KY SECOND HIGHEST OBESITY RATE IN U.S.

A new report has found that Kentucky has the second highest adult obesity rate in the nation, and Kentucky children aged 10 to 17 have the nation's highest rate for that age group, according to Melissa Patrick of Kentucky Health News. The Trust for America's Health annual report says 4 of every 10 Kentucky adults are obese. And 72.3 percent are either obese or overweight, third in the nation. Among the state's high-school students, 18.4% are obese and another 17.8% are overweight. The report says the national adult obesity rate keeps rising, with 19 states having a rate over 35%. A decade ago, no state had an adult obesity rate at or above

Drought complicating town's water crisis

STAFF REPORT

Marion City Council held a special meeting Tuesday and provided an update on its now six-months-and-counting water crisis, but more questions remain than answers.

Since the spring, Marion water customers have been under a conservation order, and it appears there is no relief in sight. Amid one of the worst western Kentucky droughts in history, Marion's raw water supply is waning. If not for Marion's recently inked contract to buy about two-thirds of its daily demand of drinking water from the Crittenden-Livingston Water District, townspeople would be virtually without water.

The city reported that it is drawing a measure of water captured in the Lake George basin to supplement Old City Lake, its last remaining raw water source after Lake George's leaking dam was breeched in April to prevent a levee failure. Some water has collected in Lake George below the breech and is being used as an emergency source of raw water. But it, too, is running low.

Lake George has also historically been susceptible to drought, so the raw water source for the town remains very unreliable, exacerbated by lack of rainfall since early September.

The Marion water plant is running only about four days a week for a total of about 24 hours each week. Otherwise, Marion is getting about twothirds of its drinking water from the county.

City Council members reviewed three possible options

Newcomers among 11 vynig for council

STAFF REPORT

Amid the greatest citywide crisis of this generation, Marion voters will elect a new majority on the city council and a mayor.

Everyone in the city has been effected by the water shortage and critics are plentiful. The setting is ripe for an electorate to lash out its current leaders, but most are not on the ballot.

Dwight Sherer and Mike Byford, two current city council members, each of whom has served for decades, are among nearly a dozen individuals vying for six seats on the nonpartisan council. A new mayor will also be elected next month.

Two council are running for mayor and Multi-term Councilman Darrin Tabor is not seeking re-election. Sykes' seat on the council will also be replaced; therefore, at least four new members will be elected on Nov. 8. All six could be new depending on what balloters decide.

While water has been paramount campaign season, newcomers to the political race are pointing to a need for greater communication from city hall and better attention to routine maintenance of the town's infrastructure. Marion leaders raised taxes a few weeks ago for the first

Cozart's faith, fatherhood initiatives earn recognition

BY CHRIS EVANS PRESS EDITOR

For David Cozart, faith and family values came natural. Raised by a loving fatunate. His religious convictions and fundamental vision of fatherhood have influenced more than 30 years of personal work toward what he says is a "miracle cure for many of society's ills."

"Father absence is the driving force behind all social pathogens. When a father is not engaged with a family, teen pregnancy rates go up, birth weights go down, children are more likely to commit a crime or be a victim of crime, substance abuse goes up and poor school behavior becomes an issue, just poor behavior in general," he said. "Fatherhood is the magic pill as far as I am concerned."

Life can be difficult in Guatemala City, but inspiration may years ago from Hurricane Camp Meeting near Tolu helped lead a Crittenden County native to love, educate and show Christ to orphaned and abandon youth in Central America.

It took some time for me to open myself up to the assistance of others who wanted to deliver

I have written once about this chemotherapy-powered escalator I'm riding through November. Thank goodness I'm nearing the end. Chemo is a beast that rages internally, but assuming you trust conventional medicine, you agree to play the cards you're dealt.

It's very eye-opening and humbling, this ride. It, like other trying times we all face, tests our strength, patience and resolve. It's often hard to accept attention from friends when a major life experience presents itself. We feel weak, somewhat burdensome and unworthy of showers of attention and affection.

Thinking I could go it alone, I tried to ward off my friends' plan to stay with me in the hospital while I was undergoing a colon resection. In 2020 when COVID prevented all visitors from staying with patients in the hos-well prepared in the hospital and recover from the colon surgery just the same, right?

Wow, was I wrong. Losing a foot of your colon is obviously a little more involved than having a tiny appendix removed.

My friends' intentions, one as a nurse practioneer and one as a former nurse, were to take care of me

24/7 until I returned home, allowing my husband to stay home and work. But, as veteran nurses, they knew best. They basically held an intervention and told me they would take turns staying with me. I eventually gave in, and their lessons on blessings began in that Vanderbilt hospital room and have stuck with me since.

My takeaway: Accept the meals, be thankful for the gifts and make plans to pay it forward.

Having your independence stripped and relying on others is tough if you usually go through life with an "I can do this

But two of my biggest cheerleaders and prayer warriors taught me to let people help in times of need. Beyond that initial hospital stay and subsequent recovery at home. I have counted my blessings every other week as my amazing friends travel with me to Vanderbilt's Ingram Cancer Center, thankfully keeping the mood light and laughing when I misuse words and talk in my sleep about shopping after being pumped with a load of steroids and Benadryl on top of two chemotherapy cocktails.

Laughter is the best medicine after all, right? Second only to being blessed with prayers that, no doubt, my friends are helping to make this journey more tolerable.

