STAFF REPORT

What has been described as a fully-consuming, weeks-long criminal probe over the summer that led to seizure of the largest methamphetamine cache in county history included at least 10 search warrants, phone tapping and electronic surveillance, which investigators say was somewhat rare for rural western Kentucky.

One investigator called suspect Brian Fitzgerald “a formidable adversary” as he and others worked to surveil, follow and ensnare an alleged drug dealer who had often

On the floor training

Practical work experience has for years been part of the secondary educational framework. Students “co-oping” at afternoon jobs is nothing new, but for more than a half dozen Crittenden County High School students, the experience to be hands on in a real health-care setting is priceless.

Cooperative education is more than 100 years old, but there’s a new emphasis on it as schools reimagine what learning should look like. The opportunity for these students to earn a few dollars is merely icing on the cake.

Luke Drawdy is a CCHS senior whose parents both work in healthcare. His excitement for the after-school program is easy to see.

Local Restaurant Receipts Cool in 2Q

Price instability riddles food industry

STAFF REPORT

Think it’s tough to watch ups and downs in stock market?

Local restaurateur Katie Wheeler says the volatility in chicken wings is what keeps her up at night.

Restaurant sales in Marion cooled a bit during the second quarter of 2023, but Wheeler says business has been pretty good even though summertime is not typically the best.

“It’s not our busiest season, but it’s been pretty good,” said Wheeler, who operates Game Day Pizza and Wings and The Front Porch.

According to the quarterly revenue report from Marion’s three-percent tourism tax, April, May and June were a bit cooler than 2022. Sales were $2.57 million during that period this year, down almost three percent from a year earlier. By comparison, first quarter sales were up four percent in town.

Wheeler says the price of food and materials is all over the board, too.

“For a while we were paying $2 per wing. That’s our wholesale price. It’s crazy that a wing costs that much,” she said.

Wholesale costs have come down and wings are back to just under a dollar, but Wheeler says it will not last long because Tyson Foods announced in August that it is closing four chicken processing plants in Arkansas, Missouri and Indiana.

“Prices are going back up, and probably a lot,” she said.

Restaurant sales have taken meteoric jumps since the start of the pandemic partly due to more traffic, but also driven largely by higher consumer prices.

Gross receipts at Marion restaurants were up 37 percent from 2018 to 2022, more than $6.2 million. Inflation has been largely to blame.

Author’s plot set in Crittenden

Drawn on a backdrop of Crittenden County, a rural Kentucky area with white-tail deer, Amish, Ford’s Ferry and Crooked Creek, an unforeseeable climax to a fictional story is drawn from author Brent Brantley’s purpose to write suspense novels with plausible plots and unexpected endings.

Brantley

A native Kentuckian, Brantley currently lives in a retirement community in northern Florida created by the late retail giant J.C. Penney. He and wife Jeanette, both in their late 70s, are enjoying the subtleties of their retreat in the South, but are staying quite active. A former Crittenden Countian with generational ties to this community dating beyond its formation in 1842, Brantley is proud to talk about his book, Summer of the Waxman, which was released a few days ago by Elk Lake Publishing of Plymouth Rock, Mass.

A self-described world-view writer, Brantley has been a missionary to Indonesia and a consultant and trainer in personal security and crisis management for organizations engaged in work abroad. Before that, decades ago, he was a Chicago policeman who nearly died after being shot in the head by a criminal. He found faith in God from that near-death, life-altering event and after an adulthood centered on giving of time and energy to the Lord, Brantley is settled in to creating devotional stories. His first was, You Cannot Grasp the River, published a couple of years ago. It is about a six-year-old Stone Age Papuan boy, Benjad, who is thrust into the modern world when a soldier-turned-missionary and his wife rescue him from an evil shaman who has killed his parents.

“I write about things I know about,” Brantley says.

An excerpt from his latest work reads, “The man’s face was distorted with scars, waxen and stretched as if his flesh had melted. Below a prominent scarred nose, a lipless mouth formed a wide O, as wide as his red-rimmed eyes, which seemed sunken into their bony sockets.”

Imaginative and descriptive writing fills the 398-page Summer of the Waxman. It is a story that pulls experiences from the author’s life. From his time as a cop to years of

Fox

Charles “Chuck” Fox, 80, of Salem, died Thursday, Sept. 14, 2023 at the Ray and Kay Eckstein Hospice Care Center of Paducah.

