Investigation into jail funds dropped

According to a spokesman with the Kentucky State Police, the agency's probe into the potential misuse of funds at Crittenden County Detention Center under former Jailer Rickey Riley has been dropped.

"The investigation was halted before it was completed due to Mr. Riley's death," said Trooper Stu Recke with the Madisonville state police post. "No further action will be taken by the KSP."

Riley, who retired from the detention center in August 2--013 citing health reasons, died of natural causes Aug. 28.

The investigation started following the June 30 release of an audit from Kentucky Auditor Adam Edelen's office that examined the jail and fiscal court during the 2013 fiscal year.

Public flu shot clinic Monday; immunization encouraged

STAFF REPORT

Autumn means falling leaves and shorter, colder days ahead. Unfortunately, those colder days often lead to sneezing, sore throats and other symptoms associated with the flu. To prevent acquiring the virus, local health officials are encouraging the public to get the seasonal vaccine.

Crittenden County Health Department will offer a flu shot clinic from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday at its office located off Industrial Drive in Marion. The seasonal flu vaccine and H1N1 will be combined into one shot.

Medicaid, Medicare and most insurances can be billed, leaving no cost to the patient.

For those without insurance, the vaccine will cost $27.

Gov. Steve Beshear and First Lady Jane Beshear have already had their immunizations and are also encouraging fellow Kentuckians to do the same.

"I especially encourage parents and school-aged children to get flu shots," said the First Lady. "The flu is an easily transmitted virus and this vaccine will help prevent missed sick days at school and work, creating healthier homes and classrooms."

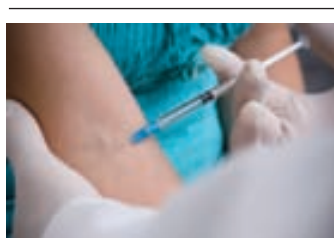

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the flu vaccine works by causing antibodies to develop in the body about two weeks after an individual receives a vaccination. These antibodies then provide protection against the live virus.

Besides the traditional flu shot, in many cases, a nasal vaccine spray can also be used in place of the needle.

Each year's flu vaccine protects against the influenza viruses that research shows will be most common during the upcoming season.

According to Allison Beshear, public health director of the Pennyriple District Health Department, it is recommended that individuals 6 months and older receive an annual flu shot. People who should especially receive the flu vaccine, because they may be at higher risk for complications or negative conse-

Pink, halftime rap concert to make Friday's football game no ordinary show

STAFF REPORT

True blue Rocket fans are asked to show their school spirit by wearing pink attire and bling to Friday night's game against the Murray Tigers, which will feature a short halftime concert with an Emmy-nominated rap artist and other surprises.

The annual Pink Out Game is staged in honor of local breast cancer survivors. Crittenden County High School recognizes National Breast Cancer Awareness Month in October each year with the Pink Out Game. It has become especially important to local fans because head football coach Al Starnes' wife, Angela, is a breast cancer survivor. She is also the school athletic director.

There will be a pregame tailgate party, many breast cancer survivors will be recognized before the game, and there will be a hospitality tent for them in the end zone.

Emmy-nominated rapper T.O.N.E.-z (pronounced "tones") will help cheer on the Rockets and perform during intermission. The musician and actor's new album, "Fog of War," debuted Sept. 23.

The rapper received an Emmy nomination for "Long Hard Times to Come," which is well known as the theme song to FX's "Justified" television series. T.O.N.E.-z is also seen as a recurring char-

Though Crittenden County Economic Development Corp. is scaling back its operations for financial reasons, the Ed-Tech Training Center off Industrial Drive in Marion will remain open.

CCEDC scaling back expenses, cuts position

STAFF REPORT

Local leaders have taken a step back in order to look toward the community's economic future.

For the first time in almost 20 years, Marion and Crittenden County will not have a person in charge of its economic development efforts. Citing difficult financial times, Crittenden County Economic Development Corp. (CCEDC) recently decided to eliminate its executive director's position.

Terry Bunnell, president of The Peoples Bank in Marion and chairman of the economic development group, said current Executive Director Jeremy Wheeler will continue in that capacity until the end of the month. Afterward, the group will retain only part-time clerical help to handle calls and maintain the Marion Ed-Tech Training Center in Industrial Park South, which is headquarters for the CCEDC.

Incorporated in 1995, the CCEDC got off to a tough start when its first two choices to lead the group turned down the job. It finally landed its first director in November 1996 when Kevin Scheille of Jackson, Tenn., was hired. Wheeler is the fifth

CryptoWall shows no mercy but fails to connive $750, break will

Late last month, when I brought up my email, I found a disturbing message from CryptoWall that took up my entire screen: "Your documents have been encrypted. You will no longer be able to open them, look at them or work with them. Don't waste your time searching the Web, trying to clean it out. We are the only ones who can remove the encryption. Unless you contact us, you will lose your valuable files forever." Below that, they listed several websites (for my convenience!) where I could go and receive instructions - should I opt to pay the price of $750!"

I was sick. I had stored my work on that computer for more than five years. All my writing, plus my photographs, were in those files. Then, I remembered my external hard drive and crossed my fingers. I had used it to back up my files every week or so. Quickly, I opened it. There they were, all 187 of them, not counting my pictures. I took a deep breath, clicked on one and felt my heart sink even deeper. They were encrypted, too. I had failed to unplug it the last time. The CryptoWall warriors had no mercy.

Before I pushed the panic button, I called my Internet provider. A nice lady listened to my plea for help.

"I'm a writer. I need my files. I thought I had backed them up, but they're gone, too," I said.

Remaining professional, she calmed my nerves with her steady, convincing voice.

"Don't worry. This happens every day. We will clean it out."

Of course, that statement

Power of pink helping save women’s lives

Pink.

It’s more than just a color; it’s become a universal symbol of awareness of a disease that will affect 1 in 8 women in this nation.

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month. We are now nine days into an entire month dedicated to raising the public’s consciousness about the most prevalent cancer among women, and pink is everywhere.

It’s become Pinktober. There are, of course, the pink ribbons, but there are also pink bracelets, pink clothes, buildings draped in pink lights, professional sports stadiums and arenas inundated by pink and even pink newsprint from which to read your daily news.

There are no bounds to what can be found in pink this month. In fact, school officials, boosters and coaches are asking that Rocket Stadium be awash in a sea of the color for this Friday’s Pink Out game against Murray. If you’re going to support the home team, you’d better have on pink, because the players on the field will.

Since pink ribbons were first associated with breast cancer awareness in 1991, the shade has grown to be so much more than a mere symbol. Pink offers hope. Pink offers comfort. Pink is both feminine and tough. Pink says, we will not stand idly by and let the disease indiscriminately claim another mother, daughter, sister, aunt, nieces or grandmother without a fight.

