Ky. 723, Ky. 365 to get new asphalt

Milling and paving along Ky. 365 and Ky. 723 in Crittenden County continue this week.

Paving along these highways will be at the following locations:

- Ky. 365 from the U.S. 60 intersection extending northward to milepoint 2.44 near Chandler Farm Road.
- Ky. 723 from just north of Cecil Croft Road at the 2-mile marker extending northward to Ky. 297 at milepoint 7.129, a distance of about 5.1 miles.

Milling started Monday along both highways with asphalt paving to follow on Ky.

365 and lasting about three days. Asphalt paving along Ky. 723 was expected to start today (Thursday).

Once paving is complete, the crew will install thermal stop bards and pavement markings.

Motorists should be alert for one lane traffic with alternating flow controlled by flaggers. Appropriate caution is required where equipment, flaggers and maintenance personnel are along the roadway in close proximity to traffic flow.

Rogers Group is the prime contractor on this $602,637 highway improvement project. Weather permitting, this paving project along Ky. 365 and Ky. 723 has a target completion date of next Wednesday.

Few closings set for Columbus Day

Columbus Day will see only a couple of offices closed locally for the Monday holiday. Federal offices, including the postal service and the senior center in Marion will be closed. All courthouse, city and state offices will remain open, including the Extension service and public library.

Delivery of The Early Bird will be delayed due to the postal holiday, but The Crittenden Press will be open.

Roof work

You can't judge a book by its cover, but a new cover on Crittenden County Public Library should make a good impression on patrons. Last week, Pride Industries Inc. of Clay began placing a metal roof on the 42-year-old building. The company submitted a bid of $82,000 to put down the new roof, which should alleviate the random leaks that led to damaged materials following driving rains. The roof work should be wrapped up in a few days. Further repairs to rotted areas of soffit and three windows with broken seals should prolong the life of the building. The board of trustees opted for the work after a grant for expansion was denied. The library's off-street parking area will also be sealed and striped. It will include a handicap spot adjacent to the sidewalk for improved accessibility.

Gun club donates property

The Crittenden County Cooperative Extension Service received a generous donation from Crittenden County Gun Club last month. Founding members of the gun club presented the property to the Extension service due to extenuating circumstances that prevented the gun club from being able to maintain the facility. Founding members have been mailed letters to notify them of the further steps they need to take to continue to use the facilities. Yearly membership holders will be allowed to use the facility until Dec. 31. With the Extension service acquiring the property, it will allow it to make the updates needed to the facilities and allow agents to use the resources at the property to develop educational programs and events in the future. Pictured above are members of the gun club and Extension district board, including (seated, from left) Jim Estes, Crittenden County Gun Club founding member; Barrett Belt, Extension District Board chairman; Bob Gilland, gun club founding member; (standing) Leslea Barnes, 4-H Youth Development Extension agent; Carolyn Belt, 4-H Council treasurer; Judge-Executive Perry Newcom; and Dee Brasher, Agriculture and Natural Resources Extension agent.

explained, are to keep the service afloat and comply with policy. Without the fee, the program dies.

"The reserves have run out," said Monroe, a former Baptist youth minister in Marion. "Our programs have to live within their means."

But Margaret Gilland, a senior advocate and frequent user of the local senior center's services, said requiring 24-hour advanced scheduling for pick-ups and charging a fee prevents many seniors from being able to use PACS for their transportation needs.

"You can hire someone (privately) cheaper than that," she said, offering an example of a $35 cost for a round trip to Princeton through PACS. "That service should be free. I'm lucky. I'm able to drive myself, but some of the others can't."

She also said many seniors need transportation upon discharge from the hospital, which rarely offers a 24-hour notice. But Monroe said PACS cannot afford to pay drivers to be on call for those instances.

He said the service, which is available to anyone no matter their income or age, was never meant to be free. He explained that prior to his arrival as executive director, funds had been improperly utilized from PACS Aging to help make the transportation service free to users. Once discovered, the practice was halted and those responsible for diverting the funds were dismissed from their jobs.

"The desire and intent was noble," he said, but aging funds that keep senior centers open and Kentucky Transportation Cabinet (KyTC) monies for the PACS vans and buses must be kept separate.

And with KyTC and all state government cabinets told by Gov. Matt Bevin to prepare for a 17 percent reduction in funding, the challenges for PACS will get more difficult.

"A lot of the solutions to (your) concerns are going to come from you," he told the seniors and staff last week at the Marion senior center. "We're going to have to look under every stone."

A couple of those rocks may include fundraisers to finance trips for local seniors or asking for donations from churches, businesses, organizations and individuals to finance those transportation needs.

"Fundraisers could pay the ticket price for a group," he said. "And PACS needs to do a better job of working with churches."

Monroe said PACS funds have not been cut, but the agency has failed to ask for or receive an increase in state government backing for at least 15 years. He said PACS has asked for more from the nine counties it serves.

"You know how much we've gotten? Zero," he said holding up his fingers to form a circle.

That's why the per-mile fee is critical to the transportation service's survival to serve users of all types. Monroe said PACS has even taken a senior couple on a date from Madisonville to Henderson for 70 cents a mile, and can now provide rides to Wednesday church services for shut-ins.

"We've never been able to do that before," he said.

About the only rides PACS cannot provide is taking children to and from school.

Months ago, PAC's buses, which used to be stationed at local senior centers, were removed and take to a central location in Princeton to service the region's transportation needs. Calls for rides would be dispatched from there, charging only for the loaded miles. They still deliver seniors to and from their respective centers, but cannot be used for the home-delivered meals program, per KyTC policy.