He was born at home in Nevada, Ohio May 30, 1943, the son of Merle and Frances (Fadley) Fox.

He married Alberta Damschroder on June 11, 1966. They met when Chuck was working for the funeral home and ambulance service in Upper Sandusky, Ohio and Alberta was a nurse at Bucyrus Community Hospital. He would joke, “I used to take all of the ambulance calls going to that hospital, just so I could see Alberta.”

Fox began his career in funeral service during his senior year of high school. He immediately fell in love with it and worked for Lucas Funeral Homes in Upper Sandusky and Nevada, Ohio.

He earned his degree from Kentucky School of Mortuary Science in Louisville while riding the Greyhound bus back and forth from Salem to Louisville every week.

He began his funeral service career in Kentucky on March 1, 1971, when he accepted a position with Boyd Funeral Directors in Salem as a director and embalmer. The couple moved to Salem with their two boys, Jeff and Tim. Andy was born eight years later in 1979. In 2001, through Fox’s hard work and dedication, he and Andy became the owners of Boyd Funeral Directors in Salem. Fox loved funeral service, working his last service on Aug. 26, 2023 at the age of 80.

He was a member of St. Francis de Sales Catholic Church, a former board member of Livingston Hospital, past president of Salem Lions Club and past president of the Western Kentucky Funeral Directors Association. He had a love of John Deere tractors, from growing up on the family farm in rural Ohio. He was president of Boyd Funeral Directors, Cremation Service and Monuments. He loved his family. He was a man who never lost sight of where he came from and how he began. He was humble, with a true servants heart for all he helped.

Surviving are his wife of 57 years, Alberta Fox; three sons, Jeff (Donna) Fox of Symsonia, Tim (Carrie) Fox of South Elgin, Ill., and Andy (Marcy) Fox of Salem; three grandchildren, TJ and Abbie Fox, Trevor Faith; and several nieces and nephews.

Memorial contributions may be made to Salem Cemetery, P.O. Box 26, Salem, KY 42078 or Livingston Hospital Foundation, 131 Hospital Drive, Salem, KY 42078.

Services were Tuesday, Sept. 19 at St. Francis de Sales Catholic Church with Father Gary Clark officiating. Burial was in Salem Cemetery. The family would like to thank everyone for their prayers, love and support during Fox’s short battle, including Father Gary Clark and the Ray and Kay Eckstein Hospice Care Center staff for all that they did, helping Fox pass away with the dignity he most definitely deserved.

“A good funeral gets your loved one where they need to go and the family where they need to be. There’s no easy way to do this. So do it right: Weep, laugh, watch, pray, love, live, give thanks and praise; comfort, mend, honor, and remember. Grief is the price we pay for being close to one another. For where there is much grief, there was great love.” By Mr. Thomas Lynch eluded authorities while building a years-long rap sheet in Crittenden and surrounding counties. Local, state and federal authorities followed Fitzgerald’s tracks and watched his movements from cities like Louisville and Bowling Green to the tiny hamlet of Frances where he grew up in southern Crittenden County.

Weaver

John Moore Weaver, 74, of Salem, died Wednesday Sept. 13, 2023 at Livingston Hospital and Healthcare Services.

The latest manhunt for him began in late July and ended Aug. 22 in Muhlenberg County where the fugitive was cornered at a hotel. There had been a couple of other times when he’d been on the run for days and even weeks while authorities had searched for him with warrants.

Since being caught in Muhlenberg County, Fitzgerald, 35, has been formally charged with weapons and drug crimes in U.S. District Court for the Western District of Kentucky. The four federal charges stem from his reputed possession of guns while being a convicted felon active in the alleged possession and distribution of large quantities of methamphetamine and other drugs in Crittenden and Muhlenberg counties. Authorities also say there is evidence of further violent behavior from Fitzgerald during a period beginning May 26 when the investigation was opened until he was arrested in Central City in August. That information, they say, will be considered among other sentencing criteria if Fitzgerald is found guilty in federal court.

An official affidavit petitioning the U.S. District Court in Paducah to criminally charge Fitzgerald was filed by an ATF agent assigned to the case. The petition includes a sealed document not yet available for public disclosure, which could include more evidence to support the charges. Fitzgerald remains jailed with no bond on a federal detainer at the Muhlenberg County Detention Center. The case will likely be heard by a federal grand jury in Paducah in the coming weeks to determine if enough evidence exists to prosecute the case there.