Though according to the American Cancer Society, the lifetime probability of a woman developing breast cancer is higher than any other cancer besides prostate cancer in men, it’s a beatable disease.

Just under 90 percent of women with breast cancer will survive five years or more after diagnosis, and there are currently about 3 million of those survivors in the United States.

That outlook for those stricken with the disease is much better than 23 years ago when the Susan G. Komen Foundation first handed out pink ribbons to participants in a New York City race for breast cancer survivors.

Pink is a big part of that brighter future. The campaign of breast cancer awareness is one of the cleverest marketing schemes in history. There is hardly a person who does not recognize the hue pink or month of October as associated with breast cancer awareness.

Because of that, more women recognize that early detection is the key to beating the disease. Because of that, more women recognize that the detection of breast cancer does not automatically mean a mastectomy. Because of that, more women recognize that should that mastectomy become necessary, advances in reconstructive surgery can leave a woman with her dignity intact.

Pink; it’s certainly a powerful color.

came with a modest clean-out charge, one I would be willing to pay.

Then, I asked her my husband’s question.

“Where in the world did this come from in the first place?”

“From a foreign country,” she replied. “It’s a real problem for everybody.”

In the background, I heard him as he continued his scenario about what he would do if he could get his hands on them. It made him feel better, but it didn’t change anything.

Then, she asked me to bring up certain screens and enter groups of numbers. She explained that I was giving her permission to enter my computer and fix the problem. After a couple of tries, I stared at the screen in disbelief. I had lost total control of my mouse. She was moving it around from somewhere in Wisconsin!

“I’ll take it from here,” she said. “In four to six hours, you’ll get a note from me telling you the cleanup is over.”

I breathed a sigh of relief. I could forget about the problem until later that day, knowing that it was being taken care of.

Still, ever so often that morning, I stepped in for a peek. Things were moving at record speed. Numbers were rolling, cleanup programs were doing their thing. I felt sure my computer would survive the attack and end up as good as new.

Then, around noon, I found everything on the screen had stopped. Maybe the diligent lady had gone to lunch. I waited an hour before checking in again. She was back! Her mouse was moving around my screen again. Not only did she have control of a big part of my life, I knew when and if she was doing her job, too. I felt like smiling for the first time that day. With that kind of technology, how could I lose?

I explained that we had errands to run that afternoon. I left home with a sense of optimism. Kind of like having a housekeeper come in for the day. Go out, have a good time with the realization of coming home later that day to a clean house. Only the lady who was cleaning my computer wasn’t the same as the real lady who cleaned my windows. She was like an invisible ghost on a mission in cyberspace.

When we returned later in the day, the movement on my screen had stopped again. I called her number and was immediately connected to my technician.

“We tried to call you. Our connection was dropped. We need to start the whole process over.”

By bedtime, I had a headache and the mouse on the other end was prowling around the screen like he was looking for some cheese.

At noon, the next day, I called her again. So far, they hadn’t been able to decrypt my computer, but they were trying other programs. By supper time, I received her closing note.

“You can use your computer now.”

I was elated. I sat down and clicked on my corrupted Word files. I almost cried. They were still encrypted. Another technician answered my next call.

“We couldn’t remove it,” he said. “The only way you can get them back is to pay the $750 ransom.”

Now, I had some insight on how it felt to have a loved one kidnapped. If I had the extra money, I would have paid it without another thought, in hopes of getting my precious files restored. Also, I knew if I paid, not only would it hurt my pocketbook, I would be enabling CryptoWall to live to strike again.

As it was, I refused to let them win. Instead, I held my chin up, took my losses like a woman, and started all over again.

person to lead the organization, but the group’s work has been stymied in recent years due to less than adequate funding.

The group’s first yearly budget in 1996 included $70,000 in spending. Its annual revenue grew to more than $90,000 at one point, but support waned in the early 2000s when its second executive director, Steve Davidson, embezzled several thousands of dollars from the economic development group’s bank account. Most of that money had been repaid over the years as part of a plea agreement by Davidson. The funds were invested, and that money has largely bankrolled the operation for the past 10 years.

The group recently withdrew the last of its savings to pay operating expenses, and it had just more than $9,000 on hand at the end of last month.

At one time not long ago, the CCEDC spent about $9,000 per month to operate.

When Wheeler was hired 26 months ago, he trimmed that to about $4,000 a month. But tough times have continued to chase the group as private investors have dropped or cut back their financial support. Farmers Bank & Trust Co., the City of Marion, Crittenden Fiscal Court and The Peoples Bank are the group’s largest investors, making up $35,000 of the its revenue.

The CCEDC owns property at Industrial Park North where the Tyson Foods chicken broilers used to be on the north side of Marion. Debt on that $300,000 loan through the Kentucky Cabinet for Economic Development is $6,000 annually. To date, the CCEDC has paid nothing on the principal.

Community leaders say there is still a need for some form of local economic development, but it may look different in the future. Trends in economic development have gone from chasing smokestacks 25 or 30 years ago to retention and workforce development, say professionals working in the field. The jobs

“I think there is still a role for us in this community. We’re going to take some time and examine what that might look like moving forward.”

Crittenden County Economic Development Corp. chairman on the organization’s decision to drop its executive director position in order to save money market has changed dramatically in Marion over the past 25 years. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, 26 percent of Crittenden County’s workforce was employed in the manufacturing sector in 1990. That figure dropped to 18 percent by 2000 and in 2012 it was down to 13 percent.

When the CCEDC was formed 18 years ago, Crittenden’s unemployment rate was hovering around 5 percent. The most recent figures from the state show it at 5.7 percent after double-digit jobless figures during the Great Recession a few years back.

“I think there is still a role development strategy and paid or volunteer personnel.

Bunnell said Wheeler has been a valuable asset in the community and praised his work as executive director of the CCEDC over the past two years. He said the changes that will take effect Oct. 31 are no reflection on Wheeler’s work at the CCEDC.

“Based on our finances, we had to make this decision now,” Bunnell said. “We had to be proactive.”

The CCEDC had hired Wheeler on a contract through the Crittenden County Board of Education. Wheeler was working part-time as the economic development director and part-time as the schools’ career and college readiness coach. He is also a part-time football coach.

The CCEDC’s contract with the school called for annual compensation of $24,000 to pay part of Wheeler’s salary. By eliminating that expense, the CCEDC is cutting its operating expenses to about $2,000 a month.