The new station in Crittenden County is located on U.S. 60 West at the former Taylor's service station. That location serves both Crittenden and Livingston counties, again, charging fees based on only the loaded miles. And groups of seniors can arrange for pickup at their respective centers for group outings, which are charged a $20 flat fee and mileage that can be split among riders.

For instance, a group of 12 seniors could take a Senior Shuttle to Princeton to Walmart and to eat for about $5 each.

"We are serving more people in Crittenden County now than when the vans were parked at the centers," Monroe said.

Some counties have benefactors that offer special programs for riders, giving free or reduced-cost rides. That, however, is not the case in less affluent counties like Crittenden and Livingston. That's where Monroe said the community needs to step up and help their growing senior populations.

"Forty-thousand people turn 65 every day in this country," Monroe said, explaining that even keeping state funding steady still results in a loss of services to seniors as their ranks increase.

Local women's co-op ministry hosting retreat this weekend

By ALEXA BLACK
STAFF WRITER

The Circle of Sisters, a Christian group based in Marion, once began as an outreach ministry for those who had experienced the loss of a loved one. It has since evolved, simultaneously dealing in grief share, divorce care and now working as a cooperative ministry as well. The women within the large circle come from different churches and denominational backgrounds as a result.

Though some of their beliefs may differ, they have all united as fellow Christians and hope others will pursue the same kind of fellowship they all share with one another.

"Our intent is not to steal other church members, but to strengthen each other's individual beliefs," said Donna Girten. "We help with each other's churches through this group and cooperate while working toward the same goals. We found women to be hungry for this. We wouldn't have had this without Grief-Share, and it has since morphed into something more than I ever thought."

The Circle consists of women from Crooked Creek, Central and Emmanuel Missionary Baptist churches, First Cumberland Presbyterian Church and Cave Springs and Freedom General Baptist churches. Everyone cooperates despite minor differences in beliefs, and the women have strengthened their bonds with one another, as well as their own faith.

Outside of Bible studies, they often send out notes of encouragement and go out of their way to directly assist those in need. Traveling is a regular for them, often going on mission trips and doing community service projects.

One example of their charitable work is helping newly released prisoners. Girten said that it's a growing concern.

When the prisoners are released, the majority are often made to wait a day until a bus arrives to take them elsewhere. Until then, they are left without food and other essentials.

The Circle of Sisters began putting together "survival bags" with food, sanitary products, blankets and scripture. The Circle desires to be an example to these people in the hope they will be influenced by the kindness and do the same for others.

These women hold their frequent meetings at Circle member Linda Morris' home in Greenwood Heights and welcome anyone wishing to join them.

The group often assembles prayer bags consisting of encouraging material and gifts for those struggling, whether sick or contending with tragedy or just personal struggles. Some recipients sing the Circle's praise, attesting to their newfound salvation or help in overcoming strife. The sisters agree they are always more than thrilled to hear back from these people who often comment on their surprise that they were impacted by complete strangers.

They find it very motivating to hear.

One of the sisters, Shannon Martin from Cave Springs General Baptist Church, has organized an upcoming women's retreat called "A Life Made Over." It will be located at her church on Cave Springs Road from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

"This retreat is more refreshing and relaxing than most," she said. "I think it will draw more people in that way rather than a very formal event would. Our women's retreat will be an event where you can hit the refresh button and clear your mind of all the garbage, get refueled and ready to face the world again. We want people to walk through our doors and leave really feeling the message."

Members say the Circle has been a group effort since Sugar Grove and Crooked Creek churches collaborated.

There will be games, surprise gifts, door prizes, makeup presentations and tutorials. The message they are trying to convey is that God wants to transform women's lives from the inside out. The event will begin with lessons, testimonies, sermons and a skit followed by a makeover. Girten will be giving her own testimony. Guest praise and worship leader Becky Zahrtre will be attending, accompanied by special singing by Yvette Martin. There will also be presentations from Martin and Doterra Essential Oils, partnered with Rachel Householder and Custom Blends Makeup.

"I'm so tired of seeing what's happening to women in the world - especially young women who buy into some of the lies - and what it's doing to our families and culture. I want to show them they don't have to live a life like that," Girten said. "This Circle we have is not about what your denomination is, it's about believing in Jesus Christ. We don't exclude people. It's not going to just be Emmanuel Church in heaven and it's not going to just be Cave Springs in heaven, it's going to be all of us there welcoming each other. Like family."