Information for the federal affidavit was filed by Special Agent T.J. Worthen of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF). The warrant sheds some light on how area law enforcement and federal agents tracked down Fitzgerald after he eluded them in July following a motorcycle crash in Crittenden County.

The warrant charges that on July 25-26, Fitzgerald was in Crittenden County and in possession of more than 500 grams of methamphetamine with intent to distribute. It also charges him with being a felon in possession of a firearm. Another set of identical charges are alleged in Muhlenberg County on Aug. 21-22. No other federal charges have been filed at this time. With regard to the same investigation, Fitzgerald has a number of felony and misdemeanor charges pending in Crittenden and Muhlenberg counties. However, it’s typical that state charges are dropped once an individual is either indicted or convicted in federal court as part of the same investigation.

The affidavit alleges that investigators learned that Fitzgerald was traveling out of state to acquire large quantities of methamphetamine for distribution in western Kentucky. He is also believed to have been going regularly to other cities in Kentucky to purchase as much as 25 pounds of meth at a time for $1,000 per pound. The affidavit says Fitzgerald was driving a relative’s Nissan Altima and upon returning to western Kentucky, the suspect would take back roads where he would sell the drugs for profit. Court records allege that investigators surveilled the suspect’s movements using a variety of investigative methods.

Court records say Fitzgerald was known to be in possession of multiple weapons at various times, including handguns. Two of the guns had been purchased from Madisonville Rural King by a female acquaintance, the affidavit claims. One was a 9mm CZ Scorpion handgun bought in May.

Information was also discovered by law enforcement that Fitzgerald was growing marijuana on his property on Brown Mines Road.

The document points out that Fitzgerald has had previous felony convictions for promoting contraband, possession of a handgun by a convicted felon, receiving stolen property, trafficking marijuana, assault and intimidating a participant in the legal process.

The special agent’s affidavit says information was discovered that Fitzgerald had threatened to kill the female friend who had purchased the guns for him, and threatened to kill her children and a male with whom Fitzgerald believed she was in a romantic relationship. Investigators learned that information on July 24. On that same day, a probation violation warrant was issued for Fitzgerald’s arrest. The next day, surveillance of Fitzgerald indicated that he was en route back to Crittenden County after being out of town. Investigators began following him near Princeton and stayed on his trail until Fitzgerald reached a location near his home in the Frances community. Authorities attempted to serve a warrant on Fitzgerald, but he got away in a vehicle. Subsequently, Crittenden County Sheriff Evan Head and other lawmen secured a search warrant for the suspect’s home and nearby fields, which belong to another landowner, because they suspected to find evidence of drug trafficking, including a marijuana-growing operation.

Inside the home, officers located a .32 caliber Derringer pistol, several hundred rounds of rifle and pistol ammunition, expended cartridges, drug paraphernalia, an assortment of fentanyl pills, heroin, about a pound of marijuana, Polaroid photographs of large marijuana plants and steel flechettes that investigators say are often used in explosive munitions and improvised explosive devices. They also found a U.S. Army manual for improvised explosive munitions.

Additionally, in the residence was a hand-written note tacked to the refrigerator allegedly signed by Fitzgerald. Court documents say it read, “I am done selling dope, I’m not getting any more, and I’m done selling rocks to crack whores.” It was dated June 9, 2023. Investigators believe it was meant to be seen by the woman who helped him obtain the two handguns.

The following day, at 7:15 p.m., on July 26, dispatchers in Crittenden County received a 911 call from a man who alleged that Fitzgerald had called him, threatening to come to his home and kill him and the woman.

Soon afterwards, Fitzgerald was seen driving a motorcycle in the southern part of Crittenden County. He was described as wearing all black and having a backpack with him. Also, there was a small, dark-haired female on the motorcycle who a witness said appeared to be struggling to get off of the bike.

Authorities located Fitzgerald and the woman on the motorcycle near the intersection of KY 855 North and KY 70 in Frances. Police attempted to make a traffic stop, but Fitzgerald sped away. He crashed nearby and fled on foot, leaving the woman behind. The affidavit said the suspect stripped off all of his clothing down to his underwear and ran away, eluding officers in a foot chase despite being twice Tased during the encounter.

The woman, Agent Worthen wrote in the report, “was screaming for help while Fitzgerald fled.” The backpack and clothing were secured by officers. It was later searched and allegedly contained about nine pounds of methamphetamine, scales, plastic baggies, a firearm magazine containing 9mm rounds, two cellular phones and $1,400 cash.