Mayor Alexander explained that the Marion Ed-Tech Training Center is owned by the city. Some of the original funding for the facility was tied to economic development. The mayor said there will continue to be some type of economic development endeavor headquartered at the center in order to meet its original mission. He does not foresee the building being shuttered.

It currently serves as a community training center and is regularly used by local manufacturers and other companies for training their employees. Various other continuing and adult education programs are hosted at the center.

acter in the series.

The artist wanted to come to Marion after learning that teacher and football game public address announcer Jody Porter had been playing another of his songs, “Put Your Hands Up High,” before each game. On that particular song, the rapper sings alongside band Gangstagrass, a hip-hop bluegrass group.

Last summer, Porter contacted T.O.N.E.-z by email and asked about having the artist record shout-outs for the fans, which are now played over the public address system.

Fans will get to see the artist in person at Friday’s game, says Porter.

“I think it’s amazing,” Porter said about the singer coming to Marion. “I thought I would take a chance and send him an email, and the next thing you know, he’s coming to Crittenden County to perform.”

In September, the singer’s agent contacted Serena Dickerson, president of the Quarterback Club, and arrangements were made to where T.O.N.E.-z could come for the annual Pink Out Game.

Dickerson said the artist is really excited about attending the game, supporting the team and pumping up the fans. Although he lives in New York, Dickerson said his family is from the South and the artist enjoys giving back to small Southern towns.

“I love doing it for the kids. This will be a great opportunity to know them one-on-one,” the artist said in a press release.

The artist’s genre-bending music collaborations with fellow Emmy-nominee Gangstagrass has included songs featured on MTV, FOX, The History Channel and FX. T.O.N.E.-z’s song, “Questions,” will be heard in the upcoming short film, “Clarity,” in which he also stars. Visit his website at www.tone-z.com.

The above newspaper clipping was found among a collection of wartime letters from Pfc. Harry M. “Bud” Threlkeld of Carrsville among other World War II memories.

Threlkeld’s letters put things in perspective

In the harsh, wintery months of November and December 1944 in World War II Germany, the unrelenting battle that U.S. soldier Harry “Bud” Threlkeld and his platoon found themselves in, had yet to calm down any. Even so, Bud found himself reflecting on the things unfolding back home in the U.S., through letters and V-mails between him and his mom, dad and his grandmother.

Being in the war had altogether given him a different outlook. He began to be somewhat puzzled at what people back in his country considered trivial and stated in one letter, briefly, that he saw them as petty compared to what he and many others like him were currently enduring. The worries of those back home were all indeed “worries” that he now wished he could call his own.

He writes, “Dear Mom and Dad, it is about 11 now, and I am sitting in my foxhole writing. My hands are very stiff from the cold, but you can probably make it out.

“I was using my helmet as a writing table, but the Germans started throwing the artillery in too close so I had to put my helmet on and just use a piece of cardboard to write on. I have to stop and duck every now and then, but I will get it finished before too long. “Sometimes I think the Germans don’t like me so much because they keep shooting at me! They just need to see that I am a nice, loving man.

“This is the third letter I have written you in an hour, but maybe it will make up a little for the ones I failed to write a while back. I have just finished what a man with a very good imagination might call a meal, but I sure wouldn’t call it that.

“From what you have told me, I see it is getting very hard for the poor ole civilians to get cigarettes over there. I even see where women now are taking up pipe smoking. I think women are getting a little bit out of hand there, ha, ha. Anyway, even with where I am at, we are still getting plenty of smokes and you can bet your life we sure do appreciate them.

“I read about how the people at the dam are going on strike, all the while there are people over here dying. I also think about what one platoon of infantry men could do if we could just be them for a little while.

“Either way, I hope me and Charles (Threlkeld’s brother) will be back home with you all very soon. I know I have said it already, but if you could see how things are over here, you’d understand why I always say I’m glad the war isn’t being fought in the U.S.A.”

Bud then decided shortly after to write his beloved grandmother: “Dear Granny, there aren’t many days more until Christmas, so be sure and have a big Christmas tree for me.

“I think about my granny every day and wish I could spend a little while with you.

“I’d sure love to shoot some of the duck that you mentioned. The good thing about shooting duck is that they don’t shoot back! Roast duck would sure taste good right about now.

“I went Purple Heart hunting yesterday, and as you can see, I was a lucky man and didn’t get it. Gen. Patton says the war will be over in 45 days over here, and I hope he is correct.

I love and miss you all so much.

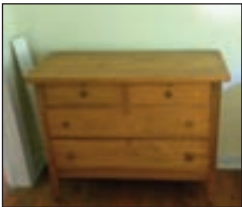

“Love, Bud.” (Alexa Black is a freelance writer from Livingston County. Her series on the life of Pfc. Harry M. “Bud” Threlkeld during World War II continues. Threlkeld, of the Carrsville area, was killed in the war.)

Crittenden schools improving

STAFF REPORT

Student performance, college/career-readiness and the number of students graduating from high school are all improving, according to Unbridled Learning results released last week by the Kentucky Department of Education (KDE). That is true both in Crittenden County and across the state.

All three schools in the local district showed gains in performance last spring over the spring of 2013. Crittenden County Middle School, in particular, showed impressive improvements.

"We're happy with all three schools showing improvement," said Superintendent of Schools Vince Clark. "And we will continue that path."

CCMS rocketed from a bottom third ranking last year to being among the top 25 percent of Kentucky's 329 middle schools in terms of KDE's academic measurements. CCMS soared ahead in the rankings by jumping from a 33rd percentile ranking last year to a 78th percentile ranking in 2014.

Schools in the 70th to 89th percentile are deemed Proficient, second only in ranking to Distinguished, which is represented by being at or above the 90th percentile.

The elementary school also saw marked improvement over last year. It fell short of reaching the 70th percentile and a Proficient designation by only 3 percentile points. From the spring of 2013 to the spring of 2014, CCES percentiles jumped 13 points from 54 to 67, placing it in the top 35 percent of the state's 720 elementary schools.

Crittenden County High School, meantime, also gained ground based on the Unbridled Learning data. It moved up in the percentile rankings from 43rd to 47th. Despite the improvement, it rates in the bottom half of Kentucky's 228 high schools.

The high school still falls in the Needs Improvement category. However, the school showed gains in areas such as college/career readiness and graduation rate, which improved from 85.3 percent to 87.2 percent.

Overall the school district exceeded its 2014 annual measurable objective (AMO), with an overall score of 67.9 out of 100. The AMO is simply a figure representing all the scores and data from assessments, plus graduation rates and college and career readiness results.

School district officials are now starting the process of writing their Comprehensive School and District Improvement Plans, which are due to the state on Jan. 3. Each school, along with the district, will be examining data to find specific needs that must be addressed.