Distinguished alumni

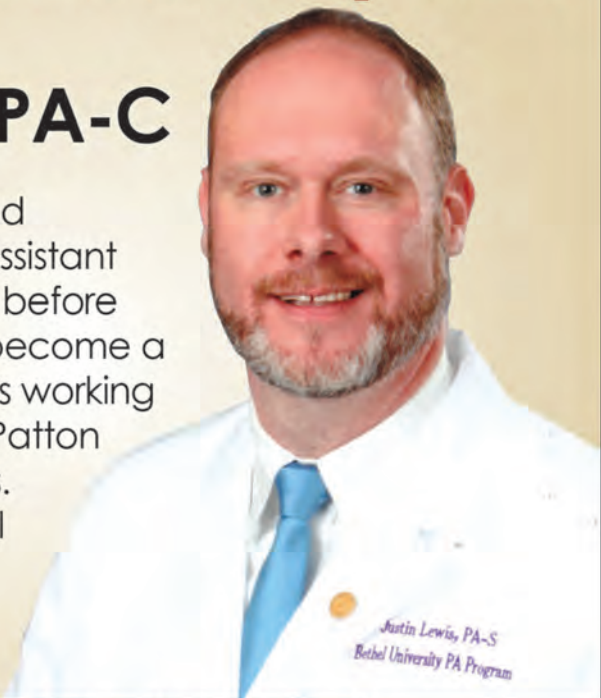

The seventh class of Crittenden County Distinguished Alumni was inducted Friday at a private luncheon. Inductees Bill Winstead (center) and Alan Stout (right) were honored by Superintendent of Schools Vince Clark as the 20th and 21st names added to the list of highly successful individuals who completed their compulsory education in Crittenden County Schools dating back to the late 1800s. Stout, a federal bankruptcy judge, is a 1974 graduate of Crittenden County High School. During his induction speech, he ran down the list of fellow recipients and influential teachers. "I'm very humbled by this," he said, full of emotion. The former Crittenden County Attorney, Stout is the second federal bankruptcy judge to be inducted in the last two years, and said his current job is the only judgeship to which he has aspired. Winstead, a music professor at the University of Cincinnati and bassoonist for the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, is a 1960 CCHS graduate. He recalled the difficulties of being what he termed a "misfit" as a teen pursuing a life in music. The bullying only served to encourage him to follow a dream that took him away from home. "I have tears in my eyes about a place I really, really wanted to leave," he said during his acceptance. "But things come full circle." After leaving Crittenden County, he achieved his goal of becoming a professional musician at the age of 45.

Museum visit offers something for everyone

Crittenden County Historical Museum has recently been blessed with a new metal roof. This project has been a goal for the board for over a year. As the old shingles were getting worn and were blowing off regularly, we were afraid the historic old church building would start to leak and possibly cause damage to the building and to the priceless items that are housed there. We are grateful to Randy Cowser's 1st Choice Construction & Handyman for a job quickly and well done, and feel proud to have the museum and its contents protected for many more years to come.

I would like to share just a few items from your county's past history. This church building is the oldest church building in Marion, built in 1881. The beautiful and one of a kind stained glass windows are original to the church. You have to see them to really appreciate their beauty and craftsmanship. The church history is that they were shipped from Germany for the construction of the church. The unique gas chandeliers, that were transformed into electric many years ago, still hang from the tall ceiling to light the interior of the church. Here are just a few of the many wonderful items we have on display.

The Lamb loom
Historic loom dates back to 1796. By Miss Ruby Dean If inanimate objects could only speak, the old Lamb loom at the Crittenden County Historical Society's Museum could tell us everything about itself we wish to know, as well as some hair-raising tales of pioneer days. One such tale might involve an Indian scalping, which is supposed to have occurred near the very house which held this loom. Since it can't speak for itself, we'll have to rely upon memory, hearsay and a few sketchy notes left by J. N. Dean, which do not concern the loom itself but which do date the house that contained it. When Era DeBoe fell heir to this loom, she always referred to it as the Lamb loom, although it came to her through her aunt, Mrs. Dora Wilson. Era's "Aunt Dora" was the widow of Quincy Wilson, whose mother was Malinda Lamb before her marriage to Dr. Lysander Wilson. Dr. Wilson's early death brought her and her young son Quincy back to her father's home, where both of them lived the remainder of their lives. Malinda's father was James Lamb from whose home this loom came. Thus, "the Lamb Loom." James Lamb's father was John Lamb, who came to Crittenden County in 1796 from South Carolina. He had previously had three stints of service in the American Revolution. He built a log house just west of the famed spring of limestone water known as Sugar Grove Spring. Later, about 1820, his son James built a log house a little father west. It was to this home, known for many years as the Quincy Wilson place, that Aunt Dora came as a bride about 1884. The loom, I have been told, was there at that time and had probably been there since the house was built. What pioneer family could survive without one? Whether this loom served the family of James Lamb's father also, we do not know. But we would venture a guess that it did. John's family moved to Illinois about 1820, and could easily have left the loom. It would, indeed, have been very cumbersome to move. If such is the case, we can dump it right into the eighteenth century, which will make it high on to 200 years old. This log house from which the loom came stood on the old Quincy Wilson place, formerly the James Lamb homestead. Now, let's use our imaginations and take a peek at some of those sturdy pioneer women who made use of this loom between the years 1796 and 1979: Comfort Bellah Lamb and her daughters, Catherine, Jenny, Elizabeth, Mary and Nancy; Polly Clark Lamb and her daughters, Malinda, Salina, Hulda and Betsy; Malinda Lamb Wilson and her daughter-in-law Dora Pickens Wilson. By the early 1950s the old Jamb Lamb house was closed part of the year, especially in winter. So the loom was moved to the J. N. Dean store at Deanwood for safe-keeping. While there, it was used by Joseph Gates Dean and Dorothy Dean Cook. Piney Fork speaker's lectern The lectern was removed from the tabernacle located next to the Piney Fork Cumberland Presbyterian Church when the historic old shed was taken down in the spring of 1970, due to damage caused by the heavy winter snow. The tabernacle shed was built in 1886. This lectern was made at this time, also constructed from lumber cut from the Henry Brown farm and hauled by oxen to the sawmill by Jim Bugg. It would be placed at the front of the new tabernacle. Also unique about this pulpit is that it has three podiums attached to it, the middle one for the evangelist who was holding the services, the one on the right was for the pastor of the church at the time, and the one on the left for the song leader. On the front is built a bench, this was for sinners to sit on that had come down to accept salvation after the invitation was given at the end of the sermon. Some of the greatest ministers of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church have delivered sermons at the Piney Fork annual camp meetings.