I also have been blessed to hear that my colon cancer diagnosis detected during a routine screening has encouraged others to schedule their own tests.

I've decided that if something good comes from something unpleasant, it makes it more bearable. Being blessed makes you want to bless others.

My ride is expected to end Nov. 10 and trust me, I'll make sure everyone in the infusion center hears me ring that bell!

6 sentenced to prison in Crittenden Circuit Court

STAFF REPORT

Crittenden Circuit Judge Rene Williams last Thursday sentenced six individuals to prison, gave one a probated prison sentence and issued bench warrants for two men who failed to appear in court as scheduled.

Christopher Fitzgerald, 33, of Marion pleaded guilty to second-degree burglary and amended charge of thirddegree burglary for separate burglaries of the same location near Dycusburg last December.

Circuit Judge Rene Williams sentenced Fitzgerald to five years on one count and three years on the other and ran the prison time consecutively for an eightyear sentence.

Investigators said the burglaries took place on Gorman Pond Road in the southern part of the county. Deputy Ray Agent charged Fitzgerald with burglarizing the home on Sept. 8 and again on Dec. 19. The first time, Fitzgerald used a homeowner's weapon to shoot a hole in a boot on the back porch. The second time, a Honda four-wheeler and .38 Smith and Wesson revolver were taken. The ATV and a gun were found at home in Dycusburg where Fitzgerald was living, according to the deputy's report. A surveillance system at the home caught one of the burglaries on video.

•Michael Pierce, 42, of Uniontown, pleaded guilty to a felony charge of theft by unlawful taking. Williams was sentenced to five years on one charge and one year on the other. He was given probation for five years.

•Michael Wright, 37, of Marion pleaded guilty to a felony charge of custodial interference. Court records indicate that Wright was not truthful to investigators when police went to his home on June 8 looking for his juvenile son. Witnesses told police they saw the boy leave from a back door and get into a vehicle with his mother. Wright was sentenced to one year and six months in prison. •Megan Lynn McCalis-

Cozart has been active in civic affairs in Lexington and across Kentucky from serving as a Chamber of Commerce Distinguished Leader to his role with the Mayor's Commission for Law Enforcement and Justice Accountability.

FOOD BANK BID IS DELAYED DUE TO TRIBAL REQUEST, NO CONTRACTORS

Due to a lack of interest from contractors and another issue that has arisen, Crittenden County has canceled a bid opening that was to be held this week. Bids were advertised recently for an expansion project at the Crittenden County Food Bank. No bids were received on the project, plus the Quapaw Nation has responded to a tribal consultation letter sent as part of an environmental review scoping process. The Department for Local Government does not allow bid advertisement until the project has received environmental clearance. Therefore, bids will be delayed.

NEW PLATE OPTIONS AVAILABLE HERE LATER IN OCTOBER

The new Team Kentucky option features a light blue likeness of the sky above a green grassy feature that runs along the bottom of the plate. A dark blue Team Kentucky logo and county name rest at the left of the six-character license number. As with the current standard plates, there will be an option with "In God We Trust" printed on the face.

The new plates should be available for purchase in county clerk offices beginning Monday, Oct. 24.

The personalization and the fees for both standard plates are the same as the current standard plates. The new plates were designed and printed at no additional cost to the state.

Customers interested in switching to a Team Kentucky plate may do so at their regular renewal time with no additional charge. However, switching to the new design before renewal will incur a fee.

KEES MONEY CAN GO FOR MUCH MORE THAN COLLEGE FEES

Although many students think Kentucky Educational Excellence Scholarship (KEES) funds can only be used for college classes, that isn't the case. High school graduates can use KEES funds to be reimbursed for costs for approved registered apprenticeship or qualified workforce training programs, according to the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA).

"Allowing students to use their KEES earnings for a variety of educational programs is one more way Kentucky helps students prepare to enter the workforce," Lt. Gov. Jacqueline Coleman said. "Any students in registered apprenticeship or workforce training programs should find out if the program they're in qualifies for KEES funding."

Students can request reimbursement for equipment, required tools, licensures, tuition and books, uniforms and other expenses. All requests for reimbursement from the period from July 2022 to May 2023 must be post-marked by June 15, 2023.

As a general rule, students must use their KEES funds within five years of their high school graduation. Apprentices must be participating in a registered apprenticeship program approved through the Kentucky Education and Workforce Development Cabinet. They must complete a Registered Apprentice Pathway form and submit it to KHEAA.

Workforce trainees must be enrolled at an approved site in a qualified workforce training program that is in one of Kentucky's top five high-demand work sectors (advanced manufacturing, business/IT, construction, healthcare and transportation). They must complete a Qualified Workforce Trainee Pathway form and submit it to KHEAA.

For more detailed information about the process, students should visit kheaa.com and look for KHEAA-administered programs under the Paying for College tab.

POLITICAL SIGNS, MORE REMOVED FROM STATE R-O-W

Kentucky Transportation Cabinet crews are removing illegally placed items along state maintained right-of-way areas.

Political candidates, residents, business operators and property owners along federal and state highways are reminded no signage is allowed on right-of-way other than official highway signs and items approved through a permit process.