Needs are chosen based on test results. The goals are provided by the state. The

Ledbetter livestock report unavailable

At press time Tuesday, the weekly U.S. Department of Agriculture livestock report from Ledbetter auction results Tuesday was not available.

Grimes passes McConnell in polls

Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell has slipped with Kentucky voters, a poll released Monday said, showing him trailing Alison Lundergan Grimes by 2 points.

Almost half, 48 percent, of those surveyed for the Bluegrass Poll said they disapprove of McConnell's job performance. Only 35 percent took a positive view.

McConnell, a Republican first elected to the Senate in 1984, is seeking a sixth term. Grimes, a native of Kentucky, is a lawyer and daughter of a former state representative and Democratic Party official.

An Aug. 28 poll showed McConnell leading by 4 percentage points among likely voters. The new one showed him trailing Grimes 44 to 46 percent. While Grimes' lead is within the poll's margin of error, the 6-point swing suggests McConnell could be in trouble.

While 3 percent said they plan to vote for Libertarian candidate David Patterson, 7 percent said they have not made up their minds.

More than half, 57 percent, said McConnell has had enough time in Washington. That included 27 percent of Republicans and 33 percent of self-described conservatives.

Ky. gubernatorial hopefuls raise funds

Republican James Comer raised $534,000 in his first fundraising quarter as a candidate for Kentucky governor. Comer, state agriculture commissioner, started his campaign last month. He raised his money in 22 days and has $477,656 available to spend.

Democrat Jack Conway raised $397,539 in the three month fundraising quarter that ended Sept. 30. His campaign has raised more than $1.1 million since announcing his candidacy in May. Conway, the attorney general, has $978,044 available to spend.

Republican Hal Heiner raised $56,492 in the quarter. The former Louisville Metro councilman said he will not hold fundraising events until after the fall elections.

Livingston schools among most improved

STAFF REPORT

Livingston County School District has been recognized as one of the most improved school districts in Kentucky, according to the latest academic assessments.

Unbridled Learning 2013-14 Assessment results have ranked the school district as proficient and have also recognized it as a high progressing district. That puts the district in the top 10 percent of districts showing improvement across the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

The district performed in the 87th percentile, and an increase in student achievement scores in all four schools is reflected in the district gains. They met their annual measurable objective (AMO) for improvement set forth by the state, increasing their district score from 63.6 to 70.9.

"We are very pleased with achieving proficient status in our district and very thankful for the great effort of our students and employees who made this happen," said Superintendent Darryl Chittenden. "We also appreciate our parents and the support of all stakeholders and community partners. Achieving district proficiency has been our goal and now we will set our sights on being distinguished."

An even greater accomplishment for the district is having two schools categorized as distinguished – Livingston Central High (LCHS) and North Livingston Elementary (NLES) schools.

LCHS reached the 94th percentile, giving the school a distinguished label. LCHS has been recognized as a high progressing school, putting them in the top 10 percent of improvement shown in schools across Kentucky. The high school has a graduation rate of 96.6 percent, which is well above the state average. Also, 72 percent of graduating seniors last year were considered college or career ready.

NLES has also been classified as a distinguished school. The school is now at the 93rd percentile and has received the recognition of being a high performing school. The school made great gains in the areas of achievement, gap and growth and has focused this past year on using its data to address individual student needs.

South Livingston Elementary School was classified as a Proficient, Progressing School. It reached the 70th percentile by also increasing scores across the board in achievement, gap and growth. I now has its sights set on being Distinguished.

While Livingston County Middle School was labeled as a Needs Improvement School, it was also classified as progressing. The school missed the cut for proficiency by only 1.8 points. Even as the year began, school officials were already focused on providing interventions and enrichments for all students and will continue to work toward Proficiency.

"We are excited to celebrate these successes in all of our schools," said instructional supervisor for the school district, Sheri Henson. "We have staff and students working hard on a daily basis to achieve the goals set before them."

Is ISIS cruelest of Satan’s deeds?

Even as I write this column, an American Muslim just beheaded a 54-year-old woman in Oklahoma City. God’s judgment has begun. Will America repent?

The inhumane actions of ISIS cutting off the heads of innocent children in front of their parents, making videos of beheading innocent men and burying whole families alive is hard for the American mind to fully comprehend. For more than 200 years, we have been bred and born in a Christian culture of love, tolerance, benevolence, tenderness, honoring women and caring for children and the elderly.

However, we can look at the actions in the past several years of the criminals in this nation who have left God by the droves. These criminals slaughter innocent babies through abortion, behead and cut up rape victims, walk up and shoot innocent people they don’t even know and go into a schoolhouse and slaughter their classmates. These things are meant by Satan to condition people to be even more barbarous. That finally leads to copying ISIS, which is not a new phenomena even in the last 2,000 years of Asian and European history.

The frightening difference is the actions of ISIS are now worldwide, whereas the other referred to actions in Asia and Europe were localized.

God’s word, speaking of Jesus, says: “The nation and kingdom that will not serve Thee shall perish; yes those nations shall be utterly wasted.”

Look at Iraq! Pagan Rome, in the first three centuries, was very creative in killing 20 million Christians by throwing them into a den of lions, burning them at stakes and through various other inhumane methods.

Rome suffered its punishment when God sent the Goths under their famous leader Alaric in A.D. 395, plundering and setting fire to it in several places. Alaric has the historic title, “The Destroyer of Nations.”

Then, in 439 A.D., God sent Genseric with his Vandal hordes burning and murdering. He received the historic title, “The Terrible Genseric.”

God still wasn’t through. In 442 A.D., He sent Attila, who claimed for himself the title, “The Scourge of God,” with his hordes of Huns who pillaged, raped and murdered whole cities.

God finished the Roman Empire in 476 A.D., sending Odoacer, king of the Heruli, who overthrew the last of the Roman line of emperors and ruled with an iron fist.

Then the apostate Roman Church – which for over 1,200 years did much of the copycat methods of Pagan Rome in tormenting, persecuting and killing 60 million Christians that would not bow to its sinful departure from God’s true Word – began to suffer the vengeance of God.

In 612 A.D., Mohammed had come out of his cave and began to preach the Muslim doctrine with the sword in one hand and the Koran in the other. Muslims ravaged and overran Asia and entered Europe demanding the people to convert, die or pay a heavy tax and made great conquests until A.D. 1672. Their power of conquest began to decline, but their power and presence were well cemented in the Middle East.