Alexander sidesaddle The ladies side saddle belonged to the Alexander family from Piney Fork. This sidesaddle was given to Flora Alexander by her father, James, in 1901. The leather for the saddle was produced from the William Patton Alexander tanning yard that was located by the Piney Creek not far from the Piney Fork church. Long skirts were the usual fashion at that time and riding astride in such attire was often impractical, awkward and could be viewed as immodest. However, women did ride horses and needed

McGee appointed to fill Riley's unexpired term

STAFF REPORT
After nearly 30 years there's a changing of the guard at the Livingston County Courthouse. Longtime County Attorney Billy Riley has retired and lifelong Livingston resident Raymond "Dykie" McGee has been appointed to fill the unexpired term. Riley announced his plans in August and his retirement was effective Sunday. He was the county attorney for 27 years. McGee, 46, has spent the last 10 years as first assistant to McCracken County Commonwealth Attorney Dan Boaz. McGee was formerly in private practice in Smithland with his father, Bill McGee, and brother, Billy McGee. He left private practice when he became assistant commonwealth attorney in Paducah. A 1989 graduate of Livingston Central High School, McGee earned an undergraduate degree from Centre College in Danville, Ky. and a law degree from Mississippi College. Riley's term as county attorney was set to expire in 2018; therefore, there will be a primary and general election next year. McGee says he plans on seeking the Democratic nomination. Smithland attorney Allen Wilson has announced that he will seek the GOP nomination. McGee says he has extensive courtroom experience as a private attorney and prosecutor, having handled 40 homicide cases as assistant commonwealth attorney and served at more than 100 jury trials as a prosecutor or defense attorney. McGee has served as special prosecutor in a number of high profile cases throughout western Kentucky, including some in Crittenden County. He is married and has two children. His wife, Laura, is an elementary school teacher. They reside in Grand Rivers.

to be able to control their own animals, so there was a need for a saddle designed to allow both control of the horse and modesty for the rider.

Martha Clift Lowry spinning wheel The fireside spinning wheeler was used by Martha Ann Lowry to spin her wool. She used the spinning wheel in the early 1900s when she and her family lived in the Shady Grove area. The spinning wheel was usually always placed closed to the fireplace as the winter months were a good time to catch up on the spinning of wool.

William Irvin Stewart oxen yoke The old oxen yoke made by William Stewart is over 200 years old. The old Stewart farm is located some seven miles east of Marion off of Ky. 120. William was a farmer, carpenter, expert rifleman, gunsmith, blacksmith and woodworker and was a highly thought of citizen of the Sugar Grove community. The Stewart family was among some of the early pioneers of our county.

Webster teacher arrested for child porn possession
STAFF REPORT
A middle school teacher in Webster County was arrested Monday and jailed after child pornography was found on her cell phone. According to Kentucky State Police, Lucia C. Jenkins, 48, of Providence was taken into custody just before 9:30 p.m. Monday. Jenkins, a Webster County Middle School teacher, was charged with four counts of possessing or viewing matter portraying a sexual performance of a minor. She was lodged in Webster County Detention Center.

Jenkins

The arrest came as a result of an ongoing death investigation. According to a KSP news release, Master Trooper William C. Braden II began assisting the Webster County coroner with a case on Sept. 13, and during the course of the investigation, a search warrant on a cellular device belonging to Jenkins revealed several photographs that depicted a minor in a sexual act. The investigation is ongoing by Braden and the coroner's office.

Life in Christ takes Kentucky blessing to ravage Texas community

BY ALEXA BLACK
PRESS REPORTER

When category 4 Hurricane Harvey left the Gulf of Mexico and ripped through Texas, it was not long until many rushed in to help those in danger and assist the devastated communities.

Harvey began Aug. 17 as a tropical storm in the Gulf of Mexico. The storm eventually upgraded to a Category 4 hurricane Aug. 25, with winds of up to 130 mph. Harvey is the first Category 4 hurricane to make landfall in the United States since Hurricane Charley in 2004.

Many are still struggling to overcome the result of this natural disaster. Thousands are still residing in shelters, and more than 130,000 properties were damaged. In some of the most flood-prone areas, persistent rains and winds pummeled the neighborhoods and highways.

One can only be thankful for the first responders risking their lives to save others, as well as the many civilians who stepped up to do the same. Outside of the ones directly aiding those in need, many across the nation have put forth their best into relief efforts, whether donating money or supplies. Life in Christ Church, located in Marion and pastored by Chris McDonald, corresponded with the Portland Christian Center (PCC) located in Portland, Texas with intentions of helping the community. Portland is located right across the bay from Corpus Christi and was dealt a significant amount of damage, though it was on the weaker side of the storm.

Life in Christ then announced that the church was accepting donations to begin helping the many flood victims. The outpouring of support that followed was even greater than requested. The church collected food, bottled drinks, sanitary supplies and a variety of other items as per request of PCC. McDonald says the congregation was overwhelmed and very grateful for all the donations from individuals and businesses. They had packages travel all the way from Chicago, Ill., Newburgh Ind., Owensboro and many other places.

"It was awesome to see how quickly the community got together to help Texas out in this difficult time," McDonald said. "When something like this happens, people do want to help. They just want to know how. Once you give them an avenue, people are always happy to pitch in and do what they can."

The church is eternally thankful for the monetary donations from people in the area, who helped them make the trip happen in the first place. After nearly exceeding their initial goal, Pastor McDonald, Tony Snyder, Zeke Berg and Chris Penn all loaded up two 26-foot trucks full of supplies and headed to south Texas. Not having yet made it out of the state, they were met with minor vehicular trouble just hours into their trip. After taking measures to fix the problem, the trip to Texas commenced again and went smoothly thereafter. McDonald said their problems were small compared to the many Texans they were traveling to help, so it was of no bother to the group. After the small hurdle, they eventually arrived in Texas.