The woman was taken to the sheriff’s department where medical personnel were available to examine her condition. However, she refused treatment despite having what was described as multiple bruises, scratches and contusions to her arms and legs. She was wearing shorts and a T-shirt and officers were able to visually identify her injuries, the affidavit said. She also had a busted lip.

Police believe Fitzgerald had beaten her multiple times with an instrument made from a cellphone wrapped inside of a T-shirt. At some point during the alleged assault, Fitzgerald is suspected of dropping a 9mm pistol he was carrying. Investigators later went to the location of the alleged assault, a home near Frances, and found the loaded weapon in the yard

Ask, seek and knock Generous living helps others and blesses you

Just over 35 years ago a band of Christians (which is very different than a Christian band), released an album that presented us with what I believe is a modern mid-rash of Ecclesiastes. The band is U2, the album “The Joshua Tree” and the song, which lyrics follow an ever increasing wall of sound:

I have climbed highest mountains
I have run through the fields

Only to be with you
Only to be with you
I have run
I have crawled
I have scaled these city walls

These city walls
Only to be with you
But I still haven't found what I'm looking for
But I still haven't found what I'm looking for
I have kissed honey lips
Felt the healing in her fingertips
It burned like fire
This burning desire
I have spoke with the tongue of angels
I have held the hand of a devil

It was warm in the night
I was cold as a stone (mm, mm)

But I still haven't found what I'm looking for
But I still haven't found what I'm looking for

I believe in the kingdom come

Then all the colors will bleed into one
Bleed into one
But, yes, I'm still running

You broke the bonds
And you loosed the chains

Carried the cross
Of my shame
Of my shame
You know I believe it
But I still haven't found what I'm looking for

But I still haven't found what I'm looking for.

I believe that the searching in Ecclesiastes that expresses doubt while never giving up on faith in God is a description of the absurdity (“vanity”) of life that we sometimes experience. Ecclesiastes famously finishes with the encouragements to, “Remember your Creator in the days of your youth, before the evil days come,” and “The end of the matter; all has been heard. Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man.”

There is something about us that is constantly seeking meaning and relevance. It causes us to behave in ways that draw us away from our goal. This is one of the problems of “the preacher” in Ecclesiastes. He finally landed in a good place – God intends for us to enjoy the work that we have been given so stop straining so much and settle into his commandments.

Augustine confirms this thinking in the introduction to his Confessions, “You awake us to delight in Your praise; for Thou made us for Yourself, and our heart is restless, until it rests in You.”

There is a reason that Jesus said in the Sermon on the Mount, “Ask, and it will be given you; seek, and you will find; knock, and it will be opened to you. For every one who asks receives, and he who seeks finds, and to him who knocks it will be opened.” (Mt. 7:7-8, RSV).

It is not always an easy task to make sense of the world we live in. We continue to search for meaning even after we have been given instruction in our value to God and to the world. We continue to strain because we know that things are just not right. What we are looking for is not found in the places that bring us temporary reprieve or a quick shot of adrenaline.

Endless activity for its own sake will not land us in a place of rest or satisfaction. Activity for the sake of others, however, can lead us into surprising places. Good work done to lift another person will get us closer to finding what we are looking for. Some think that religion alone will get us closer to meaning and understanding. But religion with the attending application in life is utterly useless. I am not saying religion is useless – I don't believe that. Religion without putting it into practice will leave us worse off than before.

There are good reasons for us to have seasons of doubt. There are good reasons to feel exasperated at the actions of others and the state of the world. This is even more reason to ask, seek, and knock. This is why action rather than musing is the cure for doubt. We may never find all that we are looking for but we can certainly be one who makes it more possible for others to do so.

Question: God has blessed me with much. However when I don't get the things I want, I complain and become bitter. How can I become more contented?

Answer: God is incredibly generous, and He provides all we need and more. When we wish for things we don't have, we can be drawn toward becoming materialistic. To battle a selfish, materialist attitude, I suggest three actions:

1. Ask God to give you a new heart. A person can have a spiritual heart transplant by receiving Christ as one's personal Savior and Lord. “If anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation; the old has gone, and the new has come” (2 Cor. 5:17). With a heart filled with love, it's only natural to think of the needs of others.

2. Choose to focus on the good things God has given to you instead of complaining about the things you don't have. Regularly give thanks to God for the good things God has blessed you with. In America, we're blessed with much.