Then, on the heels of their fading into the background, Satan had two powerful, influential atheistic European writers, Rousseau and Voltaire, spewing their hate for God. Their idea of “spreading the wealth around” so aroused the French populous, they began beheading, drowning whole boats full of people tied together in what the sadistic Carrier called his Republican Baptisms and undertook the most cruel forms of slaughter ever devised carried out on millions. By Robespierre’s Jacobinism influence, they had no mercy on rich, poor, old, young, kings or queens and this resulted in the two destructive and horrifying French Revolutions called the “Reign of Terror.”

Some of the most evil acts of immorality a fallen human mind could imagine were carried out on the Roman priests, their altars and the women.

Their next plague on the backslidden Roman Church was the powerful, conquering Napoleon. And all of Europe paid the price.

This should be a warning to backslidden America, as all these evils will come to this nation if millions do not repent.

To read the horrors that happened to the people in these different times of God’s judgment on God-blessed people, who turned their backs on He who owns us and came in human form to suffer and die for us, should wake up any intelligent people. His judgment does not slumber long!

But this is what is so sad, history is not truly taught in our schools and the Bible not taught in our pulpits. Americans have quit reading the Word of God for television, iPods, sex, sports and stupid games that keep us stupid.

The majority has voted in many on both sides who want what the Jacobinism is of France. They want government to run all of life, and they are working day and night to destroy the Republican Party so they can have a one-party system that puts all the aspects of our lives in the hands of one party, and thus, one dictator. Wake up people!

God has all evil at His disposal. So He can let us be in anarchy, civil war and under the most vile, corrupt, pagan, ruthless American-born haters. Or He can let Satan’s plan succeed with his army surrounding the whole world with his powerful development of ISIS, the beheading vengeful angels of God, on a sin-sick world that refuses to obey God.

Can it even be stopped now, when we see how easily one man can walk into a place and grab a woman from behind and cut her head off and start on another before he is stopped?

As I stated near the beginning, the atrocities committed against the Roman Empire and the apostate Church of Rome were localized, but ISIS is now situated around the world and ready to strike everywhere. They now have millions of oil- and stolen-dollars with the power to buy everything they need to strike the whole world to wipe all off the map. That is their declared mission as they all long for the end of the world and their reward in Heaven. They are gaining more adherents daily, even from America.

Remember Revelation 20:7-9 tells us how it all is going to end if millions don’t repent. Now is the time, as Satan has been loosed out of his prison, gone out and deceived the nations and has gathered atheist, pagans and false religions to battle as they encircle every Christian over the entire breadth of the earth and the end after that.

Remember again Jesus’ warning in Luke 13:3: “Repent or perish.”

Energy tips can help save on water heating costs

Water heating is the largest base load energy expense in your home. It typically accounts for 12 to 18 percent of your utility costs. Base load energy use is behavior based. You can affect base load energy use through no cost behavior changes.

You can save energy and money on water heating by setting your water heater's thermostat to 120 degrees. This temperature setting will provide comfortable hot water for most uses.

You can also save energy and money when doing laundry. Approximately 90 percent of the energy used to wash clothes goes to heating water. You can use less energy and save money by using cold water when doing laundry. Consider using cold water whenever possible. Are you thinking of buying a new washing machine? Consider purchasing an ENERGY STAR® labeled model. These washing machines are designed to use less water and energy.

Water heaters typically have a life span of 10 to 15 years. Is your water heater more than 7 years old? It is time to do research before your water heater fails. It is better to be prepared to purchase a water heater. Reacting to a water heater failure could result in a poor choice.

A water heater is not a one size fits all appliance. Water heaters can use different fuel types. Typical fuel types are electricity, natural gas or solar energy. Water heaters also deliver hot water through a variety of methods. There are traditional storage water heaters or tankless water heaters.

You can find additional information on home energy efficiency and use at the following websites:

U.S. 60 Yard Sale creates shopping tours for locals

STAFF REPORT

It's been called a shopping experience like no other. The ninth annual Highway 60 Yard Sale took place last weekend, stretching over 200 miles through eight area counties including Livingston, Crittenden and Union counties. Rain showers and cooler temperatures didn't stop area shoppers from following the route and finding many bargains along the way.

Lola resident Yvonne Millikan made a stop just west of Marion at a sale conducted by Crittenden County resident Connie Harris. Millikan said she begins her shopping in Salem and sometimes continues on the route to Evansville.

"I usually go both days. My sister is with me. We have done this the last three or four years," she said.

Millikan often sees lots of familiar faces as she stops at different yard sales. Sometimes she recognizes neighbors. Other times she visits a seller she has brought from in previous years.

On Friday, Millikan was looking for books. She found a good deal at Harris' sale, where books were marked for 10 cents per copy. She was also on the look-out for items that might make suitable Christmas presents for her children and grandchildren.

She also enjoys finding accessories for home décor. One of the most unique items she has purchased is a wooden table cut from a log. Described as an odd-shaped piece, the log had been underwater for many years. One of her favorite pieces she has purchased is an antique cabinet. She said bargains are out there for those who are on the look-out.

"You just have to get to the right place at the right time," she said. "Maybe no one else wants it and you get to it before they do."

Millikan said browsing different yard sales can be habit-forming but also a great opportunity to find some really nice antique pieces.

From a seller's standpoint, Harris said she's been selling merchandise at yard sells for 40 years. She's seen quite a few people from out of town come through for the event, citing the volume of traffic on U.S. 60.

The Highway 60 Yard Sale offers more than bargains, it also allows for autumn drives through dozens of local communities along the route.

Students show acts of kindness

Crittenden County Elementary School students are learning the importance of showing consideration for others through its Random Acts of Kindness club. Students visited Farmers Bank and Trust Company last month to show their appreciation to its employees. CCES guidance counselor Laura Poindexter said the purpose is to build the students' awareness that even small gestures of appreciation can have a positive impact on those around them. Fifth grader Ryleigh Tabor gives a gift to Jared Byford of Farmers Bank. As part of the initiative, students will visit a different business in the community each month.

Bank honors farming heritage

STAFF REPORT

It was an opportunity to celebrate the community's farming heritage and showcase local artisans and their crafts. On Friday, Farmers Bank & Trust Co. officials celebrated Farmers Day at its main office headquarters in Marion.

Among the local artisans participating was Judith Manley, who displayed some of the baskets she has made and demonstrated how to remake the cane seat of a chair.

"This is the first seat like this I've done," she said. "It was kind of interesting seeing the pattern on the top (of the chair) and trying to copy it."

Manley has been weaving baskets since 1996. She said once she begins, she gets in a zone and tends to start weaving and forgets about everything else.

"You start weaving and everything disappears. It's very relaxing," she said.

At 1 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday, Manley will teach a basket weaving class at the University of Kentucky Crittenden County Cooperative Extension Service office in Marion. Participants will make Shelby's Mail Baskets. Manley describes the baskets as nice items to have around the house and said it isn't too big of a project for beginners to learn the basic skills of basket weaving.