He describes the damage done to the Portland community, saying there were wads of metal strewn throughout the town. A majority of the light poles were destroyed, and those which stayed intact were toppled to the ground. There were holes in many buildings where debris had been tossed into them and major wind damage dealt to everything else. He compared it to the results of a tornado, saying that one house would be demolished and their neighbors' left untouched.

Portland Christian Center itself had mild damage, which allowed it to remain operable and able to help the surrounding communities less fortunate than Portland. Refugio however, was categorized as one of these areas affected greatly by Harvey. McDonald says that judging from driving through the small city, it appeared to be destroyed. The group pondered traveling over to Rockport, which was one of the major areas Harvey had hit. They decided against it due to all the crews still working, as it was advised for everyone except safety responders to avoid the area.

Upon arrival, PCC pastors Jim and Debbie Harris eagerly greeted them with open arms, not expecting the amount of goods Life in Christ was delivering to them. It was a newly built church in which most of the provisions were brought to, and due to the influx of donations, they were forced to also use their former building for backup storage.

Church members there went through the process of inspecting the goods and distributing them to the surrounding areas in dire need. McDonald said after his trip back to Kentucky, the coordinator in Texas contacted him and said word was traveling far and wide about PCC's efforts. As a result of that, many others were now starting to get involved and do the same.

One thing is for certain, when things of this nature happen, a lot of the current political uproar that has been dividing our country tends to fall away, say those who organized the effort. People are faced with something greater and called upon to help out their neighbors, despite opposing beliefs. One can only hope that regardless of how much distress the country finds itself in, when tragedy or disaster strikes, the nation will always stand up and help their fellow Americans in need, McDonald said.

Pertussis vaccine recommended

The Department of Public Health and Wellness is seeing a dramatic spike in whooping cough (pertussis) cases in infants one year of age and younger.

"It is vitally important for infants to get their immunizations against whooping cough on schedule," said Public Health and Wellness director Dr. Sarah Moyer in a news release. "In children this age, the disease can be very serious and even deadly."In infants, the cough can be minimal or non-existent. Infants may also display apnea, a pause in their breathing pattern, and in some cases may even turn blue."

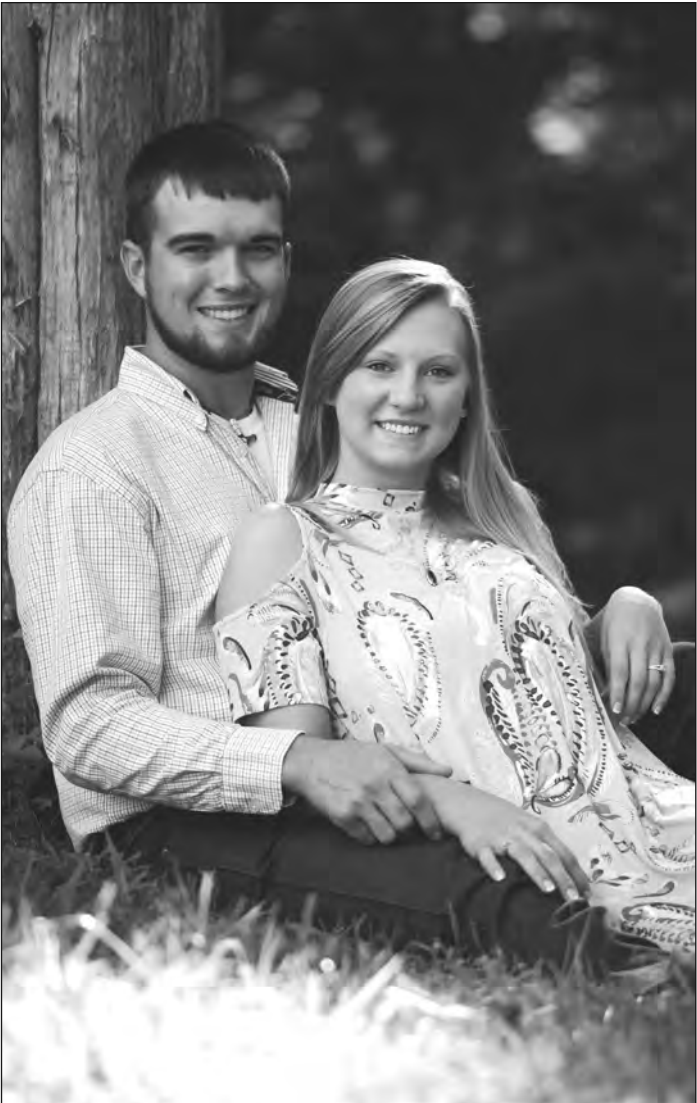

The childhood vaccine is called DTaP. The whooping cough booster vaccine for adolescents and adults is called Tdap. Both DTaP and Tdap protect against whooping cough, tetanus and diphtheria.

The Department of Public Health and Wellness advises parents and physicians that infants should receive a series of DTaP immunizations at ages 2, 4, and 6 months, with boosters at ages 15-18 months and at 4-6 years. Children should then get a single dose of Tdap vaccine at 11 to 12 years of age. Pregnant women should receive a single dose of Tdap during every pregnancy, preferably at 27 through 36 weeks.