Campaign signs must be placed beyond right-of-way limits. Right-of-way fence is included with this restriction. On roads with a right-of-way fence, no signs may be attached. Fall mowing cycles are in full swing across the district. Crews will not mow around illegally placed items. They will be removed. Items placed on right-of-way areas create significant delays for mowing crews and are potential hazards for mowing operators and passing motorists, the highway department said.

Right-of-way restriction often becomes a problem with regard to yard sales and real estate advertising, too, the transportation cabinet said in its news release.

"Illegally placed mate-rials along roads can create additional haz-ards by blocking sight distance or distracting drivers, particularly at intersections. All yard sale activities including parking should be off right-of-way limits," the statement said.

It is also illegal to attach items such as flyers, posters, balloons or streamers to stop signs, highway markers or any other road sign or utility pole. Illegal placement on utility poles presents additional obstacles and potential dangers for utility crew workers.

Removed items are taken to the county's KYTC maintenance facility and temporarily held. Unclaimed materials will be trashed or recycled.

AVIAN FLU FOUND In Fayette Chicken

Federal and state authorities say a case of avian influenza has been detected in a backyard flock of mixed-species birds in Fayette County.

Kentucky State Veterinarian Dr. Katie Flynn said the United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) National Veterinary Services Laboratory confirmed the presence of highly pathogenic H5N1 avian influenza in samples taken from a bird submitted from the premise.

"The Kentucky Department of Agriculture and the Office of the State Veterinarian is working alongside animal health officials at both the federal and state government to contain this incident of avian influenza," Agriculture Commissioner Ryan Quarles said. "Bird producers across the state would be wise to take the necessary precautions to protect their flocks as the cases of Avian Influenza have begun to pop up again across the country. We encourage everyone to visit kyagr.com/HPAI for additional information and updates as they come. Protecting the health of livestock and poultry in the commonwealth is a top priority of the Kentucky Department of Agriculture."

The state had two earlier cases of the deadly virus in February when birds from commercial poultry operations in Fulton and Webster counties tested positive for the virus. The sites were quarantined and cleaned while surveillance around the premises was conducted. No additional detections of the virus were identified beyond the initial infected premises in these counties. The sites were released from quarantine and declared clear of the virus by May. The most recent case is not linked to the February incidents.

Highly pathogenic avian influenza (HPAI) is known to be deadly for domesticated chickens and turkeys. The Kentucky Department of Agriculture (KDA) began an investigation upon notification from the University of Kentucky Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory of a submitted bird testing positive for Avian Influenza.

"Similar to the actions taken in February, we are working diligently to prevent this virus from spreading to other poultry premises," Dr. Flynn said. "We have activated our Avian Influenza response plan and are in active communication with state, federal, and industry partners."

SCHUMANN

Continued from page 1 Community, Crittenden County Tomorrow, Marion Baptist Church and other organizations. She was a 1965 graduate of Crittenden County High School and was a financial specialist with Cigna Corp., in Connecticut for many years before retiring to Marion where she became active in community affairs.

Schumann attended Paducah Community College and earned an undergraduate degree from Western Kentucky University and a master's degree in business from the University of Chicago.

For a time, Schumann worked for the Environmental Protection Agency in Washington, DC. With Cigna, she rose to become the highest ranking female executive in the company.

Along with a handful of others, Schumann founded Crittenden

County Tomorrow, partly for the purpose of preserving the former hospital building across from Fohs Hall, also known as Hayward House. Ironically, the Foundation recently presented Fohs Hall, Inc., a $50,000 donation to tear down the historic house and former hospital to make room for a parking lot, green space and playground.

The Foundation also has recently contributed $150,000 to the Crittenden County Rocket Foundation, which helps students offset the cost of dual-credit college courses and vocational-technical certifications.

Schumann bequeathed a large part of her estate to the community, leaving more than $1 million that will be used to benefit "charitable, benevolent, eleemosynary, educational and civic activities to improve the quality of life of the citizens of Crittenden County."

how we would have acted or what we would have said had we been in their circumstances. In life, takes a great deal of courage and wisdom to know when it is best to stay and best go. Sometimes running away takes age than staying. It takes counsel wisdom and to know how to make those decisions. shared in a column not long ago a quote from the Commandant of the Marine Corps, "Some-strength of those who are in difficult situations and remain unseen. Those who are in the cities, in the countryside, or masses of people in what we call the "third-world." Some have no choice but to remain, they have to fight, and they have to win – every day. There are also events from which we cannot run away: the death of someone close, catastrophic weather events, or the results of violence against us. We can try, but eventually we must deal with it - we have to fight, and we have

That said, there are some difficult events recorded in the Bible. One of those led an angel of the Lord to ask an abused servant who was running away, "Hagar, maid of Sarai, where have you come from and where are you going?" She replied that she was running from her master. It is important to remember that Hagar was not entirely innocent, as she was threatening to replace Sarai. The answer still offends our sensibilities today and is certainly not what most with compassion would say today, but there it is, "Return and submit.

In some ways this story is a variation of Cain and Abel. There the victim is murdered, and the perpetrator is questioned. Here the victim is sent away to die but is still alive to be questioned. However, this time God intervenes and pushes the fractured family back together with terms that must have seemed odious to all three at some level and seem entirely unfair to Hagar.

Perhaps the key here is found in Hagar's response. She responded in faith. What is the source of the courage of her response? She knew that she was seen by God. She said, "Have I seen the one who sees me, and lived?" She was not suffering invisibly, and she believed the promise God.