"I hang (mine) by the door

Crittenden County resident Judith Manley demonstrates how to re-cane a chair during Farmers Day held Friday at Farmers Bank & Trust Co's main office.

and put my gloves and hat in it," she said. "They are really handy."

Pat Bennett from Salem also participated in Farmers Day and demonstrated how to make cloth using a four-harness loom. Bennett has made rugs, placemats and table runners. She also owns a spinning wheel. Bennett said she demonstrated how to use a loom for weaving cloth when visitors from the quilt show in Paducah would travel to Smithland to explore different parts of the area.

"That was fun to see some of the people who had never seen weaving," she said.

The event also included a scarecrow contest sponsored by Crittenden County 4-H and an apple pie bake-off sponsored by the Extension Service. Winning the apple pie contest for which there was 13 entries was Nancy Paris. Jeannie Marshall came in second, followed by Glenda Chandler.

This the third year for Farmers Day.

"We wanted to honor our farmers and the services they do for us," said Deitra Beavers of Farmers Bank. "They are a service to the community and its economy."

CCHS principal settling into job; grade improvement help offered over fall break

By JASON TRAVIS

STAFF WRITER

For school administrators, the final bell doesn't signal the end of the work day, even if that work day began at 6:30 a.m. Second shift obligations often require officials to work into the evening.

Last week, Crittenden County High School Principal Curtis Brown supervised an evening soccer match at Marion-Crittenden County Park. Brown, who is in his first year as principal at the high school, is glad the number of sporting competitions like soccer and volleyball has grown since he first taught at the high school in the 1990s.

Brown said he was also impressed with the support students and members of the community demonstrated during homecoming week, citing the attendance for the parade, powder puff and homecoming football games.

"Our homecoming traditions are alive and well," he said, citing the various activities during homecoming week. "I've seen powder puff games before, but I've not seen one that had that energy or the crowd support."

With the first-half of the initial semester of the academic year complete, Brown believes the high school has adjusted well to the changes in administration. He credits the support of the teachers and administrators in the central office for the ease of transition. He also praised the attitude of the student body at CCHS.

"One of the things I'm most impressed by is the behavior and the respect the kids in general show," Brown said. "In general, our kids are better-behaved. Our hallways are much calmer than I've been accustomed to in most of the schools I've been in."

As the first nine weeks grading period comes to a close, the high school will hold its fall intercession on Monday, the first day of fall break. Brown said the purpose of intercession is to identify early the students who are having trouble in courses and give them the opportunity to improve their grades before the end of the semester. Last year, school officials made the decision to replace summer school with multiple days of intercession, a proactive approach intended to help those students who are not performing well in specific areas of coursework.

Intercession is open to all students and recommended for students with a score of 65 or lower in any class. Brown said requirements for intercession have changed this year. To be eligible to improve their grade, students must attend all day of intercession if they have a grade of 50 or lower in any class or are failing two or more classes.

If a student is failing with a 50 or higher in only one class, they must attend a half-day, morning session to be eligible to raise their grade. Students must complete the work by the end of the day of intercession. Last week, the school mailed out letters to those students recommended for fall intercession.

Having a positive impact on the students at CCHS is an aspect of the job Brown enjoys most. He said the welfare of the school is related to the welfare of the community. He's encouraged by the number of former students who either make Crittenden County their home or work in the community.

"There are lots of students I know who still live here. They are professionals in the community. They are teachers, nurses, doctors and lawyers. I've almost been surprised at the number of people that I still know and remember and who remember me," he said.

Why I'm supporting Brandi Hagan Rogers

Brandi Rogers and Laura Peak

From my work in Family Court, I know we need a judge who will work hard and involve the community; a judge who will show compassion and demand improvement; a judge who will respect those who come into court and who will use her eight years of experience in family court to wise advantage.

I've worked with both candidates. That's why I'm supporting Brandi Hagan Rogers.

Please join me on Nov. 4th in voting for Brandi Hagan Rogers for Family Court Judge.

More than 6 million young people across the country will celebrate National 4-H Week, an annual celebration of 4-H during the first full week of October.

Research has proven that participation in 4-H has a significant positive impact on young people. Recent findings from the Tufts University 4-H Study of Positive Youth Development indicate that, when compared to their peers, young people in 4-H are:

- Nearly four times more likely to contribute to their communities,
- Two times more likely to pursue healthy behaviors like, and
- Two times more likely to engage in Science, Technology, Engineering and Math (STEM) programs in the out-of-school time.

Street names carry on local history

Most never really think about the names of our streets; they are just an address to help us find where we are going or where something is located. Many of our streets were named after the families that owned the land or prominent businessmen of the time. A few were named for businesses that were located on them, such as Mill Street.

From the archives of The Crittenden Press we learn some of this history.

How Belleville Street was named

Of the many families and people who live on or do business on Belleville Street in Marion, we doubt if there is a score of them who could correctly answer the question: Where did the name Belleville originate?

The story goes back perhaps 100 years or more, to a time when a Mr. Bell established a trading point on the Tradewater River, about 3 miles west of Providence near where Belleville bridge now stands.

A village grew up about him, which was called Belleville in his honor. A state road was established that led out west from here across the Tradewater bottoms, up into the hills and on to and down Big Piney Hill across Piney Creek, and thence up and down the hills toward Marion.

This road then, and for many years afterwards, was known only as the Belleville Road. It led through Marion and later the name of the Tradewater village, Belleville, was also applied to the street that ran through Marion.

Mr. Bell, long ago passed on and this once thriving little village is now but a name; the old Belleville Road has earned a rest and is now superseded, mainly, by a new state highway. However, may the name Belleville continue to be honored in the future ages by as fine a people whom it shall serve as those who work and abide on it today.

Belleville Road and the small Belleville area are still remembered today. They are still listed on the maps of Webster County.

If you would like a scenic drive through our beautiful Crittenden County countryside, take Ky. 120 to Shady Grove, turn left at the stop sign onto Ky. 1917, then turn right onto Providence Road.

As you travel along this road through some beautiful countryside, you will pass by Tradewater Baptist Church, which is now a family dwelling, and on your right will be the Hood Family Cemetery, where Chastine Hood is buried, one of our early Crittenden County pioneers. Continue following the road and you will come into the area in Webster County that is the village of Belleville.