Parents of infants and all people who live with an infant or who provide care to an infant should also be immunized against whooping cough. For more information, contact the Department of Public Health and Wellness at (502) 574-6520

Water is Life theme of conservation contest

There are some who say that clean, fresh water is the next oil; that it will soon be our most rare and valuable resource. Of all the water on our big blue planet, only 2.5% comes to us as fresh water for use by the entire world's populations of people, plants and animals. Many everyday activities can negatively affect this resource, from polluted runoff, animal waste, trash and littering, to wasteful habits.

Students are invited to express the connections between good water and healthy living through the Jim Claypool Art Contest and the Conservation Writing Contest. Kentucky Farm Bureau and the Kentucky Association of Conservation Districts are the co-sponsors of the two contests titled "Water is Life".

The Art Contest is open to elementary students. Middle and high school students may enter. A top county prize includes $100 and a conservation polo shirt. The top state prize is $250 and a personalized certificate. Entries must be delivered to the Crittenden County Conservation District office, 118 East Bellville Street, Marion, up to 4 p.m., Nov. 30.

The art, English and agriculture departments at the public schools have received a newspaper tabloid with complete rules, helpful hints and resource information. These can also be found at conservation.ky.gov, under the Pages/Art and Writing Contest tab.

Information and assistance is also available at the Crittenden County Conservation District Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday or at (270) 965-3921, ext. 3.

Rockets make easy homecoming work of Fulton

Former players present Starnes with rocking chair

STAFF REPORT

On a night when dozens of former players came to celebrate Rocket football coach Al Starnes' 27th and final season, the longtime skipper got an easy Class A First District win as Crittenden blasted Fulton City 54-6.

The homecoming game was over early as the Rockets scored five times in the first period and marched ahead with an impressive showing over the winless Bulldogs.

Junior quarterback Hunter Boone threw four TD passes in the first half and the Rockets rushed for three more en route to a 48-0 lead at the break.

From there, the reserves tacked on another touchdown as backup QB freshman Braxton Winders threw a scoring pass to classmate Tyler Boone in the third period. Fulton managed to avoid the shutout with a long touchdown run in the last period.

Crittenden's defense stymied the Dogs. Fulton had minus-24 yards of offense in the first two periods. Hunter Jones blocked a punt and Cody Belt recovered a Fulton fumble. Senior defensive end Adam Beavers had seven solo tackles in the first half and five of them were behind the line of scrimmage.

Belt scored three TDs – two on passes from Boone and one on the ground.

About 100 former players came to celebrate Starnes' career at Crittenden. He was presented with a rocking chair signed by former and present players and supporters.

Crittenden hosts Ballard Memorial this week in a non-district game. Ballard is 1-5 overall after earning its first win last week against Webster County. The Bombers may be one of the best teams in all of Class 2A with just one win, said Starnes. They have speed and the quarterback throws very well.

MS football wins 2nd straight

Crittenden County Middle School's football team beat Browning Springs at home last week to improve to 3-4 on the season. It was the team's second straight win and third in four games. The Rockets got a huge effort from Preston Morgeson who had 246 all-purpose yards and on defense had 10 tackles and an interception. He scored all of CCMS's touchdowns in a 28-12 win at home over the Bears.

The Rockets also won the developmental game 20-0 as QB Luke Crider passed for two touchdowns and 115 yards.

Crittenden closed out its season Tuesday night with a home game against Caldwell County. Results were not available at press time.

V-ball coach pleased by effort

Despite a five-set loss last week at home against Hopkins Central, Crittenden County volleyball coach Cara Hunt was upbeat about her team's performance.

The Lady Rockets (3-11) haven't had a great season record-wise while Hopkins Central ranks among the region's best teams with a 13-10 record. CCHS took the Lady Storm to the wire before losing 25-22, 18-25, 17-25, 25-23, 15-13 at Rocket Arena on Tuesday, Sept. 26.

"Kenlee (Perryman) was a powerhouse on the net and serving," the coach said. "All of the girls did a great job making adjustments between points in order to help the team get out of certain situations. We have been working on getting subs in for the starters to help them get a break every so often. I had the opportunity to use that this evening and each sub came in and did the job asked of them. Tonight really was a team effort."

Kyron Hicks scored 13 points on serves and 14 assists and Perryman had 15 kills and six blocked shots.

"Despite the loss, I am really proud of the girls for taking direction in between points and for continuing to fight during all five sets. This is the level that we need to play at to come out on top next week in our district games," Hunt said.

The volleyball district tournament will start Oct. 16 and will be played at Livingston Central.

Soccer ends regular season

Crittenden County ended its soccer season Monday with a 10-0 loss at Caldwell County. The Lady Rockets finish 4-10. Caldwell is 10-8.

Crittenden County is hosting this year's Fifth District Soccer Tournament. The games will be played at Marion-Crittenden County Park next week. Crittenden plays Lyon County Monday in the opening round and the winner will play Trigg County for the championship.

Brian Berry bagged this nice 9-point buck Sunday afternoon. It had a 19-inch spread and 10-inch back tines. He also got the coyote on the same stand. The annual Crittenden Outdoors hunting magazine will be printed next week and distributed throughout the area. It will include a feature on Berry and his wife Kaitlyn, who also harvested a nice buck early this season.

Brodi Sutton bagged a nice 8-point buck last week with her bow. It was her first buck using archery equipment.

Woman breaks SEC radio barrier

After he was asked about joining Christi Thomas on the two-hour Countdown to Kick-off on the UK Radio Network, former Kentucky quarter-back Freddie Maggard wasn't sure what to expect.

He had never met her and knew she would be the first female to host a pregame radio show for any Southeastern Conference football program if the idea worked.