3. Battle materialism through generosity. Out of the good things God has blessed you with, share with others. Being generous to others reflects God's goodness and it allows Him to work through you to meet the needs of others.

- The end of your search for a friendly church -

County court days of old were exciting times

From the archives of The Crittenden Press let's re-visit some of the activities of our town in yesteryear. County Court Day was a special day everyone looked forward to and Marion was full of people from daylight to dark.

Feb. 17, 1910 - Fine Stock Surrounded the Court Square

The day dawned bright and clear and with the exception of a strong wind from the South, the day was all anyone could wish for County Court Day.

From sun up until noon the people seemed to pour into town from every quarter.

The North- and South-bound train brought quite a number from Henderson, Morganfield, Sturgis, Blackford, Crayne, Fredonia and Princeton.

Judge Blackburn convened the county court and in a short time disposed of the regular business docket, which was very light.

Much fine stock was exhibited on the street all around the Court Square, which made it look like a county fair.

Just across from the Court House, a doctor selling headache medicine was alternately entertaining a large crowd selling his medicine. He had the crowd and sold the medicine.

Feb. 18, 1921 - Around the Courthouse

Monday was a fine day. The weatherman seemed to have made the day to order, the heavens were cloudless, the air balmy and old sol seemed to be in his best suit.

For some weeks past, the weather conditions had been soggy. Early in the morning the people began to come into town from every direction on horseback, in buggies, two and four horse wagons, afoot and by train until the town was full of men, women and children. It was the largest crowd of men in the city for some time.

Early in the day, jockey lot began to be crowded with men with their animals for trade or sale. It is reported that there were 500 men there with one or more head of stock. There were few sales made but many animals changed hands.

Mr. John Speece did a land office business with his lunch counter, which was located on jockey lot.

The pavements around the public square were jammed almost all day until one had to wit and move as the crowd moved or else go out in the street to get by.

The stores were practically all crowded with purchasers from a penny's worth up. The public square was filled up and the religious troupe was there with banjos, songs and taking a collection. Also the blind man with his harp was on hand with the tin cup kept prominent.

Everybody wore a smile and looked hopeful, no sort of disturbance was reported. Many prospective candidates were in the throng feeling their way so they might decide as to the advisability of throwing their hats into the ring. They sure were some broad smiles as they shook the hands of the people.

Most all the business houses, music store, hardware, drug stores, groceries and dry goods and especially the eating places report good sales. Mr. Cox said it was the best day he ever had. Guy Givens, the restaurant man, was just so swamped that he had not recovered sufficiently to know what to say only he just could not take care of his trade.

Mr. Alvis Stephens said it was the biggest sale day they had for quite a while.

Mr. George Orme reported the biggest trade in a long time.

Bob Haynes said his trade reminded him of the good old days.

The M. H. Cannan Company reported an unusually good day.

The banks reported a mighty busy day.

Taylor and Taylor reported good sales.

D. O. Carnahan said he did not sell as much as he wanted to but sold more than he expected.

The new firm of Moore and Daughtrey report a good business day.

April 14, 1922 - County Court Day

Despite the threatening aspect of the clouds and in face of the weatherman's predictions of rain, an unusually large crowd attended County Court Monday.

They came from the four corners of the county from even across Tradewater and the Caldwell and Livingston county lines. They came in from everywhere and from all directions, on the trains, in automobiles, in buggies and wagons, on horseback and afoot. They got here somehow and filled the streets full.

Everybody was in a good humor and was glad to see everybody else. No disturbances occurred and no arrests were made during the day. The policeman had nothing to do but shake hands with his friends.

The horse traders were here and showed off their trading stock to the best possible advantage. The razor strap salesman and the blind man's organ vied with each other as to which could make the most noise and attract the biggest crowd.

It was Implement Day with the firm of T. H. Cochran and Co. and they displayed and demonstrated and sold many of their implements.

The ladies of the Women's School Improvement Club gave a dinner on County Court Day was a good day to sit with friends on the courthouse lawn and discuss the problems of the world and enjoy the day.

the courthouse yard, which was liberally patronized.

Along toward night the crowd adjourned to meet again at the May term of County Court.

August 14, 1925 - Large Crowd In Town Monday

Monday was County Court Day for Crittenden County. The day owed its importance not only to the fact that it was then that some of the business of the county was attended to and that accused law breakers were called before the bar of justice to give account of their alleged misdemeanors and were judged innocent or have their sentence pronounced upon them, but a day of social gathering for the people.