Being seen and being understood gives us courage to do far more than we can imagine. In life it does not always mean that we stay in a bad situation, but it does mean that we make our decisions seeing more clearly. Even if those around us cannot, or will not, see, God does.

Charles Spurgeon's words from a 1906 sermon share the power of God seeing us in our context, "God sees the end from the beginning and when the great drama of time shall be complete, then will the splendor as well as the goodness of the Lord be seen! When the whole painting shall be unrolled in one vast panorama, then shall we see its matchless beauty and appreciate the inimitable skill of the Divine Artist. But here we only look at one little patch of shade, or one tiny touch of color and it appears to us to be rough or coarse. It may be that we shall be permitted, in eternity, to see the whole of the picture, but meanwhile, let us firmly believe that He who is painting it knows how to do it and that He who orders all things according to the counsel of His own will, cannot fail to do that which is best for the creatures whom He has made and preserved in being!" ("Seeing God's Goodness Here").

In most of life, running is not an option. This is what helps us to bring to reality the beauty of the kingdom of God. We stay and fight the good fight. We have to win (correction: we've already won).

A Godly character is developed from the inside out

Question: I am a follower of Christ and I want to live an unimpeachable life, but I struggle daily to have a godly character. How can I develop the traits of a Christlike behavior?

Answer: Every Christian would like to flip a switch and have a godly character, but that isn't possible. As long as we live in this world, we will continue to struggle with sin. We won't have victory in the war with sin because we try harder. It's only when we are "led by the Spirit" that we avoid the failure caused by sin. Here are some things you can do to grow a godly character:

■ Assess your daily actions. Look for specific sins you are doing of your old fleshly nature. Confess those sins and ask God to help you turn from them.

■ Set aside daily time for God. Determine when and where you can meet with God through reading your Bible and talking to Him in prayer. Make it an unwavering habit to commune with Him each day.

■ Redirect your thoughts. Keep your every thought on pure things. (Philippians 4:8). By changing your thoughts, you will change your habits and ultimately your character.

The Apostle Paul urged believers to "live by the Spirit, and you will not gratify the desires of the sinful nature" (Gal. 5:16). Living a godly life is allowing God to change us from the inside out, day after day.

Remembering things of childhood days

Seeing a picture or just reading a sentence in an article will sometimes set the mind to wondering and recalling things of our past. Things, that at the time, didn't seem all that important to us, just something we saw everyday and took for granted. Somewhere through time, someone else recalled these simple things and wrote a poem or article about them, and now I see my past through different eyes.

The first of these little articles is titled "The History of Aprons." I happen to run across it on the internet. How it brought back memories of my own grandmother and her apron that she wore every day. I saw her use these aprons in most all the ways that was written about. Not much need for these old aprons now days, but they sure were a much used item in years past. And now I think of her and her aprons as a treasured memory.

The History of 'APRONS'

I don't think our kids know what an apron is, and for sure not all the ways they were once

The principal use of Grandma's apron was to protect the dress underneath because she only had a few and because it was easier to wash

It will be a long time before someone invents something that will replace that 'old-time apron' that served so many purposes.

And for me, brings back so many old memories of growing up living next door to my grandmother. I remember her saying many times, "I better go put on a clean

Feed sacks. Fitting in closely with the aprons of long ago are the memories of the treasured and versatile feed sacks.

Years ago chicken feed and flour would be delivered to the local community grocery stores in printed cotton sacks.

> These colorful and prized feed sacks were treasured by the housewives and homemakers that time.

If you were a good cusand tomer friend of the local community grocery store owner, you might have the privilege of getting first pick when a new load of feed was delivered.

My family was good friends of Seth Ferguson that ran the Crayne Grocery store, and my mom would let me go with her to help pick out some of the more colorful feed sacks that would make some mighty pretty skirts for a young girl.

The sacks were so durable that when you outgrew the clothes, the cotton material was still in good enough condition to use to make quilts tops. I have several of these quilt tops my grandmother made out of clothes that I outgrew and scraps of material left over from other sewing projects she had made. I can look at these quilts now and remember items of clothing that I used to wear when I was growing up and also that my mom and grandmother wore.

Other favorite items waving away unwanted my grandmother made from feed sack materidered into your vard or al. would be her aprons which she wore each day and the sun bonnets she wore faithfully every day when she worked in her large garden or fed her chickens. These aprons would have large pockets to carry items she would need, such as garden seeds as she planted the yearly garden, and if you knew how to hold the front of the apron just right, you could gather the eggs each afternoon in the fold.

Clothesline

Another by-gone chore is the one of hanging your clothes out on a clothes line to dry. But even today I have a small umbrella-aluminum clothesline pole in my back yard that I hang out as many things as possible to dry in the summer sunshine and breeze. Nothing like going to bed on sheets that were just dried outside, and smell of the clean air and sunshine. To me this is one of life's simple pleasures.

When the much-anticipated Sears-Roebuck Christmas catalog arrived in the mail, children spent hours going through it, wishing for everything.

But did you know that a clothesline was also a news forecaster?

A clothesline was a news forecast, to neighbors passing by.

There were no secrets you could keep when clothes were hung to dry.