Larry Vaught
UK Sports Columnist

Vaught's Views

"We had a lunch meeting (about three years ago) with the JMI folks to discuss the possibility of doing a pregame show," said Maggard. "Her preparation and organization impressed me. She runs the show, there is no doubting that. Plus, growing up the daughter of a defensive coordinator, her X and O knowledge is at a high level."

That's obvious on the Countdown to Kickoff that will air live again Saturday in front of the Nutter Field House outside Gate 1 of Kroger Field near the Coke Fan Zone (for away games the show airs from various Kroger stores in Lexington).

Thomas had done plenty of TV work but no radio when she was approached about hosting the pregame show with Maggard. She was as apprehensive as Maggard going into their lunch meeting.

"After Freddie and I had lunch, I knew we had hit it off. I knew we could be good," she said. "Nobody does more homework or works harder at understanding football than Freddie. I just set him up and let him go. He has been that good."

"His military background (in the National Guard) and being a quarterback, he is methodical and prepared. Sometimes in the media we are not as organized as we should be. But we both need structure to function. We can fly by the seat of our pants but we like to be prepared. He has great ideas on ways to energize the show. We spend all week talking about what to say."

Thomas jokes that in another life she was meant to be a boy and a football linebacker. Her father was defensive coordinator at Taylor County High School in Campbellsville. When Campbellsville University started football in 1987, her dad coached there.

"I spent all my years growing up as a water girl for the football team," Thomas said. "I spent a lot of time in the football locker room, sideline, huddles, breaking down film with my dad. I always loved college football. Me getting into sports and athletics was just natural."

She didn't want a male-dominated audience to see her on air and wonder "who is this dumb blonde" doing sports. Instead, she wanted them to talk about how well she knew what she was doing.

"A female in this industry can lose credibility in a minute," she said. "There was a time where stations never tried to implement any sex appeal. You had to know your stuff. Then it evolved to having a pretty face on the sideline and it didn't matter what she knew. Now they want the best of both."

Thomas won't settle for second best. Maggard says she worries constantly about fans and creating a show that fans will like and share ownership of every time.

"Want to tick her off? Say, 'Well that's the way we've always done it.' That don't fly with Christi Thomas," Maggard said. "If any idea or concept isn't best or better for the listener, she wants no part of it. She's a UK fan. We work very hard to liven up the broadcast to enlighten, engage and entertain the listeners. Status quo is not an acceptable answer for her."

So just how intense is she? "I'll put it nicely. She is intense, competitive and accepts nothing but the best from all involved in the broadcast. So yes, she's meaner than a Copperhead (snake)," Maggard said.

Thomas prefers to call it "fiercely loyal" to each other.

"When we first met for lunch three seasons ago, I may or may not every now or then drop a few choice words when they were needed. After Freddie picked his jaw up off floor ... he got it," Thomas laughed and said. "But he is married to a strong-willed woman. He felt right at home with me."

He did, and still does. Maggard still wonders why Thomas does not get more credit for being the first female host of a network football pregame radio show in the SEC.

"That's huge. My partner is crazy smart and excellent at her job. She makes my role easy," Maggard said. "She's simply the best."

Guade Green

If freshman point guard Guade Green had any doubts about whether Kentucky would be the right spot for him, they disappeared after an in-home visit from UK coach John Calipari last year.

"He came into my home and was really confident. Once I got to see that, I thought, 'It can't get no better than Kentucky.' He looked eye-to-eye more (at me) than any other coach," Green said. "I really had no choice but to come here. Everybody around me here makes me feel better. It's the perfect spot for me."

He has his own bit of Philadelphia swag — much like former UK point guard Tyler Ulis did from his high school career in Chicago.

If the game is on the line, Green will want the ball in his hands this season.

"We can run pick and roll and I will get my shot. I will take it myself — or get it to a teammate if he's open. Guys have jobs to do and I will do mine," Green said.

So will Kentucky win a national title this year?

"We will see," he said. "For now, let's just leave it that way."

Pitino's downfall

While some celebrated the shocking fall of former Kentucky coach Rick Pitino for his misdeeds at Louisville, I did not. Instead, I found it sad that a man who did so much to restore credibility to Kentucky basketball has fallen this far.

I shared my feelings in a column on www.lex18.com that generated a lot of response. Here is one I really liked from UK fan Terry Hall of Louisville, a Shelby County High School teammate of former Cats Mike Casey and Bill Busey.

"Read your story, and although I didn't know him my feelings pretty much reflect yours," Hall wrote in an email. "When Eddie Sutton was fired my two pie in the sky picks were Rick and Pat Riley, never thinking we could get either."

"I was driving in Indy when I heard about the hire. It was one of the happiest days of my life. It was never the same for me after he left and the last couple of years with Tubby (Smith) turned me toward football. Cal does a great job doing what he does but this players first, one and done NBA development deal is not my thing."

Also count me as one who believes Louisville made the right choice — and really only choice it could have — by naming David Padgett head coach. Why rush to take the best of coaches without jobs now rather than wait until this season ends and then be able to gauge real interest in what coaches with jobs might even consider Louisville? Now next year it would only make sense to make a clean break and have a new coach, but for now Padgett's choice is one I can understand.

Mock NBA draft

The 2017-18 season hasn't started but ESPN has already come out with a mock 2019 NBA Draft projection.

Recent UK commit Immanuel Quickley is No. 6 overall on Jonathan Givony's mock draft list with three UK sophomores — Kevin Knox (12), P.J. Washington (16) and Jarred Vanderbilt (18) — all in the top 20. Junior Sacha Killeva-Jones is projected at No. 28. That would give UK five first-round picks in 2019.

As of today, Hamidou Diallo and Nick Richards are both projected as 2018 first-round picks.