In October of 1895, the board of the Marion town trustees held its regular meeting and the report of the commissioners appointed to plat the town of Marion and suggest names for the streets was adopted. Some that were named and adopted at this meeting were:

- Beginning at the bank and going south, the names are Bank (now Carlisle Street), Depot, Elm and Gum.
  - Going north from the public square, the first street is Popular.
  - Going east from public square there is College, Walker, Mill, Kevil, Clark and Maxwell.
  - Going west from public square, Court and Forest.
- The report of the commissioners was made a matter of record in the county clerk's office.

Salem Street
Salem Street, now West Bellville Street starting at the spotlight, was expected to become the principal business street of Marion, but by 1902, Main Street in front of the Courthouse had become the primary avenue of shopping and business houses.

In the late 1800s and early 1900s, Marion was rapidly growing with many new residential homes being built. Businessmen that owned large plots of land began having some of their land platted so they could sell the lots for new homes.

One of these plats was known as the Clark addition. It was owned by Dr. John Riley Clark and was platted by W.H. Clark. These lots were on East Bellville Street and started from the railroad tracks and continued east to Maxwell Street.

Clark and Maxwell streets

In early 1894, Marion was rapidly growing and needing new areas to build homes. Businessmen that owned large sections of the area began having some of their land platted so they could sell the lots, as many were wanting to build new homes for their families and also be located closer to the growing town and all it had to offer.

Located in the northeast section of Marion (East Bellville Street) is what was known as the Clark addition. The land was sold by owner Dr. John Riley Clark. His son, W.H. Clark, who was an attorney, drew up the plat for the new addition. This addition to Marion was needed for these new residential homes. Later, the town council would name one of the streets in this area Clark Street for Dr. Clark who supplied the land. Dr. Clark was also associated with the Marion Roller Mill, as one of its founders.

P.S. Maxwell also had some of his land platted so it could be sold. Mr. Maxwell was a prominent and well-known businessman in Marion and was director of the ice company at one time. Later, he and his family moved to the new state of Oklahoma. The town council named one of the streets in this new subdivision in honor of Maxwell.

Rochester Avenue

William H. Rochester was

a Marion pioneer in the important profession of blacksmithing. He came to Marion in 1845 and set-up the newborn town's first machine shop. When competition began to become heavy in the local blacksmith profession by 1850, Mr. Rochester retired to his first love – farming.

He purchased a 250-acre farm off the northeast corner of Marion in 1853. He built a two-story log home on the crest of the hill overlooking the Rush Creek. (The site was just north of the Old Morganfield Road at its junction with Club Drive.) The farm was known then as Rochester Grove and the new home was given the name Waveland. The land was where the present day National Guard Armory is located. The old two-story home was torn down in May 2010. This family is remembered only today by the street named Rochester Avenue.

Kevil Street

Kevil Street was given its name in honor of the Kevil family. Joseph Bell Kevil was one of the founders and original owners of the Marion Roller Mill, which was located in the area that the Marion Feed Mill is located today. Mr. Kevil served his county in many positions – as county surveyor for many years – and had as thorough knowledge of Crittenden County boundaries of any man who lived here. He served as county attorney, mayor of Marion and police judge and held offices of trustee in lodges and church.

The Kevil family home was at the end of Kevil Street located on the East Depot side of the street.

Shady Lane named

R.W. Wilson, another enterprising businessman and large landowner, saw there would soon be a pressing need for another addition to Marion to provide lots both for new industries and for more residences. Wilson's property extended from the Old Fords Ferry Road, which then was still the main travel route south, to Princeton Road north of Marion.

Wilson extended his addition south of Marion across Wilson Hill along what is now South Main Street and U.S. 641. He reserved a 10-acre knoll tract for his son-in-law, S.M. Jenkins.

Mr. Jenkins, with the intention of building a manor house on this knoll, planted a double row of trees as a driveway to his intended new home. The manor house was never built; but today, this once private lane is known as Shady Lane.

These are just a few of the interesting facts of how some of our streets got their names and how the areas of our town were started and developed by these early businessmen of Marion.

Art show spotlights local talent

STAFF REPORT
Fohs Hall Community Arts Foundation presented an art show last month in the Fohs Hall art gallery. Local artists Tammy Brasher, Nicky Porter and Jeremy Brasher were on hand to display their artwork and expose more individuals to different works of art. Brasher works with both oil and acrylic paint. Many of her works feature local and historic landmarks located in Marion and Caldwell County. Brasher, who is from Fredonia, has been painting since the 1980s but took a renewed interest in painting during the past six years. She said it's important to understand that oil paintings don't dry as quickly as acrylic.

"The oil paints take a week to dry and six months to really cure. You need to hang it but don't put anything on the back of it," she said. She encourages individuals with an interest in art to pick up a brush and give it a try. She also said even if beginners make a mistake with a painting, they can simply just paint over it. "Don't be afraid of it. Try it. Get outside the box and do something different. Test what you know. Test what you don't know. Read books, get online or take some classes if you have a place available for that," she said. Brasher's son, Jeremy, was also at the art show showcasing his collection of landscape photography, many of which has been published. To learn more about his work visit www.jeremybrasher.com.

Dickerson sets mark in lopsided loss

STAFF REPORT
DRAFFENVILLE, Ky. – Although the Rockets have come away empty handed over the last two weeks, their passing game is touching off a bit of conversation. Senior Noah Dickerson set a new school record for receptions in a single game Friday at Marshall County while Crittenden lost 42-6. A week earlier, in a loss at Muhlenberg County, CCHS quarterback Nick Castiller set a single game record for pass attempts.

Dickerson caught a touchdown over the middle in the second period for the Rockets' only score of the game. Later, as time ran out in the fourth period, he caught a quick screen for a 3-yard loss, but the reception gave him the new high-water mark for catches at 11. Dickerson broke the previous record set by T.K. Guess against Mayfield 10 years ago.

"We have to find some positives and Noah did a good job. It's something he will remember and we're proud of him for that," Rocket coach Al Starnes said after his team lost for the third time in six games.

The skipper said there were other silver linings in an otherwise lopsided loss at Marshall County (2-4). He praised the play of senior linebacker Nicholas Greenwell, who started for the injured Lane Wallace. Greenwell's play caught the attention of the entire coaching staff and Starnes said the senior will remain at linebacker this week against Murray.

Wallace continues to recover from a shoulder injury and Dylan Hollis, who led Crittenden in tackles at Marshall County, is now hurt. He suffered concussion-like symptoms after a fourth-quarter hit in Friday's game.

Starnes said his team played with emotion at times at Marshall. That's something he's been seeking and will need as the Rockets play No. 6 Murray in this week's Pink Out Game. Rapper T.O.N.E.z

will be featured at halftime. See Page 1A for details.

In addition to Wallace being out at Marshall, Crittenden was also playing without Maeson Myers, the team's No. 2 running back behind Wallace. Hollis played tailback at Marshall.