It also was a friendly link, for neighbors always knew, if company had stopped by to spend a night or two. For then you'd see the "fancy sheets" and towels upon

The line announced a baby's birth, from folks who lived inside, as brand new infant clothes were hung, so carefully with pride.

The ages of the children could so readily be known by watching how the sizes changed, you'd know how much they'd grown.

It also told when illness struck, as extra sheets were hung. Then nightclothes and a bathrobe, too, haphazardly were It also said, "Gone on grandmother, Ethel Brantley, is shown wearing one of her "everyday" aprons that she made from prized feed sacks.

Now what goes on inside a home is anybody's guess.

I really miss that way of life, it was a friendly When neighbors knew each other best by what hung on the line!

Mail Order Catalogs

Remember the large catalogs that used to come in the mail to your home? I remember getting the Sears, Roebuck, J. C. Penny, Aldens and Montgomery Ward catalogs when I was growing up. I couldn't wait to look through them and see all the new items it had for

The Christmas catalogs from Sears, Roebuck and J. C. Penney where looked through until the pages about fell out. This is how Santa knew about what every boy and girl wanted for Christmas, and we learned about all the new

In the early part of the century the Sears, Roebuck catalog, and other catalogs as well, played a very important part in the lives of people, especially country folks who were not able to travel to stores to buy their needs every day or even every month.

Catalogs were as important as toilet tissue is today. In fact, they were the "toilet tissues" for most folks. That little outbuilding that sat somewhere not too far from the house nearly always contained a catalog to be used for other purposes besides just brows-

In the early 1900s Sears, Roebuck catalog contained all the needs that a family would have from building, painting and completing six- and eight-room houses for occupancy to having all the furniture that would furnish a home, besides countless other items such as clothing, medical supplies, tools, vehicles, musical instruments, books, jewelry, toys and anything else that might come to mind. The old catalogs are an archive history. As we turn the pages we get a true picture of the earlier vears.

These memories go along with having a birthday this past week, so it makes one stop and recall childhood days. I am thankful for growing up in the days of aprons, clotheslines and home catalogs.

Sherer's streak ends at 51 years

It took a huge tug of family responsibility for Dwight Sherer to break his Friday night streak.

Two weeks ago, the 69-year-old Marion resident missed a Rocket football game at Bardstown, 171 miles away. Sure, there were probably more than a handful of the normal Rocket faithful who missed the three-hour trip as Crittenden County lost 63-35. What makes Sherer's absence noticeable was that it was his first missed game in more than a half

He had been to every Rocket football game for more than 51 years straight, seeing every game despite weather or distance since September 1971.

Sherer said a commitment to stay with an ailing father was the reason. Rocket coach Gaige Courtney said Sherer's devotion to the team is incredible, as a fan, supporter and part of the crew that has filmed games for more than 30 years.

Sherer missed a game in 1971 because he had a minor automobile accident on the way to Lone Oak where the team was playing.

"Otherwise, the streak would have been longer," he said with a chuckle. "I had gone to several in a row before

Sherer graduated high school from CCHS in 1971 and has been a football fan ever since. When he was young, the team always took a pep bus with fans. When he was old enough to drive there were buddies like Soupy Grady and Leonard Faith – who joined him. For the past

Sherer kept his game streak alive about eight years ago despite an urge to miss one to tour Camp David where his niece's husband was a chef. Camp David is a 125-acre country retreat for the U.S. president, located in Maryland.

"The whole family went, but I stayed home and went the football game," he said.

Sherer's parents are both over 90 years old and he needed to be home with them late last month when he

about pre-winter prep Fall is here and the fertility of soil as well rush to finish projects before winter is on. Harvest season is under way and mostly finished for hay producers. Don't get in too big of a hurry that you forget the basic safety measures that are

during this busy time. Prussic Acid

needed to keep you and your family safe

Each fall, prussic acid poisoning is a real concern for Kentucky livestock producers, especially those who grow and graze their animals on sorghumbased forages like forage sorghum, sorghum-sudangrass, sudangrass and johnsongrass. By taking proper precautions, you can prevent prussic acid poisoning in your animals. Prussic acid poisoning occurs when livestock graze sorghum-based pastures shortly after the field experiences a traumatic event, such as frost. Frosts cause plant cells to rupture, which allows cyanideproducing compounds and enzymes to mix. If consumed by livestock, the compounds will interfere with how their bodies use oxygen, and it can rapidly result in death.

Do not allow your animals to graze fields containing sorghumbased forages for at least seven days after a killing frost. Patchy frosts are dangerous because not all of the vegetation is harmed in the frost. When this happens do not graze until the plant completely dries and has turned brown. With time, the forage can dry down and prussic acid is reduced via volatilization.

You can cut sorghum-based forages for hay after a frost, but make sure the hay is properly cured before baling. During the curing process, prussic acid volatilizes and renders the forage safe for livestock feeding.

Fall Soil Testing Soil testing is a soilmanagement tool we use to determine the

as the optimum lime and fertilizer requirements for crops. Fall is the best time of year to test your soil. Most nutrients take some time to break down and become available to the plant. If you give them ter to break down, by the time you are plant in the spring, the plants can better take up the nutrients. When taking a soil sample, remember plant have shallow roots that lie within the top 6 to 12 inches of soil; your samples should only be 4 to 6 inches deep. Put the sample in a plastic bucket since a metal bucket may taint the results. Once sampling is complete bring to the office where you will provide basic information from the crop to be grown to is the garden spot mostly sunny or shady.