Just remember a lot will change by June, as we found out late last week when UK announced Vanderbilt would miss about three months due to a foot injury.

Anemic offense

Kentucky coach Mark Stoops, and UK fans, were not overjoyed with the 24-20 win over Eastern Michigan. Yet it does put UK at 4-1 going into this week's game with Missouri.

Kentucky's anemic offense had five three-and-outs on eight second-half possessions and the offensive line was shredded by the Eastern Michigan defense. However, there's still reason for optimism going forward.

Missouri has been outscored 86-17 the last two weeks and has allowed 31 or more points in every game this year. Tennessee lost 41-0 at home to Georgia last week. Vanderbilt has given up 97 points the last two weeks in losses to Alabama and Florida. Mississippi State after a then stunning 37-7 pounding of LSU has been outscored 80-13 in losses to Georgia and Auburn. And Mississippi got crushed 66-3 by Alabama Saturday.

"We have a lot of stuff to fix. We can never argue about a win and we can never be mad about a win," Kentucky quarterback Stephen Johnson said after the Eastern Michigan game. "We definitely know we have a lot of stuff to fix, so we cannot put ourselves in those situations when it comes down to it. But we also know if we get some things fixed, we still have a chance to win a lot of games."

Quote of the Week

"He is very humble. He just does his work and that is what makes him so good. He just focuses on what he is doing. He lets his play do his talking," UK offensive lineman Drake Jackson on kicker Austin MacGinnis.

brary. "Everyone in the library and on the book route has always been so great. I loved every aspect of it, especially watching how excited the kids were about getting on the Bookmobile and picking out their own books."

Brock said that although retirement is often thought of as a time of respite, she will be doing anything but resting. Outside of being able to delve into her hobbies occasionally, she will now have more time to spend with her husband Bob and soon-to-be six grandchildren – all boys. Brock will be doing some traveling as well, though she doesn't have anything specific planned as she favors spontaneity.

Being the Bookmobile driver provided Brock many opportunities of reuniting with friends and acquaintances of all ages.

"On my routes I got to see three generations worth. People I grew up with, their children and grandchildren.

That was my favorite part about the job, getting to reunite with old classmates and students I taught," Brock recalls.

Smith is excited to start the job and looks forward to the experience. She worked closely with Brock for the last couple weeks in order to get familiar with the job and route itself. In the short amount of time they worked together, she has been able to meet and bond with some of the people Brock considers dear.

Though Smith worked in the Webster County Library, this is her first time to drive the Bookmobile and she is looking forward to it as much as Brock is her retirement.

"I was in the medical field for many years, and now I'm getting to do something I've always wanted to do. I'm looking forward to meeting people that I haven't had the opportunity to meet," Smith said.

"In the medical field I always knew so many people's names, but I never personally knew them. But now, with this job, I will get to meet and learn about people that I can make a relationship with. I hope to do that half as well as Nancy."

erating on an expired license.

"Once that happened, drivers – accustomed to receiving notices – did not realize their licenses had lapsed," the senator said of ceasing renewal notices. "It happened to me because I did not get a reminder postcard. I did not know my license had expired until I was using it for identification purposes and it was pointed out to me."

Gov. Matt Bevin made the decision last year, without a directive from the Kentucky legislature, to discontinue mailing driver license renewal notices to save the state funds, estimated by officials from the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet at about $250,000 annually.

"The intent to save money was good," said Ridley. "However, it might have been more effective to continue to mail notices, while at the same time collecting e-mail addresses. We could have eventually phased out mailed reminders and replaced postcards with e-mail notices."

Crittenden Circuit Clerk Melissa Guill said there have been several complaints from residents in Crittenden County regarding the notices no longer being sent out by the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet (KyTC). The notices were not generated locally.

"When the reminder cards were being sent out, I would receive a printed report from (KyTC) monthly with the names of residents of Crittenden County who had expired licenses," Guill explained. "I would send letters or even call those individuals and let them know their licenses expired."

In all of 2016, there were 30 such cases in the local court system and 5,677 statewide, according to Guill. Through the first nine months of 2017, there have been 25 cases in Crittenden County and 6,630 statewide.

Without help from KyTC, Guill is trying to remind local drivers about their renewals.

"Now I try every effort – Facebook, The Crittenden Press and word of mouth – to remind everyone to check the expiration date on your license. Another circuit clerk said she is advising her residents of her county to check their license on their birthday. If you do this then you will be looking at your license every year."

Ridley's bill, Bill Request

187, directs that notices be sent by either mail or e-mail at least 45 days prior to the expiration date of any instruction permit, operator's license, or personal identification card issued by the Transportation Cabinet. Residents can opt out of receiving notifications.

Renewal dates are usually every four years in the driver's birth month. The renewal fee is $20. If the license has expired for longer than a year, both a written and vision test are required.

Along with sending a notice to drivers, Ridley's legislation also directs the cabinet to put into place a mechanism for individuals to provide an email address to receive notifications or to opt out of receiving them.

Although this bill would reinstate sending notices to drivers, a failure to receive a renewal notice would not constitute a defense for failure to renew an expired license or permit.

The Kentucky General Assembly may consider BR 187 when it reconvenes in January for the 2018 legislative session.

going to be missed."

Merrick's announcement came on the same day that Nancy Brock retired as the Bookmobile driver and librarian. Susan Smith has taken over that role.

Merrick recently became a published author and plans to pursue that career. She also cited family health and personal reasons. Her husband Todd will be retiring from the school system in November.

The board has already begun its search for a new director and will begin advertising the position next week. In fact, a search committee is scheduled to meet at noon today at the library to begin the process.
