchell of Clay in Webster County defeated Woodall in a special election in 2002 and in 2006, Mitchell ran unopposed for a full eight-year term as the circuit judge for family court.

The family court judge is one of three who serve Crittenden, Union and Webster counties. District Judge Daniel Heady was unopposed in this election and Circuit Judge René Williams was also unopposed.