Crittenden County landowners receive 12 free soil sample each year from the Crittenden County Extension Office.

Fall Fertilizer

Now is a good time for grain producers to get a jumpstart on next growing season. Applying some nutrients to your ground now is one way for you to do that.

Fall fertilizer applications have many advantages. They allow you to get a job done that can delay planting if it is put off until spring. The weather tends to be drier during the fall in Kentucky, which means your soil is less likely to get compacted when you make an application. Since most fertilizer purchases occur during the spring, you may get a discount

from your fertilizer

dealer, if you purchase nutrients during the

Once you get your soil test results, you can begin to fertilize according to UK recommendations. Potash and phosphorus are the two nutrients that are ideal for fall fertilizer applications in Kentucky. Both react strongly enough with the soil that they remain in the ground and their value is not lost through leaching during Kentucky's wet winters. Recommended rates of phosphorus and potash should be applied before planting small grains in the fall. If you are a doublecrop producer, you will want to include your soybean nutrient needs for potash and phosphorus in the fall wheat nutrient application.

The University of Kentucky encourages corn and full-season soybean producers to wait until the springtime to apply nitrogen and animal manures. Both run a high risk of leaching from the soil with Kentucky's typically wet winters. Additionally, nitrogen losses can occur from denitrification and immobilization during the winter.

Rockets stage comeback at Creek

On a distant voyage, it took not an exotic gem, but an historic replica for Crittenden County to earn its third victory of the season. The biggest second-half comeback in Rocket football history - well tied for the biggest ever – was needed for Crittenden County to rally from a two-touchdown deficit to win 28-14 Friday against Liberty Creek in northern Nashville.

The Rockets trailed 14-0 at intermission, but its offense and defense dominated the second half as Crittenden scored four unanswered touchdowns, led by junior quarterback Micah Newcom.

The CCHS quarterback struggled to find his receivers in the first half despite adequate protection from the line, but he threw for two touchdowns in the final two periods and rushed for two more.

"The first half, I will take responsibility for. I wouldn't let the ball go, wasn't trusting myself, wasn't trusting my teammates. That's on me," Newcom said.

While Newcom was orchestrating the scoring plays, Crittenden's defense turned the tide on the other side of the ball. The Rockets gave no ground or threw the Wolves for a loss on a third of their 18 secondhalf running plays, including three sacks. Liberty Creek was hampered a great deal by the loss of its top running back, Jake Barbuto, who left the game with just over six minutes to play in the third period with what appeared to be a serious ankle injury. He had rushed for 113 yards in the first half and was pivotal in the Wolves' sustaining drives that piled up a dozen first downs. They had only two in the last half.

The hosts were again hit by a personnel problem when its top receiver in the game, Cooper Schell, was ejected for unsportsmanlike conduct a bit later in the third

Only one other time in CCHS history had the Rockets come back from a 14-point halftime deficit. The first was in 1993 against Trigg

Coach Gaige Courtney said it was a tremendous lift for his squad, which opens district play next week at Rocket Stadium against Fulton County in the annual homecoming matchup.

"Super excited for the guys after being down 14 to nothing at halftime. I didn't really say a whole lot, these guys just came out and decided they wanted to play," Courtney said. "Just told them we had to play harder, we had to play faster and we had to play smarter. And that's what they did."

Crittenden improved to 3-4 on the season and will play its two First District Class A games over the next couple of Fridays against Fulton and Russellville before finishing the regular season at home against Louisville DeSales.

Crittenden County has three girls who were selected for the All Fifth District Team, announced last week following the final regular-season game. Lady Rockets (pictured from left above) chosen for the recognition were Lizzie Campbell, Ella Geary and Taylor Guess.

Lady Rockets' record-setting season ends with region loss

Crittenden County's historic soccer season came to an end Monday night at Hopkinsville as the Lady Rockets fell 8-2 to Madisonville in the opening round of the Second Region Tournament.

"It has been a heck of a ride. I'm so proud of these kids and all that they have accomplished," said second-year CCHS coach Jessica DeBurgo.

CCHS got goals from Taylor Guess and Bailey Williams. An assist was credited to Raven Hayes. Keeper Hannah Long had nine saves.

The Lady Rockets won 11 games this season, the most ever in CCHS soccer history. The girls were runnerup in the Fifth District Tournament to earn a berth in this week's regional. The Rocket girls finish the season 11-6-2 and ranked No. 5 in the region's power rank-CCHS's appearance in the Second Region Tournament this week was just its fourth ever. Before Monday, the last trip to a regional playoff match was in 2016 and in 2017 the Lady Rockets were winless, so it's been a big turnaround.

Foster 45th in state match

Crittenden County junior Jeremiah Foster tied for 45th in the KHSAA state golf tournament at Bowling Green Country Club last week.

Foster shot a 77-81-158 in the two-day tournament. There were 89 individuals competing for the state title, which was won by Christian Academy-Louisville's Brady Smith, who was 4 under with two-day scores of 67-73-140.

Foster's coach Vicki Hatfield was proud of the junior's play and his composure. She expects him to return to the state tournament next year as a senior.

"I am extremely proud of him," she said. "It was his first appearance, and he learned a lot.'