Hollis gained 34 of Crittenden's 55 rushing yards. Quarterback Castiller had the rest.

Marshall County had not scored a rushing touchdown this season until this game. The Marshals got the monkey off their backs with four on the ground. Those went with two passing touchdowns for what turned into a rout as the hosts scored twice late.

Soccer girls No. 1 going into playoffs

BY KATIE DAVIES
PRESS PREP CORRESPONDENT
Crittenden County's soccer team will move into post-season play next week as the No. 1 seed in the Fifth District. That's quite an accomplishment considering the club had won only five games over the previous six seasons coming into this year.

Now, Crittenden is 6-14 overall and 3-1 in league play.

Coach Ken Geary is preparing his team to play in Tuesday's district championship against the winner of Monday's Trigg County vs. Lyon County district semifinal.

Geary took some time out earlier this week to discuss his personnel as his girls head into the playoffs. Here is what he said about each player:

- Freshman Bailey Barnes plays forward. She plays junior varsity and varsity. She's a pure athlete and has improved greatly. She had never played soccer before.
- Sophomore Amanda Lynch is a starter and a left defender. She sweeps her area and does an amazing job and was once this season named player of the game.

- Macye Shoulders has improved as a goalie and has logged many tough minutes this season.
- Alexis Tabor plays 40 to 50 minutes per game. The sophomore has good foot skills and positions herself well on the field. She plays several spots, including forward, midfielder and goalie. She has scored once this year.
- Emily Tinsley is a starter at center and midfielder. The sophomore plays the whole game, has great foot skills and looks to score. She has four goals this season.
- Katie Wheeler starts at right or left midfield. She has a strong leg and usually takes the team's set kicking chores. She has one goal this year.
- Junior Nikki Shuecraft is very fast. She is a good dribbler and has shown a lot of improvements crossing the ball. She played midfield and forward. She has scored two goals.
- Margaret Sitar is one of the two most valuable players on the club. She never comes off the field and never quits. The junior plays the sweeper position, switching from offense to defense just this season.

Crittenden County's Alexis Tabor (8) brings the ball down field while teammate Nikki Shuecraft (22) comes over to help.

- Junior Charity Sitar has improved at the wing. She is good at triangulating and was player off the game in a huge win over Trigg County. She has two goals to her credit.
- RaKara McDowell another of the most valuable players. She is very dedicated, a great leader and also spent most of her time on defense this year after being primarily a scorer. She has two goals this season. She is one of the team's two seniors.

- Marie Riley is the team's other goalie. She also plays out of the goal at various positions. She plays hard with a lot of grit, the coach said. She is also a senior.
- Junior Kali Travis is the club's leading scorer by a long shot, netting 16 goals this season. She's a valuable offensive asset.

Junior Pro Rockets sweep White Tigers

STAFF REPORT

Crittenden County's Junior Pro football teams got back on track Saturday after a tough outing the week before at Morganfield. At Caldwell last weekend, the young Rockets swept the White Tigers in three games with the B-teams winning 20-16, the third- and fourth-grade winning 36-16 and the fifth- and sixth-grade triumphing 34-16.

Crittenden's fifth and sixth graders spotted the host Tigers with a 16-0 lead thanks to a 20-yard scoring run and fumble recovery for a touchdown by Caldwell's Tripp Branch. From there, however, the Rockets dominated.

Crittenden scored 34 unanswered points to win going away. Gabe Mott rushed for a season-high 187 yards and scored two touchdowns. Full-back Caden McCalister also scored two TDs, one on the ground and one on a pass from Mott. Xander Tabor tackled on the final score for the Rockets.

McCalister was the team's leading tackler, recording a whopping 14 stops against Caldwell and Tabor had seven.

The Rockets are now 4-1 with just one game to go in regular-season league play. Crittenden will take a two-week break from league games during fall break. However, they will play a non-conference matchup at Trigg County on Oct. 18. The next league game will be Oct. 25 at Webster County. Crittenden will host the post-season playoffs Nov. 1-2.

The fourth- and fifth-graders were stymied by turnovers in the first half, but once the offense got going, it rolled easily over Caldwell County. Preston Morgeson's 49-yard touchdown run was the only score at halftime as Crittenden led 6-0. A second-half blitz put the game away as the Rockets posted 24 third-quarter points.

Morgeson finished the day with 160 yards rushing and four touchdowns. Jack Reddick rushed for Crittenden's other score.

Case Gobin led the defense with seven tackles. Morgeson and Reddick were also the top stoppers on defense along with Zach Counts.

Green County native Dave Shuffett, host of Kentucky Educational Television's "Kentucky Life" program since 1999, has announced his retirement.

But before he calls it quits, Shuffett will host one final season of the program, which made its debut Saturday evening on KET.

Shuffett said the job requires near constant travel and that retirement, after 22 years in state government, will allow him other professional opportunities.

During his tenure with Kentucky Life, Shuffett received nine Emmy nominations.

The season that began Saturday was the program's 20th. Shuffett said he plans to pursue other media and writing projects. He replaced Byron Crawford on "Kentucky Life." Previously, Shuffett had hosted KET's "Kentucky Afield" program from 1989 to 1995.

Shuffett has published two books.

was reportedly observed by the owner of a building to be removing items from the storage facility on Dunlap Road in rural Livingston County. The owner of the building was allegedly able to detain Styers until Deputy Irvin Davis arrived and took Styers into custody.

The property, which included several antique items, was recovered and the investigation is continuing Styers was lodged in the McCracken County Detention Center on one count of theft by unlawful taking under $500 and one count of second-degree criminal trespassing, both Class A misdemeanors.

Final truss section of bridge blown off

The third and final truss section of the old Ledbetter Bridge at Paducah was taken down with the use of controlled explosives last Wednesday. The demolition team detonated the center truss section of the 83-year old structure that crosses the main navigation channel of the Tennessee River.

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet (KyTC), the contractor and area law enforcement again made arrangements for the public to observe the detonation from the deck of the new U.S. 60 Tennessee River Bridge that connects Livingston and McCracken counties. The crowd was believed to be largest to witness the series of three detonations to bring down the truss spans.

Efforts have now turned to removing the four main piers that supported the old structure.

According to KyTC spokesman Keith Todd, there will likely be a delay of a few weeks to allow drilling of the piers to prepare them for placement of explosives. Todd said during the next blasting, the contractor plans to remove the top half of two of the piers followed by the top half of the other two piers. The contractor would then come back to take off the bottom of two piers, followed by the bottom of the other two.

The old Ledbetter Bridge opened to traffic in 1931. U.S. 60 traffic moved to the new bridge on July 31, 2013.