Last Monday as is usual with County Court Days was greatly enjoyed in a social way by the people of the rural communities, when great numbers of them gathered at the county seat and enjoyed meetings with their friends and kinsfolk from other communities.

Many people from other parts of the county thronged the leading stores all throughout town to do the week's or month's shopping.

Various kinds of produce, fruit of Crittenden county soil, were and cantaloupes were in town, the drivers vending their wares from the street corners or from door to door.

And of course the time honored custom of "horse and mule swapping" had its place, while not such an important one perhaps as it was in the days before automobiles, trucks and motor-driven farm machinery came in for such a large degree of popularity.

Court itself was in session only a few hours, and nothing important came up from notice, only the routine of business was followed.

County Court Days were an exciting time in our history. The old town of Marion misses those busy days of yesteryear.

She's been able to move through various departments at the hospital and really likes the laboratory work.

"Being able to go to different areas is helping me decide what I want to study in college," she said.

The program is just another cooperative partnership between the school district and employers. These active learning options are eye-opening experiences for a students and they are quick to point out benefits.

"I am just loving it," said Ava Henry. "When I get up in the morning, it's the first thing I think about. All day at school, I'm thinking about when I can go to work."

Henry wants to be a dentist and while she's getting no practical experience with teeth at the hospital, just absorbing the healthcare profession is solidifying her passion and purpose.

"I really like what I am experiencing here," she says with a big smile.

The students are working three hours each afternoon. They leave school a bit early to get to

Students at Crittenden County High School interested in careers in healthcare are also involved in another project, partnering with Crittenden Community Hospital to create a blueprint for a highly-efficient emergency department. Students, some of the same involved in the after-school co-op at Livingston Hospital, have been touring the Marion healthcare facility to get ideas about how they would build their own emergency department.

their jobs where they earn a paycheck, making just over minimum wage as Patient Care Technicians (PCT). Each of the students is enrolled in teacher Casey Evans' bio-med class at the high school. Oftentimes, they pick up a few additional hours on the weekend.

Their first week on the job was filled with orientation and instruction. The students learned how to care for patients from bathing and walking them to transporting them from location to location safely. There was more technical training, too, like how to obtain vital signs, perform an echocardiogram and draw blood. From simple everyday care procedures to more complicated yet basic diagnostic testing, their hands are on it.

Adrianna Buckley has found that physical therapy might be her gig and Avery Johnson is leaning toward the emergency room now that she's been on the floor. Her sister, Taylor Crabtree, is one of the hospital professionals who've helped guide the program through its early days.

"We built this program from the ground up," said Jessica Head, who along with Livingston Hospital's Chief Nursing Officer Tessa Evans and Jessica Head authored the program after the hospital was approached by school personnel about forming a partnership.

Head has enjoyed developing the framework for the project. She's been a perfect fit because Head wears many hats within the hospital, one of them is being responsible for staff education.

Once the students complete their co-op and finish high school they can sit for a test to become a certified PCT, which is an entry level role sometimes referred to as CNA or certified nursing assistant.

Crittenden County residents seeking to personalize their vehicle with a custom Kentucky license plate will get a better view of the options when the Crittenden County Clerk and other local government offices move to their new location in Industrial Park South inside the remodeled and expanded Crittenden County Office Complex, the former Marion Ed-Tech Center. The new offices open Monday, Oct. 9 and the license display will be in the clerk's office.

living on the family farm just north of Marion. Brantley still owns a few acres of Crittenden County real estate and says the book by no means is based on actual people although its setting is closely based on his home community.

The Waxman tells a tale of a disillusioned Chicago police officer who returns to his roots in western Kentucky seeking solace after a tragedy. That's Deke

Campbell, the main character who tries to build another life as a laidback county sheriff's deputy. Problems arise, however, when a boyhood rival renews hostilities just as Deke Campbell finds romance in the courthouse where the sheriff's office is on the second floor much like it has been for decades inside the real Crittenden County Courthouse. A tumultuous summer is made mysterious by the Waxman, a local hermit suffering from Werner syndrome who lives out his faith despite rejection from locals. The suspense thriller navigates unexpected twists and intense scenes until the story crescendos into a surprise conclusion.

"I haven't had anybody say they expected it to end like it does," Brantley said. "I have had a lot of good comments so far from people who've read it. They tell me that I have a real page-turner with this one."

The book is available on Amazon and other online book stores.