"I love Marion and I think that we have a great community. I raised my children in Marion and now my grandchildren are being raised in Marion. I decided to run for city council because I feel like we need more and better communication. Better communication is needed between the administration and the council and then between the council and the community. I have been working in management and retail for 35 years and I understand what it takes to work with the public and help resolve issues that arise. I think it is crucial to have an understanding of what it takes to work with the public when seeking public office. We have a great town and I want to see it stay that way. "I filed for city council because of concern of how our city was being run. That was before the water crisis. I am more certain than ever we need leadership that will put Marion first over any one person's desires or opinions. My greatest concern is city maintenance. It seems we have no one watching or taking care of our infrastructure, from City Hall to the tall grass that grew out of our sidewalks downtown this summer to the large number of vehicles and buildings the city owns and operates. For a good scare, go look at our water treatment plant. The building is in a terrible state. All the water storage tanks are badly rusted and the building looks to be falling apart and very dirty. At the old city lake, there are trees actually growing on the far side of the dam, away from the parking area. The spillway hasn't been maintained in 50 years. Lake George has trees growing in the spillway. There is a continuous list of city property and equipment that looks like there has been no maintenance or upgrading done for many years. I feel you can't go forward if you don't have a solid foundation. Communication from city hall, to me, has been very poor. I don't think our current council realizes just how concerned residents are. Many are truly scared of what's going to happen to our town. We need to do all we can to fix out current buildings and equipment, talk to our residents more clearly, then develop a plan to incentivize our business to consider Marion."

"I love my community and everyone who lives in this community knows that there are problems that need to be addressed, not the least of which is the current water crisis. We need to find the most affordable and sustainable solution to this long-lasting problem so that we can end this crisis as soon as possible. I, like others have sometimes felt unrepresented. I feel that there should be an open door of communication between the citizens of Marion and the people that we elect who make decisions that affect our lives and our community. I want to hear from my neighbors what issues are important to them and then work with city, county and state officials to find solutions. I believe that if we come together as a community there is no problem that we can't resolve, but we have to communicate and work together."

COMMENT

"First, for a representative democracy to work efficiently, it must have well informed citizens. If elected, I will make it my responsibility to fulfill this expectation. After talking to many citizens in Marion, I believe that communication between local government and the community is a top issue for voters this November. Government works for the people. Citizens need to know how their money is being spent. Second, Marion must focus on its foundation. I am a firm believer that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. If elected, I will work with other council members, the mayor, and the city administrator to pass measures that repair existing infrastructure. It is no secret that Marion is struggling financially. We must be smart in how we spend taxpayer dollars. That is why I believe preventing problems now will avoid costly problems in the future. You can paint a house as much as you want. However, if the house does not have a solid foundation to stand on, it will never last. I have always wanted to help my community by running for a local

I've talked to some of the other candidates and for the most part we're all about on the same page. We need change, we need different thinking, we need new views, we need to reinvent our city. We need to invest in our town and bring some more companies and people to our area so we can grow. We have to think of different incentives to get them to want to invest. Marion gets $1 million for sewer plant

The City of Marion received some welcomed news late last week on its effort to fortify funding for the new waste water treatment plant being built in Industrial Park North. Marion will be getting just over $1 million in the form of an infrastructure grant from the Delta Regional Authority.

The project, which included replacement of sewer lines a couple of years, ago will cost about $19 million.

It will be a few more months before the sewer treatment plant con-

City leaders have said such grant funds will help Marion defray further environmental fees on customers' water and sewer bills.

Morganfield also received about $163,000 for its waste water plant.

WATER

Continued from page 1 for a long-term solution to the water crisis. Information for each option remains incomplete to a great degree, some more than others. Some cost estimates have been prepared and were presented to the council, but many questions remain with each proposal.

Crittenden-Livingston Water District engineers have prepared an outline that would include increasing the capacity of its plant and running a high-volume water line from Salem to Marion. A broad cost estimate is between $31 million and $37 million. City Administrator Adam Ledford said Marion needs about 400,000 to 450,000 gallons of water each day. Crittenden-Livingston plant expansion would be for 2 million gallons per day.

"So we're not sure how much of that is on us," City Administrator Adam Ledford said.

Bell Engineering provided Marion with a cost estimate to run a water transmission line from Caldwell County Water District to Marion, but its proposal would include other issues that city officials say will require further review because Princeton is the water supplier for that plan. Recently, Princeton Water District officials sent an email to local officials citing concerns about its ability to supply Marion with water without some major upgrades of its own. A water tank and pump station would be part of the commitment Princeton would likely need to make in order for this option to be viable. The cost for only the water line designed by Bell Engineering to connect Marion was estimated at $5 million. However, much more would certainly figure into that connection.

The council also saw an estimate prepared by Bacon, Farmer and Workman Engineering on the viability of soil in the Lake George Levee. The report provided a positive soil test, but indicated that further review would be necessary. State officials said more engineering would have to be done before the levee could be repaired. The engineering firm estimated that the repair cost would be just over $1 million. Division of Water (DOW) representatives who attended the council meeting cautioned local leaders that permitting any type of work on the dam would require further review and would need more detailed engineering that take several months.

Councilmen Darrin Donnie and Arflack each questioned state officials with regard to whether the permitting process could be fast-tracked, so work could begin before winter rainfall. Allowing the lake to fill this winter during the rainy season would be highly beneficial.

"We don't want to be hauling water again next summer," Arflack said. Based on responses from state officials, the prospects appear grim for any type of movement to repair the levee this McLeary. Shannon area supervisor for DOW, said the engineering work submitted by BFW Engineers to the council on Tuesday was merely a Geotechnical Stability Study, which is only part of the complete application process.

Mayor Jared Byford said he would discuss with engineers this week their plan for completing the Lake George repair permit application.

The mayor's job will become increasingly arduous because the city administrator has turned in his resignation in order to take a similar job in Tennessee. Ledford's final day in Marion will be Friday.

Tim Capps, president of Par 4 Plastics, which is one of Marion's largest manufacturing firms, addressed the council and asked the city to find a project manager to help navigate the myriad of issues facing Marion's pursuit for a solution to its crisis.

"What I hear is some confusion and that makes me even more concerned about the citizens that need drinking water," Capps said, pointing out that his plant also relies on water in manufacturing.

"Somebody is going to have to come up with a plan," Capps added. "I am told that the state will help us, depending on the decision we make."

DOW representatives have said in prior meetings that financial assistance is more likely if Marion develops a regionalized plan. They said small, single municipal water plants seldom find favor when it comes to attracting big dollars from state or federal sources.

Already, Marion has spent about $250,000, and that figure does not include recent engineering fees.

Councilwoman D'Anna Browning said there is a plan in the works to bring in a consultant to help Marion develop a clear strategy and to help find funding sources. That plan is expected to be presented at Monday night's regular city council meeting.

Members of the Crittenden County Economic Development Corporation, Lake Barkley Partnership and Pennyrile Development District have been cooperating to help find a facilitator for Marion. Capps, who is president of the Lake Partnership. Barklev confirmed its involvement. He is also a member of the Crittenden County Economic Development Corporation board of directors.

While they say an individual has been identified by those groups, a name is not being made public at this time. The individual is described as someone with complete understanding of infrastructure projects, funding sources and well connected in Kentucky and Washington.

Meanwhile, Marion continues to buy a good portion of its drinking water from Crittenden-Livingston Water District. In September, Marion spent $17,800 to buy just over 5.3 million gallons. It purchased just over 3.7 million gallons from the county during August at a cost of $12,678. Marion is paying a wholesale contract price of $3.34 for every 1,000 gallons it gets from the county.

The city has said it spends about $2.50 to manufacture 1.000 gallons of water. So, in the past two months, Marion's water purchasing has cost the town $30,482 for 9.1 million gallons. If Marion had made that amount of water itself, the cost would have been $22,816. So the water Marion has been drinking has amounted to $7,666 extra for the past two months. That means it has cost the city about $3.50 more per customer per month to have county water.

a beloved missionary who preached at Hurricane Camp Meeting during English's youth, that planted the seed. From there, English founded The World Our Parish missionary program. Donaldson preached at Hurricane beginning from when English was three years old and for years afterward, mezmarizing crowds with paintings that came to life through his sermons, much of which involved stories about his time as a missionary.

English met his wife Pam at Asbury University and after in 1998 founded the stateside missionary organization that supports the couple's work in Guatemala.

When they first left the U.S. in 1994, the Englishes began ministering to people at the City Dump in Guatemala City, where the most desperate live, sustaining life by pilfering through the

Not long afterwards, the Englishes started a youth home - La Senda, which means The Way. Its mission is to rescue abused, abandoned, impoverished and orphaned children. Students either live at La Senda permanently or as boarders until they complete an education.

In addition to nine boarders at La Senda, English and his wife have housed more than 70 children. Today, there are 22 teachers and 142 students, down from 196 due to COVID. Students commute to the school from six nearby villages, English said. The school was built by missionary teams from the U.S., several from Marion, but because of increased gang violence, missionary travel has been halted.

Though Spanish is primarily spoken at La Senda, the English language is taught daily.

Unlike schools in the U.S., La Senda follows a calendar year, and stuattend through 11th grade.

"I think only about 10 percent go on to the university. When we first started the school, most students just went through sixth grade," English said. "We have been growing our middle and high school population, and this year 53 of our students are in middle and high school.

"No one can take away either a life in Christ or an education, so it is very rewarding to see someone mature in their faith and to see children and youth get an education when they would not have academic opportunities if not for our ministry," English said.

La Senda has given an education and quality life to so many children who might have been products of impoverished family situations.

Enlgish is the missionary organization's execudirector president. He oversees La Senda's activities in Guatemala. Also, he travels to different countries preaching, teaching and speaking at conferences and churches on spiritual formation.

"We have former students who are engineers, teachers, businessmen and women," English said. "Just this week a young lady came to enroll her son into our school. She grew up in an orphanage close to us and she studied in our school."

Frequently English is asked how long he and his wife plan to stay in Guatemala. The answer is simple: "Until the Lord leads us somewhere else," he said.

His two sons were born and educated at La Senda and now are studying at universities in the United States. The oldest, Phillip, will graduate from the University of Kentucky in May and will do a six-week officer candidate school at Quantico, Va., and then be commissioned as a U.S. Marine officer. Andrew is a junior at Libertv University in Virginia studying nance.

The Englishes adopted the first child to live at the orphanage at La Senda, Gabriella, and she lives in Lexington.
